

Bashar: 'Stay calm, be confident, be curious, be creative. This is how to face every challenge that you laid out on your life path. You put them there for a reason.'

Bashar: 'All right, I'll say good day to you this day of your time. This transmission is called 'The Art of the Challenge'. And what this basically means is the art of facing challenges in your life in a way that allows you to get a benefit from them. So that you can practice staying in a positive state. So that every challenge that comes up in your life can add to your understanding of how you are creating your reality. So that you get the effect and the understanding and the experience of transforming challenge after challenge after challenge in positive, constructive and creative ways.

So, the art of the challenge is in facing challenges in four particular ways. We call this the four C's. First and foremost, it is important and imperative when a challenge comes up in your life to remain calm. Do not panic. No matter how big the challenge may seem, no matter how unexpected the challenge may seem, remain calm. Stay in that positive or at the very least neutral state that will allow you the opportunity to apply the remaining C's to the challenge. Calmness is first and foremost. Remaining calm allows you to know that no matter what the challenge is, you will be able to get a benefit from it.

Approaching it that way will allow you to take advantage of the remaining C's that we will now deliver. After you approach a challenge with calmness, just observe it neutrally. No negative emotional reactions to it. If they come up, examine your definitions. Examine your beliefs and find out why you would be reacting negatively to the challenge. Allow yourself to understand that it's not necessary to react negatively to it, but to remain neutral, to remain calm, not assuming that there's built-in meaning to it. Just let it be what it is. Just look at it as a neutral prop, a neutral circumstance, a set of opportunities for you to use to learn lessons in life to expand your soul and to allow yourself to learn how to approach creating your life in a positive way, in a more conscious way, a more conscious approach, more awareness within you. So remain calm when any challenge arises in your life.

Next, based on that calmness, based on your ability to monitor your reactions and investigate yourself - should you react negatively and to let go of the belief systems that allowed you to react negatively - after having done that process, approach now from calmness to confidence. This is the second 'C'. Approach the challenge with the confidence, the assurance that you understand the principle that every situation is an opportunity, that everything can serve double duty, negative or positive.

And therefore, this will allow you to let the challenge remain neutral so that you do not give it automatic meaning. The idea therefore is to approach it with the confidence that you will be capable by remaining calm of extracting a benefit, extracting a lesson that will help your soul grow, that will help you move forward in life. So remaining confident that you can utilize the challenge in this way to your advantage will allow you to transform this challenge and include everything that's important in your life. Be it the idea of opportunities, be it the idea of friends and family, allow yourself to know that you can be confident that as you move forward, anything that is truly representative of your passion will be included in facing this challenge and give you the opportunity to create an outcome that will benefit you and everything that's important to you.

So after approaching it with calmness, after approaching it with confidence, the third 'C' is approach the challenge with curiosity. Be like the child that looks at everything with curiosity as if seeing it for the first time and looking at it as if it is a present hiding some treasure, some amazing benefit you have yet to discover. Ask yourself the question when the challenge arises, after you are calm and confident: what lesson am I going to learn from this challenge? What opportunity does it present to me to expand my life in positive and creative ways? What is it going to bring to me as a surprise? What gift does it have for me that I am now going to unwrap and be delighted by?

Approach it with curiosity to find out what is it in this challenge that you have laid out on your life path that is going to bring you a new understanding, a more expanded awareness, more expanded capability to move forward in your life in a creative, joyful, loving way where you will receive a benefit from it that will expand your soul. Which after all is the reason that you chose to have a physical reality experience. So treat it, every challenge that arises, even if it arises absolutely unexpectedly and perhaps especially if it arises unexpectedly as a present, as a surprise that contains a treasure for you: information, knowledge, abilities, opportunities that you will find that will allow you to move forward in a creative and imaginative way and a beneficial way in your life, not only for you, but all of those around you that are important in your life as well.

After you have approached the challenge with calmness, with confidence, with curiosity, the fourth 'C' is creativity. Now is the time for you to really allow your imagination the opportunity to look at, to examine what the challenge is, to really look at all the components of the challenge in the most creative way you possibly can. Many times opportunities will present themselves not necessarily immediately with an answer or an immediate understanding, but with the opportunity to use your imagination and use your creativity to create the path that works for you, if one doesn't already exist. If synchronicity doesn't bring you something that already exists in your society that is a path that would work for you in facing this challenge, then here with your creativity, the fourth 'C' is your opportunity to use that imagination to create a path by allowing yourself to remain calm, remain confident, remain curious and use that creative inspirational imagination that will open up within you.

If you do the first three C's, then synchronicity and your guides, your angelic team, your soul family will be far more capable of bringing you information that will outline through inspiration, through dreams, through imagination one way or another, a path that may not exist in your society yet, but will be a path that is unique to you, that will allow you to face the challenge in a way that works for you specifically. Because every single challenge, no matter what it is, there is always a way that works for you to work through the process, to work through the challenge to get the benefit from it.

You never have to do it in a way that works for someone else. If something similar to the way someone else faces their challenges works for you, that is fine. You can be inspired by them to do something similar. But you're always going to change it in some way, shape or form a little bit or a lot, because you are different, you are unique. And there will always be some adjustment that will be made to make the way in which you are facing the challenge, the way in which you are processing the challenge, the way in which you are getting benefit out of the challenge unique to you, your way of doing it.

There is always a path for you that is specific to you. But you have to allow yourself to remain calm, confident and curious and approach every challenge with creativity and imagination and inspiration and examine it. Really look at it - why it's there, why you needed this on your life path, what are you going to get out of it, what are you going to learn, what's the lesson here, what's the benefit that you can extract from this challenge? Look at it from all different angles. Look at it from different perspectives. Use your imagination. What if it could be like this? What if it could be like that? What is it putting you in touch with that you hadn't thought of before? What ideas are popping up in your mind that you had not conceived of before?

By using these four C's of calm, confidence, curiosity, and creativity, you allow yourself to be in a state that allows your guides, your soul family, your angelic team to be more capable of reaching you through synchronicity, through messages, through dreams to give you the information and understanding that you need to continue to face the challenge in your life in a positive, beneficial way to extract an advantage from it.

If you have to write down in a journal all the ideas of what the challenge is, all the ways in which you can describe and define it, all the ways in which you could approach it, do so. In keeping a journal, you can keep track of all the challenges that come up in your life and all of the ways in which you have transformed them and gotten the lesson from them and turned them into some advantage in your life that moved you forward. And this can create what you call a track record for you. So that will help you build your confidence, help you remain calm, help you explore your creativity with curiosity.

So writing it down, seeing it with your own eyes, seeing the progress you are making through your life in facing all the challenges that come up can be a very beneficial tool for you. So take advantage of all the ways in which you can keep track of and remember how you transformed every challenge in your life into something beneficial and a lesson that will expand your soul and allow you to move forward and express your passion in life, following the formula in the best possible way that works uniquely for the unique individual that you are. The unique reflection of All-that-is that you are.

So stay calm, be confident, be curious, be creative. This is how to face every challenge that you laid out on your life path. You put them there for a reason. And the reason is they will help you grow. They will help you understand how to become more aware, more conscious of the fact that you are creating your physical reality experience, that it is a projection of your consciousness for your own purposes and that it helps you with the understanding more deeply that life does not happen to you. It happens through you. Because you set up this path. You laid out the blueprint.

So face it with the four C's and you will find that every challenge that comes up will be an adventure and you will not be able to wait for the next adventure to rise to face it with the four C's and to extract the benefits from it. That will help you move forward in an accelerated way and expand the scope of how many expressions of your passion you will be capable of undertaking in your life and who will be impacted by the gifts you have to share.

We thank you for allowing us to share with you this day this approach to facing challenges. For this is an art. Master the art of facing challenges in your life.' (The Art of the Challenge, 2025)

Gravity

Q.: 'Can you elaborate more on what gravity is?

Bashar: 'Can you imagine this analogy - for this will be an analogy - but it will help explain the idea more clearly: you understand what a Fibonacci spiral is?

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'All right, So can you picture one spiral going out and expanding this way (rotating hand movement to the left) at the same time can you picture another such spiral starting at the same central point spiraling out in the opposite direction and expanding this way (rotating hand movement to the right) can you picture that double spiral overlapping each other?

Q.: 'I believe you mentioned it in 'The Game of Chess' with the Holotope, yes.'

Bashar: 'All right, so you can picture that? Obviously, as it expands outward there will be crossing points where the lines will cross each other. Now, understand what I'm describing is extremely simplistic because I'm describing a very two-dimensional, very sparsely diagrammed version of this. But in reality you're looking at something that would go multi-dimensionally, you understand? But for now to keep it simple, just look at it as a flat diagram of two opposite intersecting spirals, yes?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'So where they cross and cross and cross and cross and cross can be representative of what you would call subatomic particles. You follow me?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'So, it's energy going out and where they cross and reinforce each other there's enough energy there to create a subatomic particle, even if it's just a virtual one. So the idea that between this crossing and this crossing and this crossing the subatomic particles that are created at those crossings then have a proportional relation to one another. They are fixed as if they are caught in a net. Makes sense? Do you have the picture? One intersection one particle. The next intersection out here another particle. The next intersection out here another particle. So they are fixed at those crossing points in that so-called net of the double spiral. Are you following?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'All right. So the fact that they are fixed in proportion, in relation to one another at those distances is gravity. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'It may seem like one is attracting another, but the idea is that it's simply fixed in the net in that particular location because that's where the crossing is that creates the subatomic particle in its relation to the next crossing and the next and the next and the next and the next. This is on a very, very, very fine grained level of course. Very diminutive, very small crossings so that you perceive it as a multitude of subatomic particles that occupy a very small space, but that spiral is also very small. It expands and gets bigger and bigger and bigger and the number of crossings become more and more and more and more and more but this also explains why your scientists have discovered that farther out things are actually accelerating.

Even though gravity exists and is in a sense holding everything together, they found out that your universe is also expanding at an accelerated rate. And the reason for this again is because of that spiral structure. So if you imagine that spiral structure again, the crossings become farther and farther and farther apart, because the spiral is expanding in a different way. But the idea is that space-time moves at infinite speed - not the speed of light. Space-time itself moves at infinite speed. There is no speed limit to space-time itself.

The speed of light happens within space-time and that is a border, that's a barrier. But space-time itself has no speed limit. But because the structure of space-time in these spirals because the crossings get farther and farther and farther and farther and farther apart and yet, because of its ability to travel at infinite speed space-time will cross those distances in the same amount of time, you understand? Because it won't matter that this is - let's just use this analogy - it won't matter that this is, that these two particles are a mile apart, then two miles, then three miles and 100 miles, and 10,000 miles, then a million miles, it won't matter because space-time moves at infinite speed.

Therefore, it can hit all those particles at once, you follow me so far? And because it's hitting particles that are farther and farther and farther apart at the same time you in your reality translate that idea as acceleration. Because you are crossing greater distances in the same amount of time - that's called acceleration. So that explains the idea of the acceleration and also explains the idea of the relationship of particles with respect to gravity.' (The Artifacts, 2015)

Q.: 'Could you please explain the concept of gravity? Could we simply replace the word gravity with the word density?'

Bashar: 'Yes and no. You have to understand that there are certain vibrational patterns to things. It's all about resonance, it's all about frequency. Without getting too complex: if you imagine in your mind's eye right now the idea of a Fibonacci spiral. Do you all understand what that is? If there are those that don't it's all right to say 'no'. All right, it's a spiral that represents certain ratios and proportions that are found in nature.

And therefore, when you observe things like a snail shell, a nautilus shell, sunflower seed patterns, you are watching a Fibonacci spiral. It accelerates and broadens out and expands in a certain way very specifically according to mathematical rules. If you imagine this Fibonacci spiral and then imagine an opposite spiral going the other way, you see that here and there the two spirals obviously will cross each other at certain points.

Can you all picture something like that? All right. Now this is a very simple two-dimensional explanation of a higher dimensional structure. So we're not going to make it too complicated but understand that the true structure is multi-dimensional. But for now the principle can be explained two-dimensionally. So when you have these two spirals of energy crossing at certain points, the crossing - these nodal points - represent a densification of energy.

They're reinforcing one another vibrationally every time they cross. The amount of crossings that occur represent the different densification levels that can create energy into matter. And when you get enough of this densification then the mathematical relationship between all of the ones that are equally densified will allow them to appear to attract to each other, creating the effect that you call gravity because they all resonate at the same density frequency. Does that make sense to you in your language, relatively speaking? All right. Well that's the simplest explanation we can give for now without getting too complicated.' (Emersion Conference, 2025)

Technology Transfer and Reverse Engineering: Converting Radioactivity into Electricity, Stealth, the Ark of the Covenant

Q.: 'So outside of information from channels what other ways are extraterrestrials supporting us during this time? Are you leaving behind technology for us to reverse engineer or how are things being supported?'

Bashar: 'Yes, that's one way and again, many extraterrestrials are secretly working with different scientists and your government officials to create certain things that are being introduced into your societies that you think have come from somewhere else - like your own institutions - but they have haven't. They have been guided by extraterrestrials to then be delivered through those institutions but they have come from extraterrestrial sources. For example, you're about to make a breakthrough in battery technology in a number of ways. One of the ways that you have been guided by extraterrestrial consciousness is to create now what are referred to as diamond batteries. Diamond batteries are a way to re-use nuclear waste and compress them into diamond forms that are internally radioactive but the radiation inside the diamond form is converted by the artificial diamond into electricity. The lifespan of batteries that are diamond batteries would be on the order of about 5,000 years. So that technology is now emerging slowly into your society. You'll start hearing about it more and more, especially over the next 10 years.'

Q.: 'Are you able to give us an example of technology that's already here, that you supported in seeding?'

Bashar: 'Some of your aerial technology in terms of your stealth craft has used reverse engineering from some of our craft. Some of your understanding of cloaking vibrations to avoid radar has come from some understanding of reverse engineering from our craft. There have been some things that were on your planet that were not necessarily used for the benefit of humanity. Those technologies were removed from your planet until such time as you mature enough to use them in a more positive way. One example of that was the Ark of the Covenant. The Ark of the Covenant is no longer on your planet. It was given to you at a time when it would have helped humanity understand certain principles much earlier on in your history. And it was in that sense a generator of energy, it was a communication device, it could be used in many different ways. It was misused for warfare and so was removed.' (Emersion Conference, 2025)

How much is predetermined and how much is my choice or free will?

Bashar: 'You create with your free will in spirit a kind of predetermined path for yourself as a physical being. We have often used the analogy of creating a specific kind of hallway or path that you have predetermined you will walk down. So that becomes a kind of destiny or predetermined choice but it's still the result of a free will choice you made as a spirit.

But as a physical being even though it may be predetermined that you are this personality - that's part of the path, that's part of the hallway: this persona. But you have a great degree of free will and freedom to choose how you will experience and explore that path. Now you may as a spirit set up certain kinds of events for yourself to experience that may come around in a certain order of timing, a certain schedule of timing, and you can say, well that's predetermined but again the result of a free will choice as a spirit.

But again, it's up to your free will as a physical being to experience how you will receive that, how you will go through those particular predetermined moments, how you will respond or react to them, how you will use them to your advantage or not. You still have a lot of free will, even though you may have a predetermined path that you chose from the spirit level. It depends on the individual. It depends on what you've chosen.

So it can vary greatly from individual to individual. Some may allow themselves much more freedom as the physical being, some may limit themselves as the physical being to explore the things they chose they wanted to explore as a spirit. So it depends on the person, it depends on the theme of exploration.' (The Door 2023)

Physical reality as an illusion

Bashar: 'Many people on your planet make the mistake of thinking that when we talk about physical reality being an illusion that in some way, shape or form that means that it doesn't carry meaning or importance. That's not the case. The experience of physical reality is not an illusion. The experience is real. What we are saying by illusion is that it is a projection of your consciousness. It's not a place unto itself, separate from the idea of spirit. It's happening within your soul, within your spirit. So the experience that you are creating within your soul is absolutely real. Its effects are absolutely real. We simply mean that it is not a place separate from and independent of the idea of your existence as a spirit.' (Explorations with Bashar, 2025)

Armageddon

Q: 'I want to ask about the legends or prophecies of Armageddon and apocalypse. I personally see this happening but not as it was earlier defined.'

Bashar: 'You're in it right now. You're in it right now. It's not going to be experienced in the way that it has been dramatically portrayed. But you're in that time of choosing now. That's what this is all about. You're in what we call the splitting prism. You are splitting into different realities based on your choices, based on your vibrational reality. So the idea is you're in the apocalypse now. This is the end times and the beginning times. That's what the apocalypse is. It's a matter of choice. Freedom to choose and the consequence of the choices that you make is what you will experience. So, choose wisely. You are in that time now. It's not something coming. You're in it.'

Q.: 'And it's not necessarily doomsday. It could be the beginning of the best ever, based on our choices)

Bashar: 'Exactly.' (From Fear to Flow, 2025)

Negative versions of Earth and ETs

Q.: 'If we were to go down a very negative path, would that affect the extraterrestrials in any way?'

Bashar: 'No. Because we simply would stop dealing with you. We would say they need to sit this out in their corner. They're not ready yet. And we would go on our merry way and interact with the versions of Earth that are open and accepting. We're not forcing ourselves on anyone. You have to decide that this is what you prefer. So the momentum in terms of what we are interacting with at this point is most probably moving in the direction of open contact to a high degree of probability and that's why we are able to say 2027 in what you consider your reality to be. That doesn't mean that everyone on your planet will come with us. Does that answer your question?'

Q.: 'It does. Thank you so much.'

Bashar: 'You are so welcome.' (Dominoes Day 1, 2025)

Friends choosing different timelines

Bashar: 'Then their friends choose different timelines. Again, remember you're all going to meet up in spirit again anyway. And perhaps you'll all have a good laugh about the fact of the timelines that you chose. The idea again is to start looking at yourselves as powerful beings that have a purpose in experiencing what it is you're experiencing. You can't see people as weak in terms of their inability to understand certain things.

You have to understand there may be a purpose in what they are choosing, as negative as it might seem to you. Even though negativity can seem very disruptive, sometimes a disruptive person doing negative things is what it takes to make everyone else wake up and say, "All right, we are seeing the consequence of what they're doing. They're providing a service to make us aware of the fact that this is not what we prefer and that therefore when they are done with all that we will make sure that never happens again, and therefore humanity advances because they've learned a lesson from someone who was willing to play the part of the so-called villain.

Now, look at it as a play on a stage where you might have an actor playing the hero and you might have an actor playing the villain and the characters are at odds with each other. But when the play is over, they go out and have a beer together because they're actually friends behind the scenes and that's what happens in spirit. So, you have to see everyone as playing a role.

Now, yes, you're right. Some people may not choose to understand how all things work. They may have forgotten who they are and their connection to spirit so greatly that they don't have the toolkit necessary to get themselves out of it. But that's the way they're going to face the challenge. Again, in their life review in spirit they will understand what choices they could have made, how it might have been more positive than negative and they will learn the lesson and then they will decide to move on to something else taking that lesson with them. So nothing is wasted.

And the idea is again you are eternal and infinite and there is always, always another chance forever and ever and ever, always another chance. That's just the way things are structured because you have to remember All-that-is is unconditionally supportive. It might be wise for many people to actually go to your dictionary and look up the meaning of the word unconditional.' (From Fear to Flow, 2025)

How do we know that we have shifted to a preferred reality?

Q.: 'You have shared with us the idea that you don't change the world you are on. You make the shift within yourself to create the change. You also shared that the way we influence or choose which parallel reality we experience is through our actions and our intentions. To me this seems like a paradox.'

Bashar: 'How so?

Q.: 'If I wanted to manifest an earth with less pollution as an example, what would be the greatest way to go about attracting that reality? I know I cannot clean everything up as one single body individual. And I do believe small actions like picking up trash in nature as an example can be used as a permission slip to help shift me to a cleaner version of that earth. So I suppose the question is: how can we tell if we have shifted realities?'

Bashar: 'All right. Well, let me ask you this question: have you not recognized over the course of what you may call years that there are more and more and more people on your planet that are concerned with the idea of pollution and how to clean it up?'

Q.: 'Absolutely.'

Bashar: 'Then that is an indication that you're shifting more and more and more to different versions of Earth that contain more and more people who think that way. So, it's the amount of change you see over time in a certain direction that tells you you're shifting in that direction. Does that make sense? You're taking a measurement of the difference between point A and point B. And that tells you exactly where you're shifting to by seeing more representations on this version of Earth than you did before of what it is that's vibrationally compatible with what you prefer.'

Q.: 'And the collective can be an indicator of that as well?'

Bashar: 'Yes, it can. At the same time, you can recognize that just because of what the timing is and the transition phase is on your planet you will also start perceiving more people who are vibrationally incompatible. Because again, it's time for everything to come out in the open and for you to be able to choose what you really prefer by seeing the opposite of what you prefer more clearly.' (The Meaning of Change, 2025)

Q.: 'When Kennedy was President and he was going to reveal that there were extraterrestrials, had we lived through that timeline what would it look like now?'

Bashar: 'Well, there are obviously parallel reality versions of Earth that did experience or are experiencing that particular kind of history now as their present. There are many different versions of outcomes relevant to that particular similar history in many different parallel realities. So to pick one is relatively arbitrary. Nevertheless, one particular parallel reality where President Kennedy revealed the existence of extraterrestrials wound up in the isolation of Earth from all Extraterrestrials. Another version wound up allowing Earth to join the Interstellar Alliance much sooner. Another version allowed there to be a change in the political... one moment...we are allowed to say: a change in the political arena to the point where those with the clandestine knowledge of the existence of extraterrestrials became the actual government instead of the government that you have which is mostly populated by individuals at this point in your history that don't really have any understanding or knowledge of the existence that the clandestine individuals and organizations do who are aware of our existence.' (The Gray Zone, 2022)

Q.: 'There must be realities in which we already have had first contact and continued beyond [The Kennedy assassination over ET disclosure]

Bashar: 'That's what you're shifting toward if you stay in the vibration that is representative of that reality because remember, you never change the world you're on. You change your vibration and you shift yourself to other versions of Earth that are already more reflective of the change you made within yourself.' (Winter Spirit, 2016)

Ascension of Earth

Bashar: 'You're not all going higher, that's the point. Some will go to a more dense negative direction. Some will go to a higher direction. Some will go in between. There are many different versions. So the idea is that that includes the Earth because you're shifting. Everything shifts. You're in a different universe literally, billions of times a second. Everything shifts. Any change is a total change.' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

The Splitting Prism

Bashar: 'The idea is to understand that any version of earth you can imagine already exists simultaneously. They all exist at the same time, because time is an illusion. So everything exists at once.'

Any version of earth you can imagine. And therefore as your consciousness navigates itself, shifts itself through all these different versions to create what you call a timeline, a lifespan, you are literally experiencing a multitude of different earths billions of times per second.

You are navigating yourself, based on your vibrational frequency, based on your intentional focus through the different earths in a manner, in a sequence that will allow you to experience continuity. Going from what you call the so-called past to the so-called future. But that's a linear way to experience the idea of process and change, and it's all up to you to decide exactly where you're navigating to or through.

But at this timing on your planet, because of the transformations you have agreed you should be experiencing, you can split now off from different people in different directions to experience different earths that eventually one will no longer experience the other's experience of earth.

You will only experience the ones that are similar enough on your wavelength so that you are all coherent and in harmony with whatever it is you have decided to experience as a version of earth, while others you may be interacting with now may go off in a different direction and experience ultimately a completely different set of earths. And the two will no longer meet. The two will no longer agree. The two will no longer experience each other. Does that make sense?' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

What are the factors that determine whether and when something vanishes from our track/reality?

Q.: 'As we get closer to open contact the splitting prism is becoming more and more obvious with many more examples of very positive and very negative energy and behavior which we can observe through glass walls. You've often described how at some point we won't be able to perceive those realities, because they'll be too incompatible with our vibration mechanically speaking; are there certain specific deciding factors that determine when something of a very different vibration effectively vanishes from somebody's reality, and if so could you name some of those factors?'

Bashar: 'One of the factors is whether or not it's still relevant for someone to perceive someone else that may be exhibiting a very different vibration. They may still contain within the overall formula of what they are energetically as a pattern indications that they still need to perceive those kinds of attributes in another person - for some reason of their own. It may be for the purpose of assisting that person, it may be for the purpose of getting a reflection from that person that they need in their own life. There can be many different factors that may allow someone to still retain the ability to perceive another, even though their vibrations may be very far apart.' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

Will first contact bring peace to the Middle East?

Bashar: 'Not immediately. No. It will not necessarily immediately being preceded to the idea of any place that is now focused on the idea of negativity or war or struggle or strife. But it will be an option. The idea therefore is that many people may react with fear. Those that wish to maintain control over their populations may actually tighten their grip to some degree out of fear. But in a sense, the dam will have broken. The knowledge of extraterrestrial existence and what it is that's being offered to humanity will be undeniable. And over time, those negative entities will start to relax their grip, realizing that if they don't do that and join the rest of humanity, in a sense, they will be left in the stone age as they watch from the sidelines while the rest of humanity evolves.’ (The Meaning of Change, 2025)

Observing timelines that are vibrationally incompatible

Bashar: ‘Now, as I said, just because you can observe something because you're still agreeing to be capable of observing timelines that are not vibrationally compatible with yours, just because you can observe it doesn't mean you're in the same reality.’

Q.: ‘That feels good. I was thinking, how did I get on this timeline?’

Bashar: ‘Because you were willing to be of assistance by acting in a way that would give others a chance to also adopt a more positive attitude so they can change their choices if they so desire, right now. That's why we're talking about how powerful is the freedom to choose. Because you're all being given an example by each other of different possibilities so you can decide what it is you prefer to choose. So just because - and we understand many humans misunderstand this - just because you can see something that is vibrationally not compatible with what you prefer doesn't mean you're in that timeline. Doesn't mean you're in that reality. It's more like there's a glass wall between you. You can see it, but they can't reach you. They can't affect you unless you choose to step on the other side of the glass wall and match their frequency. So observation has nothing to do with what reality you are in. Observation is the result of being willing to provide a living example that gives everyone to see you as another possible choice while you still have time to see all the choices before the split really goes farther.’ (From Fear to Flow, 2025)

What are timelines and how to choose the highest one?

Bashar: ‘You lay out your life path and how you decide to approach it, how you decide to experience it sets up the vibration within you that navigates you to the timeline that is most representative of the frequency that you operate on. So, it's very similar in a way to the analogy of your television programs in the sense that you know there are a multitude of television programs you could be watching all at once. They all exist at the same hour, but you only get the one that your channel is tuned to.

So likewise, in existence, there are a multitude of parallel timelines, parallel realities, alternate realities, whatever term you choose to use. It's all the same thing. They're all going on at the same time. There are an infinite number of parallel versions of Earth that all coexist right now. So when you make a change within your vibrational frequency, you don't change the earth you're on. You actually shift to another earth that's already more reflective of the change you made within yourself.

So the idea is this is why we call it the splitting prism. Or in a simpler analogy, the train tracks that leave the station and go off in different directions. What train are you on? Are you going in this direction, this direction, this direction, that direction, this direction, that direction? The longer you stay on that train, the farther the tracks are apart from each other, and the more challenging it would be to jump from one train to another.

So make up your mind while the tracks are still and the trains are still close together as to what you really prefer and get on that train because the vibrational frequency you set up within yourself is going to navigate you in the direction of the versions of Earth that are more representative of your frequency. And that's why it's so important for you to choose what you really prefer. You are shifting billions of times per second through different parallel timelines in order to create what appears to be a single timeline, but it's not.

It's composed of a variety of parallel reality choices that you're making, some of which are made by agreement with each other. So that you share some similar experiences in your timelines, but you're all experiencing your own realities and you are only by agreement seeming to experience the same reality with one another, but you're not. Even in your own reality, you know that sometimes a person will honestly experience something quite different than another person might experience in the very same event. You're beginning to recognize this.

Not that this is always the case, but in many cases you have called this the Mandela effect where someone remembers a different history than someone else and both of them are actually remembering real different histories. Now yes, sometimes the memory might be faulty. Sometimes it might be a matter of a different way of misunderstanding something. But there is such a thing as actually remembering real different histories because that's one of the side effects and one of the symptoms of your consciousness expanding to the degree where you're starting to realize that there are different realities that coexist simultaneously and that different people might be going in different directions. One going in this direction will remember one history. One going in another direction will remember another history and they're both creating different futures.

Now, for right now, because this is the time of choosing, you can all still interact with one another in some way, shape, or form and be able to see and converse about the differences that you may be experiencing. But eventually, as you shift more and more and more and those realities split farther and farther and farther apart, eventually you will only interact with people that are at least on a similar wavelength. And you will no longer interact with people that are on too different of a vibrational reality than the one that you're on. And that's when you will be on an earth, a version of earth that is exactly representative of what you prefer, positive or negative.' (From Fear to Flow, 2025)

Can people be left behind if they are not on the right train?

Bashar: 'No, it's not too late. And by asking this question and examining yourself, you have given the appearance of being on the train that will lead you in the direction of the kind of earth that you prefer to experience. The idea is that it is not impossible for someone to switch from one train to another eventually, but it may be more challenging. Because you may divest yourself of the opportunities to do so, they may become less visible to you as opportunities to switch.

But the idea is not that you are left behind. It's that you have made a choice. And you will move forward in the direction of the choices that you have made. We would not frame it that you have been left behind, because that implies that one choice is intrinsically better than another when in fact the idea of going on a different train from the train you're on may be exactly what that person has chosen for the best path for themselves to experience.

So we wouldn't frame it as being left behind. We would simply frame it as making the choice that is correct for you. Because again remember, you will all have a chance in spirit to evaluate the choices you made in your life, in your life review, and you will apply that information to the next thing you will choose to do. So it's not about being left behind. It's about simply making a choice and being on the train you have chosen.' (Step One, 2024)

Conversing or not conversing with people on the other train track

Bashar: `Again, you can do both. It's not about trying to convince anyone to change, but it's about finding things that might actually be common ground that you both can agree on and starting from there. So if you can find the things that you do agree on, then you can allow the things you don't agree about to simply go their way and allow that person to experience whatever track they're on and you to experience whatever track you're on.

But it can be of some assistance to have a conversation where you can at least both agree on certain things that you have in common, if you wish to do that. But we understand that sometimes people will simply not wish to change their minds or change the track they're on, and it's not your job to change them. You can share what seems appropriate, but if they reject it then move on. It's no use beating your head against a wall, if they're being the wall. But if you can find some way to have some connection and some common agreement, it can be of some assistance. But we will leave that up to you on a case-by-case basis.' (Facing your Demons, 2024)

How do people on the other train tracks perceive the 2026/7 events?

Q.: `You've mentioned that we will not be able to see the other train tracks somewhere around the year 2050. As there is a high probability of having a mass contact event between 2026 and 2027, how will the realities who do not experience contact perceive this event? Will they look back on this instance in a similar way we look back on the Roswell event, very much in denial?`

Bashar: `It depends on the person. There is still an opportunity in the upcoming events to have a particular perspective of it, or no perspective at all - not even knowing that it's happening. There is still the possibility of a range of reactions to it because you are still seeing other people's choices. So, for a while different people will respond or react in different ways, or not even be aware that it's happening. These things will start slowly, in phases, subtly and not everyone on your planet may even be aware that it's occurring.

But the different reactions from those that become aware of it may also exhibit a wide range from acceptance to disbelief to total non-acceptance. So again, there is still time for people to make choices about how they relate to the idea of open contact, and you will see a number of different reactions and responses to any particular UFO events or contact events for a few years to come.' (Year One, 2024)

The Splitting Prism

Bashar: `As we have said the splitting prism is still going on. There are many paths, not just two or three. But the idea is that as a general collective group those that are exploring consciousness, the expansion of consciousness, exploring the idea of the concept of open contact and interacting with us and other beings like us are in general moving along the same general path, going through the same general versions of Earth to some degree collectively, even though every individual still has their own unique reality. But you can have made agreements to go along with certain groups that are willing to shift to similar Earths over and over in the same way that still contains the idea of the expansion of consciousness and the acceptance of your part of being a galactic family.' (The Gate 2023)

President Carter and the briefing about ETs

Q.: 'When President Carter was given a briefing about the ET situation why did he become so emotional and actually even put his head on his desk and cried? What was so critical about the information that he was given that caused him to react like that?'

Bashar: 'We have given you the story of the Grays, are you familiar with this?'

Q.: 'I'm not sure, please give me a synopsis.'

Bashar: 'Do you understand that the Gray civilization, those beings that you consider to be those diminutive grey aliens are actually mutated humans from a parallel version of Earth who destroyed their version of Earth and mutated themselves in that way in order to survive, thus tunneling into other parallel realities to use viable human DNA since they could no longer reproduce to create our hybrid societies which then allowed them to perpetuate their culture. You got that much?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'All right. The information is that you were heading down the same path. Do you understand?'

Q.: 'Destroying ourselves again?'

Bashar: 'Yes, and actually going to replicate that history in your own reality and eventually become Grays yourselves if you continued down that destructive path.'

Q.: 'So, have we changed our path?'

Bashar: 'Some of you have, some of you haven't.' (The Winter Spirit, 2016)

Question about the suffering of the Israeli hostages

Q.: 'I cannot stop thinking about the Israeli hostages that were returned in coffins. The baby, nine months old and his brother, four years old were taken with their mother along with the 84 year-old peace activist. I cry for them every day and I can't stop thinking about their immense abhorrent fear and suffering. I remember you mentioned a while back that these people had a soul contract on some level to be involved, but I can't imagine how a mother and her babies would ever sign up for this. Can you please tell us about this family? How they are doing on the other side?'

Bashar: 'They're doing fine. They're doing fine. First of all, the way that you're phrasing the question is inaccurate. A mother and her babies didn't sign up for it. Empowered spirits signed up for it. And one of the reasons is, when you see that degree of suffering that makes you grieve for them, those empowered souls that still exist, that are eternal and infinite and cannot die, know that they have provided a service by allowing that to happen, by demonstrating the degree to which there is disconnection on your planet from soul to soul, from person to person, so that you will do something about it and make sure it doesn't happen again. That's the lesson. And you learn the lesson. But they're fine. They're indestructible souls. They understood that going through that experience would cause people to make changes on your planet so that it wouldn't happen again.'

Q.: 'As individuals what can we do for them?'

Bashar: 'You can't do anything for them. You don't need to do anything for them. They're doing things for you. There is nothing they need. They're in bliss. They're in the spirit world of unconditional love. So if there's anything that they would want, it's for you to do what we just said: learn the lessons that they brought to you and make sure it doesn't happen again. That's what you can do for them to honor what they went through - for you. Again, remember that babies didn't make this decision. Eternal souls made this decision They just came in the disguise of a mother and babies. So that you would have the reactions you're having. So that you would do something about it. Makes sense?'

Q.: 'Thank you.'

Bashar: 'You're welcome.'

(The Fantasy vs Reality of Contact, 2025)

Are 'better' persons better protected?

Q.: 'Do some people have more quote unquote protection because they're a better person or anything like that?'

Bashar: 'No. Everyone has the same degree of health, the same degree of protection. Now again, it may appear to vary in certain ways depending upon what the soul has chosen to experience on its life path. So certain incidents may occur that may reveal the protection that they may have, but that doesn't mean anyone else that doesn't create those incidents has any less protection. You all have the same amount of protection, of oversight, of guidance. It's simply a matter of what it is that it needs to be used for on your life path, as to whether it is revealed more blatantly or less blatantly as you live your life, as it unfolds.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

Question about the infinite number of frames

Bashar: 'Even though there are infinite frames in all the directions that you mentioned, not all of them are relevant for your particular timeline experience. So, while they all exist, you only experience a finite number of them in any given lifetime or timeline. And you only experience those who have frames that as you say, you are willing to observe, willing to interact with. You create similar frames that allow you the experience of interaction, even though you are not actually in the same frame.' (Countdown to Contact Year One, 2024)

With the splitting of earth will the population shrink, is there a mass exodus event?

Bashar: 'Not necessarily, though some of that may occur. But the idea is that the world that you will shift to will have their own populations as well, representative of souls that have chosen to be a part of that reality. Now it may not be the same level of population that you experience right now, but it doesn't mean that the population will be cut in half. Because there are many different souls that will choose to have an incarnation in those versions of earth that you will be shifting to, some of which may not be incarnated now.' (Gatherings, 2024)

The five steps of the formula

Bashar: 'There are five steps. Number one: you act on your passion, first. Making sure that something is your passion - truly with honest self-investigation. Because passion is a message from your soul, sent in an energy form that your body translates as the vibration of passion, excitement, creativity, love. So act on your passion first because that's your soul telling you this is who you truly are. This is your true frequency.

This is the next step that you need to take on your journey. And you take it as far as you can. That's step two: you act on it to the best of your ability, taking it as far as you can until you can take it no further or until the excitement naturally wanes. But making sure that you're not the one with a fear-based belief dampening the excitement when it could be something more exciting. If you would give it a more positive definition or add a different perspective to it.

Step three: you act on your passion with absolutely zero insistence, zero assumption as to what the outcome is supposed to look like. Because the best and most ideal outcome in truth is not something you actually know. You don't necessarily know whether or not the vision you have needs to be the best possible thing. It's all right to use visualization to get you into an excited state, but don't insist on the exact picture that you have formed in your mind because you don't know that that's the best possible outcome. When you allow the picture to get you excited and then you drop insistence or assumption on the picture that you visualized, you make room for your soul to bring you through synchronicity what it is that actually matches that frequency of excitement that the visualization allowed you to create.

Then the next step is: you remain in a positive state, no matter what manifests. Even if something manifests that you objectively don't prefer, that's not vibrationally compatible with what you prefer, it's still there for a reason. And if you remain in a positive state, you'll be able to extract a benefit from it. If nothing else, seeing something you don't prefer makes it much clearer, by contrast, what you do prefer, and that's a positive way to use what you don't prefer. And when you use up what is ever happening, then it can move on and something else can take its place. If you refuse to believe that this thing should have manifested, then you are denying your own creativity, you're denying your own manifestation and you are not looking at a reason that it could serve you and getting a benefit from it. So stay in a positive state.

Step five is: examine your belief systems and really let go of the fear-based ones, the negative ones that don't serve you. Because the only reason you would hold on to a fear-based or negative belief is because somewhere within your belief system, you believe that you're getting some kind of a benefit out of it. Because you don't hold on to things you do not believe benefit you in some way, shape, or form. So, you could ask yourself: if I understand this doesn't benefit me, what reason would I have created to hold on to it? And it usually means that whatever the alternative is seems scarier in your beliefs than simply staying with what is comfortable and familiar, no matter how much you may not prefer it.

So those are the five steps. You act on your passion. Act on it as fully as you can. No insistence, no assumption about the outcome. Stay in a positive state. Examine your beliefs and let go of the fear-based and negative ones. When this is applied precisely to all situations and circumstances in your life, everything falls into place. You are following the instructions about how you create your reality more consciously and you will find that your life will be more creative, more fulfilling, more fun, more loving, more connective, more supportive. That's the formula.' (From Fear to Flow, 2025)

Different Timelines and Changing Histories: Ripple Effects and the Death of President Kennedy in 1968

Q.: (1:03:00) 'I know it is believed that the presidents were aware of the existence of ETs since the time of Truman and I would like more an understanding of what the big issue is about keeping this big secret.'

Bashar: 'Well, you have to realize that at the time there was a lot of fear and a lot of paranoia and you had just come out of what you would call a World War. Therefore, it was simply deemed that the populace couldn't handle something that large at that time because they had yet to really integrate and assimilate the effects of the war into society. But a plan was made to over time release the information. Now, other people sort of got a hold of that and had a difference of opinion about whether that should be released or not and eventually they came to be the ones that would be in power and control that information. Because then it became an issue of keeping the information from others, especially the technological information, so that they would perceive that others would not have a technological advantage over others.'

Q.: 'Is it true that Eisenhower met with them and made a deal to allow ET presence for the sharing of their technology?'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'And talking about President Kennedy: now Kennedy, there was the Cold War going on and Kennedy and Russia were concerned because the radar could not distinguish the ETs from - you know - the different missiles and they didn't want to start a war accidentally.'

Bashar: 'Yes, we understand how our ships work.'

Q.: 'But we did not. We couldn't identify you and so we didn't want to think the US was...'

Bashar: '...hence U F O.'

Q.: 'Right. At any rate, he put through an order to have our information shared with the Russians in order that we would not make this accidental war. However, he was killed before the order was...'

Bashar: 'Yes, in the reality you understand now.'

Q.: 'Exactly.'

Bashar: 'But in other reality: no.'

Q.: 'What happened in the other reality where he did not die?'

Bashar: 'He revealed the information, but in that reality the information was revealed too soon and actually did cause a breakdown of your society. For which he was then killed 5 years later, because he was blamed for it.'

Q.: 'I see.'

Bashar: 'Because your people were not ready for the information. They didn't know how to integrate it because they had never been prepared properly to integrate the information of our extraterrestrial presence. Now, of course there are other parallel realities where everything went just fine.'

Q.: 'I see.'

Bashar: 'But that was the reality - just to speak linearly for a moment - that was the reality that was immediately preceding the history that you all changed to to have him die before he was capable of revealing the information, so your society would not collapse. However, there were still ripples from the reality in which he was killed later in 1968, and those ripples that entered your reality as you know it now, and your history as you know it now, was responsible for the assassination of his brother and the individual known as Martin Luther King. So you see how these things overlap.'

Q.: 'Yes, but I'm trying to get clarity. I think what I'm hearing you say is that Kennedy, his brother, and Martin Luther King were killed so that this information would not come out.'

Bashar: 'The original President, yes. Not the others.'

Q.: 'In the other realities. Oh, the original, you're just saying Kennedy?'

Bashar: 'Just JFK as you know him.'

Q.: 'Because I thought I heard you say Robert also.'

Bashar: 'The reflection from the old reality where JFK was killed in 1968 still existed as a ripple in the new reality and that ripple caused the idea of Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King to then be assassinated. It was in a sense a remnant or a residue from the old timeline. Do you understand?'

Q.: 'I think so.'

Bashar: 'Because you see, your history changes all the time. You think it's static, it's not. It's dynamic. But you only remember the history that you've recently created as if that's always been your history and have no real memory of the other history that might have actually been here 5 minutes ago, where you might have had a completely different reality but as a consensus agreed to shift that history, so now you may have a completely different history, even though history by definition will seem to have always been the history you had even though it wasn't.'

Q.: 'Okay.'

Bashar: 'These things are dynamic not static. This is what you begin to understand when you learn to perceive things multi-dimensionally.'

Q.: 'So, having said that, there must be realities in which we already have had first contact...'

Bashar: 'Absolutely.'

Q.: '...and continued beyond.'

Bashar: 'And that's what you're shifting toward. If you stay in the vibration that is representative of that reality. Because remember, you never change the world you're on. You change your vibration and you shift yourself to other versions of Earth that are already more reflective of the change you made within yourself. The world you were on still remains the same and never changes. Because you're changing billions of times a second right now, even to create the side effect you call time and space. So you're navigating through a series of versions of Earth like frames on a film strip, navigating through that timeline, but you're always moving through a different version, a different parallel version of Earth. And you navigate more and more in the direction of whatever your strongest state of being vibration is. That's what guides you. That's your rudder and it is the wind in your sail.'

Q.: 'So if I am already following my excitement to the best of my ability without expected outcomes...'

Bashar: 'Then you are navigating along a series of timelines that will ultimately allow you to experience only those versions of Earth that are more and more and more reflective of the reality you prefer, based on the state of being you prefer.'

Q.: 'So that I will eventually get into these other realities in which there is contact and life has progressed from there - with the ETs.'

Bashar: 'Yes, if you allow yourself to continue in each moment to recreate the vibration of your preference. That will be one of the things contained within it. Because that's one of the things that is contained within the definition of your excitement. As it is with ours. That's how it works.'

Q.: 'So you are helping us get there.'

Bashar: 'By giving you this information and seeing what you do with it and how much of it you absorb, you then make the change in your own frequency that brings you closer and closer and closer to the vibration of contact, yes. Not that you have to.'

Q.: 'Right.'

Bashar: 'But if you do then you are accepting the vibration of contact more and more into your being, yes. That's what this exchange is all about. This is one of the protocols of how we do first contact. We give you the option to choose, based on the information we share, as to whether you actually want to adopt that information or not - and have contact or not. It's always left up to you.' (The Winter Spirit, 2016)

[Seth] While we are familiar with events in our history such as Austerlitz and Waterloo, there is a version of Napoleon who managed to conquer Europe completely. Obviously, that version of Earth has a different history now and the repercussions of Napoleon's victories in Europe were affecting and shaping that timeline up until the present. Therefore, what we perceive to be a given historical event on our own timeline - 'Waterloo' - appears to be only a small part of a larger gestalt of activity, encompassing other branches of probability and alternative timelines with varying outcomes of any given specific event or completely different events altogether.

All probable systems exist at the same 'time'. They all exist and co-exist simultaneously, as is the case with any past, present, or future event. They all exist in the 'spacious present', they all exist 'now'. Time does not exist, the physicalized illusion of time does. It is our own neurological construction that allows us to experience a specific series of physically manifested 'now' moments in a linear fashion with a seemingly given past and with a future than can be extrapolated in a plausible way from the present.

According to Seth's cosmology we constantly change our past in the same way as we make selections from probable future events. Both, past and future are created in the 'now', even though our scientists are not yet aware of this time phenomenon. 'The past and the future ripple outward from any event' (Seth). From our point of view, past events are facts, historically fixed and as such undisputable and irrevocable, even though we have the impression that we can alter the way how we approach and judge past events 'over time' For us the past is the bedrock of our present, the cause of the effects in the 'now'. It brought us to the point where we are. Actually, this impression of a linear space-time continuum is provided by the physical structure of our nerve apparatus and the specific pattern in which data and signals are neurologically transmitted and processed.

Thus we are used and conditioned to perceive and recall a given set of events in a logical, linear order. At any moment they appear to be valid and historically fixed, but they are nevertheless continuously being created and re-created by us in the present, and they can be changed. Normally we would not recognize that. 'You change your past continually. It does not appear to change to you, for you change with it...you alter your future in the same manner'(Seth). 'The you that you presently conceive to be represents the emergence into physical experience of but one probable state of your being, who then directs corporeal life and 'frames' and defines all sense data. When your ideas about yourself change, so does your experience' (Seth).

Using Bashar's frequency after the transmissions: 'what would Bashar say?'

Bashar: 'I am simply functioning as a type of mask for communication with your own higher mind. So in a sense anytime you might remember the feeling you had, the state you were in when we had these kinds of conversations or when you were listening to them and feeling the vibrational frequency, just remembering that will put you in the same state, even if it feels different for you to be able to communicate with your own higher minds and receive the information that you need more clearly. So to put it simply, you could say as you're walking along and you have a question, ask yourself: what would Bashar say? And that will immediately put you in the proper state to receive information from your own higher mind.' (The Door, 2023)

The Metaphysics of Physics (I/II)

Bashar: (9:30) 'We would like to begin this transmission this day of your time, having titled it 'The Metaphysics of Physics'. And what we basically mean by this is that - as has been discussed many times from many different sources - the idea of physical reality is that it is a projection of consciousness. In a sense it is like a dream. It isn't really out there around you, it isn't really solid in the classical meaning of that word.

But the idea is that everything that exists in physical reality, in some way, shape, or forms begins within the consciousness as a resonance pattern, as a template, as a blueprint, if you will. And thus that blueprint, that energy pattern is in a sense crystallized within the consciousness into the format that you perceive and experience as physical reality. Now the idea then is that as we have discussed and as have many of you realized, physical reality contains different kinds of reflections, the basic ones you would generally say are the positive and the negative but then there is also the neutral which is what makes physical reality not a duality but a trinity.

There is always the middle part, always the balance point. This is energetically what allows you to create the reality you prefer, because there is always going to be a way in which you can blend and balance the positive, the negative, coming from the neutral place in order to generate whatever kind of experience that you prefer or that you chose as a theme of exploration. But how this idea of the neutral place and the positive and the negative energies that exist or are experienced within physical reality express themselves in the physical reality, is quite fascinating.

The idea of what you consider to be matter and the constiuence of matter that make up your physical reality, what you would call the subatomic particles, so on and so forth, also do express this idea of the trinity within their basic fundamental structure. First and foremost, most simply, you have as many of you know from taking certain classes in your school that an atom is generally made up of three components. You have the positively charged proton, you have the negatively charged electron and you have the neutral neutron...aptly named, don't you think?

However, what you may not realize is how apt this structure is, how expressive it is in a very specific and precise way to the idea of the energy patterns that we have already described. Many of you may not realize that a neutron, if - shall we say - left to its own devices, a free neutron, not connected within an atomic structure, actually breaks down into a proton and an electron. So the idea is that the neutral particle is neutral because it is made up of in a sense positive charges, negative charges, and it expresses these things and manifests these things as the two seemingly opposite elementary particles of the proton and the electron.

And because it contains both charges that's why it is also able to be attracted to the proton or attract a proton to it as well as the electron because the neutron, shall we say, has kind of layers to it, energetically. The - now understand of course what we are saying is somewhat euphemistic, but it's a good way to illustrate the point - the neutron being neutral because it contains both charges does this in a particular way, sort of like a layer cake. Because the proton cannot be attracted to another positively charged particle easily, the neutron must attract it if it is to attract it at all, it must have some kind of a charge with which to do so.

So the skin of the neutron, so to speak, is actually negatively charged to attract the proton. But it is also in its body positively charged to also attract the electron. So it does double duty in that way and creates and gives structure to the concept that you call 'the atom'. Now because it is able to break down into the proton and the electron and a few other things we won't go into right now that are for the purpose of this illustration somewhat superfluous, you begin to get the understanding that the neutron in a sense is a little bit bigger than both of them.

It has in your scientific terminology more mass than the proton, way more mass than the electron of course, but it contains both, so it has to in a sense be more massive than both so that when it breaks down there is a sufficient amount of mass to express the proton and the electron. So the idea of the neutral state, energetically speaking in your life, in your experience as a state of being, is similar. The idea is that the neutral state contains the potential for both, a positive and a negative experience, based on the meaning that you give to the neutral situation that is there to begin with.

Now in another transmission coming up in what you would call the near future we are going to go more deeply into the idea of exactly what we mean when we talk about fundamental neutral states. For that transmission will help you understand how to identify neutral states more clearly and thus be more capable of infusing them with a positive or negative meaning that will then result in the idea of a positive or negative experience. But for now it is sufficient to understand that this neutral state - like the neutron - contains the potential for both and it is actually exemplified in physical reality by the very fact that the neutron itself is capable of breaking down into both, physically.

Now let's look a little bit at the electron. The electron is representative of the idea of the negative energy and of course when we talk about it as an energetic state we are simply talking about the idea of that which is disconnective, dissociative, segregative, so to speak, whereas when we talk about the positive energy we are talking about things that are integrative, expansive, connective, so to speak, as a mechanism.

But also what's associated with the negative energy that we have discussed many times with many of you are the idea of negative beliefs. As we have said, beliefs systems, both positive and negative, must do something to perpetuate themselves because they are not really real. Physical reality is not really real in a sense. It's a projection, it's a dream, it's an illusion. So the belief systems are designed to perpetuate themselves in such a manner as to make it seem as if the reality that they depict, the definition of reality that they depict is actually real so that you can have an actual solid physical experience.' (As Above so Below, 2017)

`As Above so Below' – official handout:

https://d11n7da8rpqbjy.cloudfront.net/basharet/1825_1708988520344As_Above_So_Below.pdf?kuid=59cd6316-35c6-4dce-b389-f12817356740-1763197132&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

The Metaphysics of Physics (II/II)

But when it comes to the idea of positive beliefs, the positive beliefs are reflecting to you the true nature of your being, the true powerful, self-empowered, creative, loving nature of your spirit, of your being, of your essence, of your existence. The negative belief systems in a sense have to work much harder than the positive beliefs to get you to buy into a scenario that is fundamentally not true about you. Because you are basically creative, positive beings, essentially. So in order to get you to have an experience that is negative, it has to tell you things that are fundamentally lies about yourself and it has to reinforce those lies with every trick in the book that it can muster, every tool in its kit, otherwise you would see right through the smoking mirrors and know that it is just an illusion and that what the negative beliefs are telling you about yourself has to be by definition false.

So let's look now at the correlation, at the analogy in the electron. The idea of the atomic structure as you understand it in your society now is not so much the exact classical representation of a tiny little particle orbiting around a nucleus in a very clean sort of way like a planet around a sun. No, that's kind of an outdated old-fashioned way of representing it. It's good as a general illustration, but you now know, your physicists now know that the electron sort of exists more in what they term a probability cloud.

That is you're never really sure exactly where it is, it's whizzing around so fast, it's somewhere in this hazy cloud that surrounds the nucleus, somewhere in there are a bunch of electrons, but where they are we don't know until we take a measurement and freeze where it is, but then you don't really understand exactly what its path has been because you are freezing it into a static state. But when it's moving you don't really know where it is in any given moment.

So in a sense it is similar to the idea of negative beliefs in that it creates this sort of ambiguous fuzzy cloud that you can't really get a grip on, and it fools you into thinking that there are certain things going on that are really only probabilities, really only potentials and not really very solid at all until you yourself decide that you gonna take a particular idea, particular definition, which is the same thing as an observation or a measurement, scientifically speaking, and in taking that perspective and taking that measurement then you get what you designed the perspective for, you get what you designed the measurement or the experiment for. That's the result you get.

So the electron does exemplify and does represent the way in which negative beliefs work in that they are kind of fuzzy, you are not really sure what's going on, they tend to hide in your unconscious mind, so you can't make it easy to find them, so you won't let them go because again, this is their way of perpetuating themselves, telling you lies and telling you more lies and using tools like fear to prevent you from finding them so they can continue to get you to believe that what they are telling you about you is true, when it's not.

So that is a general correlation whereas the idea of the proton, being the positively charged thing, being in a sense more easily observed because it is the very nature of the element you are looking at itself, it is the very identifying energy of the elements themselves. Then it's easy for you to see that directly, it doesn't have to hide, it doesn't have to confuse you, it doesn't have to fool you, one way or the other, it is just telling you what you are, it is telling you what is. It is showing you your nature.

So when you are looking at an element, let us say for example gold, or let us say mercury, you are really looking at the protons, that's what you are looking at because it is the protons that determine what the element is. So they are easy to see. But the electrons, those sneaky little electrons, very tiny, buzzing around in their little B-cluster cloud of probabilities... 'I'm over here, no I'm not,...I'm over here, no I'm not, I'm over here, no I'm not...fooled you again', shows you a direct correlation between the idea of the way the energy states themselves exist and the way that they actually crystallize down through your consciousness into the expression you call physical materiality.

The trinary idea extends itself further because as your scientists have discovered, or as they have created for themselves to perceive, even the idea of some of the so-called sub-atomic particles like the proton have other particles within them that you have called quarks. And those quarks generally also come in threes, which again shows you the trinity aspect of the existence of that energy. Again, the duality and the neutral place in between.

This does not have to be completely absorbed at this time in this way. You don't necessarily have to have any kind of a physics degree to absorb and understand this, it is simply something for your consciousness to look at with curiosity. Let it sink in and let the idea of the energy states and the structures that they appear to create that you call physical reality all have a lot to do with each other are really just different expressions of the same thing, they are just different expressions of the state of being that is existence itself expressing itself on all levels as that trinity.

The only level on which such trinities don't exist or dualities exist is what we would call the 'One', that is the homogenous one state where there is no differentiation whatsoever, but because there is no differentiation there is also no experience, no awareness. It takes the 'All-that-is' to be aware of itself, it's the first reflection to itself that there is the appearance of 'an other' that creates that idea that starts splitting into the...well there is this, and there is that, and there is this relationship in the middle.

So really, the neutron and the neutral state that give rise to the experience of the positive and negative sides, the proton and the electron, the neutron itself and the neutral state is actually more precisely the reality that you call reality, whereas the projections that come from it are the reflective illusions based on the information you have put into it such as a positive meaning or a negative meaning, a positive definition or a negative definition.

But the neutron and the neutral state is actually what you are as an existence, as a reality and everything is contained within it and everything can be expressed from it. Does that make sense to you? All right.' (As Above so Below, 2017)

Question about the Trinity

Q.: 'You've spoken before about a trinity composed of a positive pole, a negative pole, and a central neutral pole. I'm curious, what exactly is the third point? What does it represent functionally or energetically? And can you describe or clarify how this trinitized structure would appear in a diagram or a model?’

Bashar: ‘It would be similar to what you call a Venn diagram where you have a circle that represents the positive, a circle that represents the negative, and an overlap in the middle of those two circles creating what you call the vesica pisces. The idea being that it's a balance point between the two where you choose what you prefer but from a balanced state. You don't invalidate what you don't prefer. You recognize it as an equally valid choice, but you simply choose what you prefer instead without invalidating what you don't. You always leave it open as an option to choose because it's an equal choice for a variety of reasons. It's just that you don't have to choose it. That's the neutral space from which you can come that creates the balance in your life and gives you self-empowerment. So the neutral space is all about the freedom to choose what you prefer without invalidating what you don't. It gives you the idea of self-empowerment, self-choice, self-direction, self-perpetuation. That's what the neutral state is all about.’ (The Art of the Challenge, 2025)

Using a negative mechanism to have a positive experience

Bashar: ‘It is our passion and our pleasure to interact with each and every one of you and all of you together collectively. Allow us to begin this transmission picking up on the subject that you have chosen ‘From Fear to Flow’, allowing you to choose your highest possible timeline experience of physical reality. Let us begin by reminding you that while we have talked many times in many events about the idea we share with you called the formula, which is in a sense an instruction manual for how to create a positive, constructive, creative, fulfilling life, we are going to take a step back a little bit and start from the point of view of spirit.

As a spirit - and we are going to be talking about the idea of your life in linear terms, so that it is easier to comprehend - even though we acknowledge that time in a sense is an illusion created by consciousness and that all things exist simultaneously, we are going to describe this in linear fashion, using the concept of before and after and time and space to make it more compatible to the understanding that most humans on earth have.

So in spirit before you decide to have a physical incarnation, you lay out your life path by consulting with your spirit guides, your soul family, your angelic team, many different beings, including extraterrestrials, extradimensionals, and you lay out the challenges that you wish to face so that your soul can grow and experience new discoveries about itself, by creating an effect called space and time where you forget who you are so you can remember who you are through the experience of the physical life path.

But the idea is in laying out that life path and the challenges that you agree to face on that life path, you have the capability of experiencing the free will of the physical mind as to exactly how you experience that life path. You will follow through by having those experiences because you agreed to do that from spirit. And it's almost like an unbreakable contract that you will have certain experiences to help your soul grow.

And your spirit team, your spirit guides, soul family, angelic beings, extraterrestrials, and so forth will always be there to help guide you. They will have your back from spirit. They will use whatever methodology is at their disposal and whatever methodology you are open to to send information, messages, images to you using synchronicity to allow you to be guided through life to help you out whenever you are open to receive that help and whenever it is appropriate for them to deliver it.

But the idea is that as a physical experience, you yourself as a physical mind, as a physical being, have the free will to allow you to go through that life path in whatever way, shape, or form you deem so appropriate. You can run, you can walk, you can crawl, you can be happy, you can be sad. You can go down this hallway and look in every door out of curiosity. You can ignore them all and just bead at the end. But you will go through the transformations and the challenges that you set up for yourself.

And it's up to you to decide how to go through them: in a positive way, in a negative way, a constructive way, a destructive way. It's up to you to learn the lessons to allow yourself to align with your soul, which is your higher mind, align with the guidance you are receiving from your team and flow in your life as opposed to struggle in your life. All struggle, all pain that you may experience, physical pain, emotional pain, mental pain, is resistance to the true self, the true natural vibration of your soul.

But that is part of the challenge is to find ways to make choices and to allow your belief systems that create your physical mind to learn how to choose what works best for you. to learn how to choose what is most representative of the truth of your being, of the true frequency and vibration of the being and the aspect of creation, the reflection of creation that you are. So those lessons are learned on the life path and it is up to you to take the time to understand that the process of living is the most important thing, more important than any goal you may create.

We are not saying you cannot have goals, but the idea is that the process is the point. The process and the journey is the destination. It is through the process of facing challenges with calmness, with curiosity, with creativity that you will allow yourself to experience every challenge in your life in a positive, creative way, in a beneficial way so that it won't be experienced as a struggle, so that you will not have to experience the idea of strife. This is one of the great challenges and one of the great themes that humanity is learning at this time along with the understanding that your greatest power is the freedom to choose what works for you.

There is nothing in creation that will contradict what you decide is true for you. If you decide to buy into a positive belief, then creation - All-that-is – says: 'I will support you unconditionally in the choosing to buy into that positive belief.' If you choose to buy into a negative and fear-based belief, creation being unconditionally supportive will say: 'I will support you in buying into that negative and fear-based belief.' It doesn't contradict you. It doesn't have a mind of its own in that context. It goes with what you say because you decide what is true for you.

That is the whole idea of All-that-is, God, Goddess, whatever you want to call it, experiencing itself through every single being, every single thing that is part of existence. It allows each of those things to be what it is, to be the reflection it is in its own unique way, and to decide for itself how it will experience its own existence, whether non-physical or physical. You have the power to choose. And that is what allows All-that-is to experience itself in all the possible ways that it can. And so when you expand your understanding, when you grow as a soul, you are doing so, not because you're changing the structure of existence because the structure of existence never changes.

It is what it is. What is changing is your relationship to it, your perspective of it, your experience of it. That is how creation grows. through each and every experience that you choose to have and how you choose to approach it, and how you choose to learn from it, what you choose to do with it. As we often say, it's not even so much about what happens that makes the difference. It's about what you do with what happens that makes the difference in your life.

Because anything can serve double duty and you can get a benefit out of anything, no matter whether it is mechanically positive which is collective integrative expansive or mechanically negative which is segregative, spiraling downward instead of upward. But these are mechanical energies and either can be used in different ways. You have used in a sense a negative mechanism to have a positive experience because you've used the mechanism of limiting your focus. Because you are an eternal being, an unlimited spirit being and you have concentrated your focus down, imposing a filter on your consciousness to only know so much, to only focus on this physical life path for now, even though you are a greater being than just this physical personality.

So you've used the negative mechanism for positive reasons of learning lessons that can help you grow. In the same way, you can use positive ideas for negative reasons. So it really depends on how you define things, how you approach things, what it is your intention is all about, how you approach your life that determines whether you get a benefit from it or whether you experience a struggle with it. It's really up to the definition that you buy into as true for yourself in many different ways and in every single situation, whatsoever.

We hope this is clear to you and we give you, because of this, the formula which allows you to take an instruction manual very simply and apply it to your life to ensure that your life - when the formula is used precisely and correctly - to have a life of positive, creative, loving, fulfilling realities, of positive relationship and connection to the universe and All-that-is and creation. And the formula is a distillation, not a philosophy. It's a distillation of how you create your reality already. So that we can give this to you as an instruction manual. So that if you just follow the instructions A B C D E F G, then you will not have to overthink it, you will not have to overwhelm yourself with the idea, you will not have to overcomplicate the idea of how you live your life and create a fulfilling life, and everything will start to flow in your life.

Synchronicity will become paramount in your life. You will see that everything is an orchestration, everything is connected to everything else and it will all fall into place in perfect timing if you understand how to use this instruction manual precisely and understand that this is the mechanism by which you already create your reality. But now, knowing this instruction manual consciously, can give you more conscious control over how you exactly experience the unfolding of your physical reality.' (From Fear To Flow, 2025)

Why would someone incarnate into an abusive situation?

Bashar: 'Again, you have to understand there are more reasons than many people think. The idea is sometimes people or souls will do those kinds of things and choose those kinds of things not for themselves but for others. As we have often said, if you see somebody suffering what will it take to get you to act to stop suffering in the future?

So sometimes a person may choose to look like they're suffering because of what other people may then choose to do about that in your reality. It's not that they necessarily needed to experience it for their own soul growth, although I'm not saying they can't get something out of it, out of that experience since all experiences are valid, but it may be in many cases what are other people going to learn about witnessing things like that, and will they be willing to do something about it in the future?

So it's not just as simplistic as 'oh, why would anyone choose that?' There are a million reasons why people would choose that. It's just that it's not just just always about them but about those around them including the entire society, the entire planet. 'What will it take' is the question, 'what will it take?' Remember, souls know they're indestructible. Souls know they're eternal.

The idea of saying 'all right, I'm going to put a little pressure on myself for a little while because it may actually have a profound effect in changing people of Earth in a positive way and I'm willing to do that because I love, unconditionally love the people of Earth and I'm willing to put myself through this challenge temporarily because it will make a big difference in what people do on Earth to create a more positive Earth.' From the Soul's perspective that's not such a big sacrifice at all.' (The Window, 2023)

Why would an aspect of God choose to come to this Earth reality?

B.: 'Again, it may seem to be a tough school, but why do some of your people go to college and institutions to learn things and find that they might be going through a challenging time to learn it, but their passion carries them through because they're really interested in learning those things. They're really interested in unlearning things as well. But the simple answer is: that's different for everyone, there are many, many reasons why different souls may choose to participate in something that seems like a tough school. And the idea of more pleasurable places has to do with your interpretation of the earth than it does going to some other place that's not earth.

Allow yourselves to be your true selves and all the pleasure you seek can be found on Earth. It's just a matter of how you decide to live, how you decide to be yourself or not. So the toughness - remember as we have said - there are no inherently difficult situations, it's just your interpretation and definition that makes it difficult. So all the pleasure that you seek can be found on Earth if you allow yourself to be your true self. And again, many people do choose to challenge themselves in a variety of ways because that's how they grow, in a way that's unavailable to them in spirit because Earth and physical reality is unique. So, why not?' (The Window, 2023)

The horrible passing away of Jane Roberts - did she really choose that for herself?

Q.: 'I have been thinking a lot about the reason for Jane Roberts who transcribed the Seth books, why her passing was so horrible. Did she really choose that for herself?'

Bashar: 'Yes. Again, souls will choose certain things to learn certain lessons. And sometimes it may seem that it may have no connection to what it is they may be giving the world as a gift, because they have their own path as well as the gifts that they may be sharing with others to help them. So, that soul learned a lesson through the idea of those experiences, and we will leave it at that.' (2027- The Year Everything Changes, 2025)

Choosing severe mental illnesses

Q.: 'Why would someone choose to experience certain severe mental illnesses that can cause tremendous suffering and fear and is often lifelong and debilitating?'

Bashar: 'Of course you have to take it on a case-by-case personal basis. Because there are many different reasons for those kinds of experiences. Two of the most common are: many souls will say 'all right, I would like to have a physical incarnation, but I would like to impose so many challenges and limitations upon myself that by experiencing this I will in a sense burn through all the lessons very quickly and advance very rapidly by learning the lessons I need to learn by having that experience.' That's number one.

Number two: some advanced souls will say 'I'm going to impose this on myself, not necessarily that I need the lesson, but I can help other people learn lessons from their interactions with me. How to communicate with differently oriented people, how to perhaps cure certain conditions that I have. So I'm giving others a chance to explore on their life path by relating to me what it is they can contribute to the evolution of humanity. Those are two of the main reasons. There are many other reasons. But those are two of the main ones.' (Believing is Seeing, 2025)

Is it possible to move into a parallel reality where I have perfect eyesight?

Q.: 'I had some retinal issues in the past and a lot of eye floaters.'

Bashar: 'Anything is possible, but the question is is it probable. Because if there are lessons for you to learn by having this experience - perhaps the idea of looking more inward instead of outward, just as an example - the idea is if you need those things to learn a lesson then they will remain in order for you to learn the lessons. If it is something that you have learned the lesson from, then it may no longer need to remain and can change.

As you change your total personality it is not impossible that you could also shift into a reality where you never had any problems with your eyes, you will be a different person with perfect eyesight. But the idea is to first accept that it is there for a reason, learn the lessons that it is there to help teach you, ask yourself the question 'what would I not learn if I hadn't had this, what is it helping me to see if I didn't have this particular condition?'

So explore it, investigate it, find out what the reasons are for having chosen this on your life path. Learn those lessons then it may be possible for it to shift, but don't insist that it must. Because there may be many lessons a multitude of lessons to learn with that particular experience. So, just take it as it comes, learn the lessons and see if something shifts.' (2027 - The Year Everything Changes, 2025)

Can I re-negotiate cancer with my Higher Self?

Q.: 'I suppose my larger self decided before I was born in this lifetime on a particular challenge such as cancer but I don't want all the pain and stuff associated with that. And I think I can come up with a better way to learn the lesson which maybe was self-worth or lack of fear of death. Can I negotiate with my larger self about this?'

Bashar: 'Well, it may not necessarily require a negotiation because if you've laid out on your life path that you took on this condition in order to find a different way to learn the same lessons, then of course the inevitable outcome would be the transformation of that condition into something else. Because that would have been the purpose in putting it on your life path to begin with was to learn how to transform it so that you no longer need it. So if that's part of your life path, yes, it doesn't require a negotiation. It just requires that you keep moving forward to learn whatever you believe the lessons are that you need to learn that the cancer put you in touch with that you can find another way to learn the lessons of.' (The Art of The Challenge, 2025)

You may be the same soul, but you're not the same person from moment to moment because person is an artificial construct of belief systems

Q.: 'I am no longer a smoker in the present moment, but I remember that there was a time that I'm connecting to in the present moment, where a person like me was a smoker - back then.'

Bashar: 'Yes. But that's a different person. That's a different person. Because if you change yourself, you change everything. You are not the same person – literally. You may think you look the same, but you're not the same. And that means that if you do not have the urge to smoke, then the truth is you, the new person, never did, never had the urge, never smoked. I understand that you may be creating a memory of a person that did or does in their own reality in what you call the past, but that's not you. You are a different person now because personality is flexible, malleable, changeable. You may be the same soul, but you're not the same person from moment to moment because person is an artificial construct of belief systems. That's what creates the personality. So, as you change your beliefs and your definitions about who and what you are in any given moment, you will literally become a different person. Even if you think you still look the same in the mirror. In actual fact, you're just recreating an image over and over again to create a sense of continuity for the rest of reality, the rest of the people, so they can still recognize you. But you are not the same person. And because you're not the same person who doesn't smoke, you never did.'

Q.: 'And when we increase our vibration and expand our consciousness, are we able to see many realities at the same time?'

Bashar: 'More, yes. Because you're broadening your bandwidth and you can perceive more of what reality is, which is multi-dimensional. So, this is one of the symptoms of the expansion of consciousness is being able to perceive more than one reality so to speak, more than one probability - more accurately - at a time, because they all exist. So this is what creates the idea of psychic precognition and déjà vu and other experiences like that is you're already perceiving more than one reality.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

Can we shift to a parallel reality where our body has different traits?

Bashar: 'You can do that and there are many demonstrations of that. What you might call an instantaneous healing, a spontaneous healing, or a shift or spontaneous change that seem to involve no process at all is sometimes representative of the idea that you've shifted to a parallel reality where you are now truly a different person, and a different body, and a different past, and a different future.

So every change is a total change, but they don't necessarily seem like it because there isn't necessarily what you would call a space-time gap in the idea. You don't see an abrupt change from one state to another, but sometimes you do. One of the clearest examples that exists in your reality about this are what you might refer to as multiple personality disorders where one personality may have a tumor and when it shifts to a different personality then the body exhibits no tumor at all. These things have been documented and recorded in your reality, and many different cases like this.

That's an indication of shifting to a parallel reality in such a manner that there is no continuity between one frame and the next. So yes, it's possible, but is it relevant? That's always the question. Is it probable according to your belief systems that this will happen, and is it relevant for you for that to happen that way, or is the process necessary? Is the gradual process something you will learn something from? So yes, it's possible, but is it probable or relevant is really the question. It's not about avoiding things, it's about allowing the process that is there to be necessary.

You can always reduce the amount of process by examining your belief systems about what you believe you need to really learn a lesson in any given process, you can always streamline the process down to its minimum, but you can't always eliminate the process because process is the entire point of experiencing physical reality, telling yourself a story, learning something from it, learning the moral of the story that you're telling yourself. So you can't necessarily completely eliminate the story, but often the story can shift in abrupt ways if it is relevant for the story to do so, if that's what will teach you the lesson that you chose to learn. But you can't use it to avoid the lesson.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

Seth: 'In your terms probable events are brought into actuality by utilizing the body's nerve structure through certain intensifies of will or conscious belief. These beliefs obviously have another reality beside the one with which you are familiar. They attract and bring into being certain events instead of others. Therefore, they determine the entry of experienced events from an endless variety of probable events'.

Seth: 'A new belief in the present can cause changes in the past on a neuronal level. You must understand that basically time is simultaneous. Present beliefs can indeed alter the past. In some cases of healing, in the spontaneous disappearance of cancer, for instance, or of any other disease, certain alterations are made that affect cellular memory, genetic codes, or neuronal patterns in the past'.

Seth: 'You change your past continually. It does not appear to change to you, for you change with it. You alter your future in the same manner. The 'you' that you presently conceive to be represents the emergence into physical experience of but one probable state of your being, who then directs corporeal life and 'frames' and defines all sense data. When your ideas about yourself change, so does your experience'.

Meeting a dead person in a parallel reality

Q.: 'If I am in a reality where someone has died, is it possible for me to shift into a reality where that same person is still alive?'

Bashar: 'Unlikely. Because you laid out on your life path that they may have died for a reason of their own making and also to help you stretch your senses into the spirit world to reconnect with them. It's not impossible, but it's unlikely and improbable. It's not something that is common upon your planet at this time. Other civilizations that exist in the universe may be able to experience that, but that's a very different kind of life path for a very different kind of soul purpose. On your planet right now, it's not all that likely that that will happen.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

Two minutes ago you may have had a completely different past

Bashar: 'Now, let's talk a little bit about the idea of how you use already parallel realities to create the experiences in your life. You already have what you consider to be a timeline to your life. You linearly usually think of it going from A to Z, I'm going from the past to the future. Through the present. But the present is all there is. The past and the future in a sense are just probable illusions, probabilities that haven't yet really solidified until you solidify yourself in the present, until you define yourself clearly in the present, in whatever way, shape or form you might do that, positively or negatively or even neutrally.

I remind you of this so that you understand that while you may think linearly that the future is not fixed, neither is the past. Listen carefully. What you define yourself to be in the here and now, which is all there is, in the present right now, not only changes the probabilities of the future but changes your past as well. Why? It works this way, because you're experiencing the idea of physical reality, because you're experiencing the idea of cause and effect. You're separating them out 'oh, this causes this effect to happen, this must happen first so that this can happen'. Because that's the way you experience the concept of space and time, because you have created physical reality to be viewed and experienced that way.

Anytime you make a change in your definition of who you are in the present, any time you become literally a different person, a new person your linear reality has to shift in a way that says 'well, if you're a new person now we have to alter the past to become the kind of past that would have led to who you are in the present, we have to change the cause so that the effect makes sense'. So you're actually changing your past all the time literally, not metaphorically, literally.

Now you may not know that all the time, because again as soon as you make that adjustment in the present the past is going to bring with it the idea that that's always been your past, because that's what going to make sense to you linearly, even though two minutes ago you may have had a completely different past. You may not know that because in order to function in physical reality in the present you have to remember the past that makes sense for who you are now. And this is dynamically changing all the time.

Now, because you are expanding your consciousness, because you are allowing yourself to be a little bit more aware of more of yourself, some of you are beginning to experience what you have labeled the Mandela effect, which is the idea that you are actually aware of the fact that the past has changed and that one person can remember one past and another person can remember a completely different past for the exact same event. Now that's not always the case. Sometimes it is just a slip of your memory, but sometimes it is the idea of recognizing that you have shifted the past in order to truly define who you are in the present, and that two people can have a memory of absolutely different histories and both of them are real. Because all parallel realities exist at the same time.

Everything exists here and now. When your scientists begin to understand consciousness a little bit more thoroughly they will understand that in their search for a so-called unified theory of physics they have to include the idea of not only reducing all of the physical phenomenon in reality to a single idea that explains all of the effects, they have to reduce space and time as well. So reducing the idea of space to its ultimate will be the idea of a single, dimensionless point. Reducing the idea of time to its ultimate will be a single, timeless moment. You can call the single dimensionless point 'here' and the single timeless moment 'now'.

So everything becomes existing 'here and now' in lay terms. But once you do that, once you truly start to wrap your minds around the understanding that anything you can imagine in every parallel reality all exists simultaneously, all going on right now, you start to realize that what that really means is that there is only that single point of 'here', only that timeless moment of 'now', and therefore anything that you perceive as a different place, anything that you perceive as a different moment, is actually the same place and the same moment from a different point of view. Because there is only one place: here, and only one moment: now.

So everything you experience that appears to be stretched out into volumes of space and moments of time are all the same place and the same time from another vantage point, another perspective of that same here and now. That's how you create the idea and the experience of physical reality.' (Welcome to Sedona, 2023)

Why do friends and relatives remember our past when we are actually a new person?

Q.: 'I remember you stating in a previous transmission that once a person makes a change it is a complete change and that that change includes the person's past, present and future. And also that you never were that person. My question is: why is it that ourselves and those who are close to us remember the past of the former version, especially if it is something that may not be preferred?’

Bashar: ‘Because it is still something you're creating in the present that is relevant. That's why. You create the history over and over and over in the present, as long as elements of it remain relevant to the theme that you're choosing to explore. So even though you're not the same person and you don't have the same history, you are recreating something similar every moment, as long as it remains relevant to your theme.’ (Step Three, 2024)

Why do we need to evolve?

Q.: ‘If all souls decide where they incarnate based on what they want to learn, why does humanity or any civilization need to evolve? Couldn't we just stay where we are? The souls that want this experience would incarnate here and the ones that don't would simply incarnate some other place. In other terms, why are other civilizations this invested in our ascension?’

Bashar: ‘Well, that's two very different questions. And first of all you are correct. Souls don't have to incarnate on Earth. Souls often do incarnate in other civilizations, linearly speaking. The idea again though is that in a state where you do experience intermittent time, and sometimes do experience timelessness which is what intermittent time means, then the idea is that you can't necessarily evolve in that way, you can't change in the way you might wish to for your soul's growth without imposing on yourself the experience of linear space-time. So the idea is, if a soul wishes to change, wishes to grow, wishes to learn, wishes to experience something in a certain way, it has to impose the framework of linear space-time upon its consciousness in such a manner that it then experiences the idea of evolution, change, growth and discovery. So in a timeless state you can't experience that because everything is simultaneous. There is no change, there is no growth in that context. And yes, again a different question, of course a soul can choose to experience different civilizations. No one is saying that you have to experience Earth incarnations only. So that's the answer to that part of the question.’ (Step Four, 2024)

How can a soul evolve when everything is timeless?

Q.: ‘How is it possible for a soul to evolve when everything is timeless? Everything is now and the soul is at the same time in different lives.’

Bashar: ‘You're talking about two different levels. Everything is not timeless, except on one level. You obviously have created an experience of space and time. That's how you evolve, that's how the soul evolves by creating that experience in order to discover something new. So it's not correct to say that everything is timeless because physical reality by definition is not timeless. It's an experience that you have created in order for the soul to experience the concept of growth and change and evolution.

So it's not correct to say that everything is timeless. Spirit world is timeless, but even then it's experiencing what we would call intermittent time. Because while on the soul level - and we will talk about this in the next transmission more deeply - you can have experiences that seem like timeline experiences, but then you can also shift very rapidly and instantaneously to other timelines and other experiences. So the soul level is both timely and timeless, and it's what we refer to as intermittent time. Physical reality is experiencing linear time. The soul is experiencing intermittent time. The truly timeless state is the oversoul level that experiences all the souls simultaneously.

So again, do not be confused in your definitions. Not everything is a timeless experience. Even though on one level everything exists now, that's not the way you experience or perceive it from the level that you have created physical reality to be. And therefore that use of space-time as a device is what allows your soul to evolve, to learn, to grow, to discover, to change.' (Step Four, 2024)

Time-relevant experiences from the perspective of a timeless state

Q.: 'If everything is simultaneously going on from the perspective of All-that-is and nothing is actually happening, then how does All-that-is evolve or discover more of itself?'

Bashar: 'Well again, this question sort of has mixed metaphors in it and therefore is a little bit mixed up in that way. Everything exists all at once, yes. But let's separate out the idea of the term happen-ing because that implies the experience of space and time. So, you're mixing the idea of simultaneity in existence and everything existing at once in a timeless state with the idea of what you experience in a time - relevant reality. And therefore the question is kind of nonsensical.'

Q.: 'Because it's all about experience being new, even though the structure never changes.'

Bashar: 'Exactly. So the structure is timeless. The experience is what's happen-ing. So it's not that the happen-ing is always happen-ing. That takes place within a space-time frame of reference. The structure that everything exists in the sense that you have the structure you can play with and experience happenings in, that always exists but the happen-ings happ-en within a space-time referential reality.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

Meeting with extraterrestrials on a similar level

Q.: 'You often say that in order for open contact to occur, we humans and you extraterrestrials need to be equal, need to meet as equals.'

Bashar: 'Closer to it, yes. There is a range and a window of vibrations in which it can occur. And remember, the idea is that open contact will occur in a way that you can handle. We have ways when you reach a certain point of creating a kind of buffer energy that mitigates the difference between us, until you get used to that and we can truly meet in the same reality. But at first, even though you may be able to interact with us, it would be like interacting through a filter. So there are stages to it.'

Q.: 'So we don't have to be necessarily exactly equals.'

Bashar: 'No, not vibrationally. You are equals in general, but not vibrationally, no. We understand that you still have evolution to experience in your reality. But you have arrived at a point where a lot of you can now experience us through the idea of the buffer filter.'

Q.: 'In our human history we have been feeling as if you were superior to us and as if we were inferior, but I think it has been changing because of you.'

Bashar: 'Yes, we obviously do have more experience in certain ways than you do, but we're not gods to you. And it is time for you to get over that.'

Q.: 'That's right. So, we are getting closer to each other, I guess.'

Bashar: 'Yes, if you weren't, open contact wouldn't be happening.' (Dominoes Day 2, 2025)

Open contact is relatively inevitable now

Q.: 'How can we tell for certain that we are on one of the timelines for open contact?'

Bashar: 'If you were not, you would most likely not be talking with us. You are on that timeline because we are on that timeline and you are interested in the idea and asking those questions which indicates that if you were not on that timeline it would probably not be the subject of your question.'

Q.: 'Is there a certain frequency you have to be at in order to be on the timeline?'

Bashar: 'Specifically something that will be vibrationally compatible with the introduction of open contact and extraterrestrials in the next couple of years. It will be a higher frequency than average on your planet. Most likely somewhere above 80,000 cycles per second as we read that energy.'

Q.: 'Are there any other elements having to do with the life plan that you created that would ensure that you're on the path to having contact?'

Bashar: 'Again, you are on that path or you would not be speaking with us and you would not be considering these things. The idea simply again is to follow the formula and recognize that you control the speed at which you will experience the idea of contact and exactly in what way you will experience contact. But the idea of contact is relatively inevitable now for your entire planet. Even for those who may reject it, they will still be aware that it is an option or a choice. What they will do with it will be up to them at that point. But contact for the majority of your planet at this time is inevitable.'

Q.: 'You've said that the ETs will be involved in many aspects of our civilization, including politics. How will we know that we won't regret allowing and inviting open contact?'

Bashar: 'If you do not understand yet at this point that the extraterrestrials involved in open contact have humanity's best interests at heart, then you would assume that you might have the ability to experience regret. If you understand that they have your best interests at heart, then you will know that that is not something you would experience.'

Q.: 'How will our work life look after open contact? With new technologies emerging, will people with no related experience be offered the opportunity to learn like vibrational medicine or things like that?'

Bashar: 'Yes. Many, many opportunities will be presented to humanity. Many things will be given to you that if you gravitate toward them, if you are passionate about them, you will have the opportunity to be taught and to learn these things. So, extraterrestrials will offer many new career opportunities - to put it in those terms, many new understandings of how to approach technology. Many new openings will be created and you will be given the opportunity to learn these things.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

Reality as a projection rather than an illusion

Q.: 'I have a hard time defining the world as an illusion because to me illusions are fake and fake is meaningless.'

Bashar: 'Again, you can have a different definition of the word illusion. It is not meant in the term to be fake. The idea is perhaps more auspiciously used as a projection of consciousness rather than illusion, if illusion doesn't work for you as a term. So a projection of consciousness can still create a virtual reality for you, and the meaning in it is what you put into it. The experience of it is real and it gives you lessons, it gives you knowledge, it allows you to expand, it allows you to learn, it allows you to grow.'

So in that sense the so-called 'illusion' is useful as a tool, if you think of it that way, but perhaps it would be easier for you to use it in the term projection rather than illusion. The idea is that the imaginings are real in their own right to some degree in a variety of ways. It doesn't mean they have to be as concrete as you find your reality to be. But many of them may be or they may be very close representations of a 'real solid physical reality'. They may be slightly different than you imagine them to be, but they could be close. Nevertheless, everything is real in some context, even if it's only real as a story. It's still real in some way, shape or form. Even if it's not literally played out physically in some parallel version of reality.' (Countdown to Contact Year One, 2024)

Making choices for the 'next' life in physical reality

Q.: 'How do we choose what we want to learn for our next life when we are between lifetimes, what is the process?'

Bashar: 'You consult with your spirit team, guides, angelic beings, soul family, extraterrestrials, extradimensionals, ascended masters, on and on and on and on. You all have literally hundreds if not thousands of members that belong to your soul family and your spirit team. You all discuss what each of you believes would be important for you to experience to expand your soul's growth. And then you make a decision. And then your team backs you up on that and says 'we will guide you in that experience.' You have free will to choose anything you wish. You don't have to incarnate. You can go to other dimensions. You can remain in spirit. You can go up to other levels of spirit. You can experience many different things. It's up to you to decide. From learning what you have learned in this life you will apply it to your knowledge about what you would like to do next.' (Believing is Seeing, 2025)

'Negative' as a limiting experiential mechanism vs. 'negative' in the value judgment sense

Q.: 'If All-that-is half positive and half negative and everything is made out of love, does that mean that negative is made of love as well?'

Bashar: 'Yes of course, everything is. But remember, first of all it is more like the idea of 51% positive and 49% negative because the center point, the balance point gives you still the chance to choose the freedom to choose and therefore, you could say that existence is slightly bent in the positive direction. The idea again is for people to understand that everything is made of the vibration of existence which you translate as unconditional love. Negative as a mechanism is not necessarily negative as an experience in the value judgment way of phrasing that. Because you are using negative mechanisms to focus your consciousness to have a physical experience, which you have to do in order to experience the concept of physical reality, because you are a bigger being than that.

So you do have to impose negative mechanical frameworks on your consciousness in order to limit your ability to perceive yourself as a greater being - at least temporarily. So by applying those negative frameworks that's not necessarily for a negative reason, so to speak, So the idea primarily is to understand how to use these mechanisms, the positive, the negative but in a way that always has a positive result, a positive effect if that's what you prefer.'

Q.: 'Are those who have gone farther into the darkness eventually able to go farther into the light and is there some benefit to have experienced a lot of suffering?'

Bashar: `Well, there can be. Again, it depends on how you use things. Remember, it's not about what happens, it's about what you do with what happens. So those that have allowed themselves the opportunity to finally let go - no matter how far into darkness they've gone - can snap and spring very rapidly onto the side of light. But again, it depends on the theme that they're exploring. Of course, ultimately when you go into Spirit you will realize these things and therefore you will have more freedom to recognize why you chose what you chose and how to utilize it to propel yourself in the direction that you prefer.

So the things that we're talking about here - not that positive and negative don't exist on every level - but they're experienced very differently as physical reality. And therefore, when you stop being physical you do have a little bit more insight and a little bit more freedom, a broader range of point of view with which to examine and assess what you did in the physical reality. And therefore you have more freedom to use it in the way that you prefer to.' (Breaking News, 2021)

Q.: `So if you have a negative belief and you focus on it, is that correct that at some point you will find that it's more and more difficult to escape the negative consequences of a negative belief that you're engaging with?

Bashar: In general, yes. Any strongly held, continuously held belief system will create a kind of momentum or inertia that will make it more challenging eventually to change. That's the nature - again - of the belief, but primarily the negative ones. Because the positive beliefs always contain an issue of freedom, an issue of ability to change, whereas the negative ones don't.' (Breaking News, 2021)

Souls and Oversouls - the Pincharts

Q.: `You've shared there are souls and then oversouls and then oversouls of oversouls and so on...`

Bashar: `Yes.`

Q.: `...but at the same time we have the ability to connect to any sort of parallel incarnation that's ever been in existence.`

Bashar: `...that is relevant for you to connect to, not anything.`

Q.: `Interesting.`

Bashar: `If it's not relevant you won't connect to it, cuz why should you if it's not relevant?`

Q.: `So do you have like a limited number of souls as a part of your own oversoul?`

Bashar: `Well, the entire population of our planet is much lower than yours. On average it remains relatively stable - give or take - around 300 million. So in a sense we generally, with a few exceptions for a variety of reasons, sort of all relate to a single oversoul for our civilization.`

Q.: `And so for humans is it similar or is it more like seven per oversoul than eventually at the human oversoul?

Bashar: `The idea of the 7 billion people on your planet is generally representative, even though this also fluctuates of between about 300 to 500,000 oversouls. That's not evenly divided. You can't just say `well, it's x per oversoul'. It constantly fluctuates. But that's the average.

Q.: 'You've also shared in the past that there are these parallel incarnation charts.'

Bashar: 'The pin charts, yes.'

Q.: 'The pin charts. So does that mean that one soul, or rather one oversoul has multiple incarnations at different timelines?'

Bashar: 'Yes, usually that's the case. Some pin charts may be adventurous enough to go into more than one oversoul, but generally that's not the case.' (Breaking News, 2021)

The Pin Charts: official handout of the '33rd Parallel' - session (2013)

https://d11n7da8rpgbjy.cloudfront.net/basharet/1842_170898908141233rd_Parallel.pdf?kuid=59cd6316-35c6-4dce-b389-f12817356740-1763197132&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

Sassani channeling through other humans

Bashar: 'There have been a few that have channeled through other humans, not me personally. I am limited to this particular human, but the idea is that other members of my society that are also first contact specialists have engaged with other humans on your planet from time to time in a variety of ways. You can all tap into our general collective vibration in order to align with it by holding the image as we have described it in your mind in a meditative state of a black equilateral triangle pointing upwards against a black background but separated from the black background by a deep pulsating blue light, similar to the blue that you see in a gas flame. So the idea is that's kind of like our vibrational phone number that allows you to tap into our collective consciousness and align with it for whatever way it might serve your passion to express it creatively in your reality.' (Step One, 2024)

Is Bashar talking to several parallel earths at the same time?

Bashar: 'Yes, other versions of me, I suppose you could say, are speaking to other civilizations, other versions of you in many other parallel realities simultaneously. I am generally aware of this, even though I don't have to be specifically aware of what's going on in each of those parallel realities, unless for some reason it is important for my lifepath to specifically know what those communications are all about. I do draw from them in general, to aid and assist in each timeline that experiences open contact, to give a vibration off that is more conducive to each reality, being more capable of choosing the direction of open contact - vibrationally speaking. So I use the connections in all those parallel realities to increase the probability and likelihood for other parallel realities who have chosen a higher probability of open contact to move it in its momentum in that direction.' (Gatherings, 2024)

What Bashar may mean when using the term 'Parallel Reality'

Parallel realities: shifting from one reality frame to the next at the rate of Planck time

Bashar: 'As you accelerate, every moment, you change. You are creating new parallel realities to go along with the change in you. Because every change is a total change, as we have said, and when you talk about total change, we mean universal change. So every change is a whole new parallel reality, even if one parallel reality may be only different from another by one atom, it's still a completely different reality. Totally different. And as you change and as you make decisions you go through, you bring yourself through a succession of parallel reality shifts so automatically, so smoothly, you don't even always recognize that that's what you are doing. But you see movement itself, the perception of movement of any kind is actually the perception of a succession of parallel realities. 'This' is one reality, 'this' is another, 'this' is another, 'this' is another (hand movements by Bashar) and in between those positions were an infinite number of other parallel realities that we have all just agreed to go through together.' (Beyond the Secrets and into Abundance, 2007)

Parallel realities: other people as reflections in your reality

Bashar: 'First and foremost you are focused in a particular life, in a particular identity in what you typically call your present incarnation. And because everything is here and now and because as we have discussed before, everything is actually one thing then even what you perceive to be other people in your reality, even they are actually parallel reflections of you from a different point of view. Everything in your reality is a reflection of what you are giving off, what you are putting out as the theme you are exploring and so even though there may be autonomous individuals that are real unto themselves and in some sense different from you, nevertheless what you perceive as different individuals in your reality are actually reflections of you in a variety of ways, some having more or less relevance to you, some having different forms of relevance to you as reflections, but nevertheless still functioning as actual expressions of parallel versions of you co-existing simultaneously with the identity that you believe yourself to be, that you are focused as at this particular moment in this particular incarnation. So the first level of the concept of parallel realities is simply those parallel realities that exist even within your own timeframe, even within your own life and are represented by the reflections you call other people. They're all reflections of you, thus then they're all parallel reality versions of you co-existing simultaneously with you here and now in this life.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Parallel realities: past and future lives

Bashar: 'Now, the second expression of this concept of parallel realities that we have discussed then is the idea that you are calling past lives, future lives, those ideas, those reflections, those incarnational experiences that you consider from your linear space-time perspective to be not happening simultaneously with you, even though of course on the larger level they are. But those that you ascribe to different timeframes, long ago or yet to come as you say, because they are all going on at the same time, then even those are parallel realities with you. And they are different people similarly to the way that the people in your life now are different people but still nevertheless reflections of your consciousness. So you have the two levels of the reflections of the parallel reality consciousnesses that exist as people you are familiar with, that exist at the same time that you do in your reckoning and you also have the parallel realities of all the different lives that you are connected to from the present, and in the present that you call past lives and future lives but are nevertheless going on simultaneously. Those are also thus then another form of parallel reality existence, parallel reality experience.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Parallel realities: other people as reflections of past and future lives

Bashar: 'Then you must understand that each of those - shall we say - past lives, future lives also have their reflections in what they consider to be their contemporary timeframe and all of those reflections of course are also parallel reality lives, parallel reflections going on in their same timeframe. But again, because everything exists at once then even the people that exist around those incarnations that you are most strongly, most relevantly connected to in those so-called past and future lives, even those reflections are also parallel reality reflections for you, even though they may seem to be somewhat indirectly connected to you. Nevertheless, they still function as reflections for those other versions you consider yourself to be that are going on simultaneously that you are cross-connected to and thus can serve as parallel reality reflections for you as well in this contemporary timeframe, too.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Parallel realities: parallel versions of you on different parallel versions of Earth

Bashar: 'So, now you already have several levels going on here, but there are still more to come. Because the idea now is to understand the concept of parallel reality in what you might call the so-called classical science fiction sort of definition and that is that there are different parallel versions of you on different parallel versions of earth that are perhaps seemingly somewhat similar to the version you are familiar with or perhaps are not like anything you are familiar with and still are considered to be the idea of parallel reality versions of earth. And therefore, those different versions of you that exist on those different versions of earth are also other parallel reality connections that you can make. There may be a parallel reality version of you that took a different choice than you took in your life along a certain path with regard to a certain event. But that life, that choice is being experienced just as realistically and just as much in the present as you are experiencing whatever choices you made in this life. They are going on right now, living those other choices, those alternate 'what-if-I-had-taken-that-path?' – choice, that path is being experienced by a parallel reality version of you on a parallel reality version of earth.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Parallel realities: other people as reflections of another version of you on another version of Earth

Bashar: 'And then yet again, on all those parallel reality versions of earth, those versions of you also have reflections of all the people they know, all the versions of the people they know in those alternate realities that may be slightly different than the reality of earth that you understand. So that again is yet another level that you can connect to not only with regard to the idea of the version of you but the versions of all the different people that you may or may not be familiar with in your life that also exist in those parallel realities as well.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Parallel realities: other versions of you in alien civilizations or in other dimensions

Bashar: 'So now you have several more levels of the idea of parallel reality that your consciousness is experiencing as a greater being and of course this includes the idea both in terms of the timeframes and what's going on temporarily and what's going on in parallel versions of earth, it includes the idea of other lives that you may be connected to on other worlds as well or in other dimensions as well that are nothing like what you experience in the physical reality versions of parallel realities you also have: alien civilization versions of parallel realities, other-dimensional versions of parallel realities, going on simultaneously in the greater consciousness being that you are right now, with everything that you are experiencing. And thus you can tap into those as well, those other planes of existence, those other dimensions of experience, those other civilizations that seem quite foreign and alien to you here and now, nevertheless are all happening within your greater being and you are quite capable of tapping into those as well.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Parallel realities: different levels of you as a being (spirit, soul, oversoul, etc.)

Bashar: 'Thus then there are also the different levels of your being that we have discussed in terms of the concept of you in spirit, the concept of you as an oversoul, the concept of the oversoul of oversouls. You can tap into those also to some degree as parallel reality concepts going on simultaneously that you are experiencing all those other parallel realities within, because the greater and greater and greater levels of your being contain all these experiences of parallel reality simultaneously and on the higher levels actually perceive more and more and more of these parallel realities simultaneously as their normal way of perceiving reality.

You have now the flexibility and the ability and the facility to be able to tap into all of these levels to whatever degree is relevant to the life that you are focused in here and can choose to download information from all these levels in a manner that is also relevant and germane and pertains to whatever theme you are exploring as this particular focused incarnational individual.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Bashar not the only Sassani channel

Q.: 'I perceived you as saying that you would be perhaps the only or one of the only Sassani first contact specialists that would be vocally channeled in the future.'

Bashar: 'No. I am simply saying that I only come through this channel. There are other Sassani beings that can be connected with for a variety of reasons whether it's about connecting to a first contact specialist or not. But I am simply saying: I am a first contact specialist and this is the only channel I will come through.' (The Gate, 2023)

Why should a human put any more faith in ET channelings than we put in religion?

Q.: 'Many things resonate with me but growing up in religion I am aware that I have been deceived by fantastic beliefs before and find myself questioning what I hear.'

Bashar: 'Well, you shouldn't. The idea is not to have faith in ET information, but to apply it in your life and get the proof that the information itself actually makes a difference. And that to some degree is the difference between ET information and religion.

And secondarily of course, as I said, in short order in a few years we will actually start to physically show up. Therefore you will know that this information is actually coming from beings that are evolved, experienced, and are simply sharing with you information that has allowed their societies to evolve to the level that they have. So there is actually empirical grounded evidence that this information can make differences in your life.

It's not an issue of faith. It's an issue of actual physical application of the information. But you get to free yourself to choose whatever you wish to believe in. That's up to you. We only share this information because we know it can work. But we're not telling you that you have to use it. We're not telling you that there's anything about your life that is going to be worse if you don't. It's really up to you to decide.

And to some degree that is also the difference between what is happening in terms of information coming from us and information that may be being delivered through religions on your planet. So you have to decide for yourself what works and what doesn't.' (Fantasy versus Reality of Contact, 2025)

Iconization of the idea of ET contact

Q.: 'is that in a sense similar to different religious icons that end up drawing a huge following in terms of a certain religion?.'

Bashar: 'Fundamentally, fundamentally, yes. However, in ways that religions may then be manipulated by individuals, not necessarily.'

Q.: 'So is the idea similar that humans could misinterpret ETs, similar to how they might misinterpret religious messages?.'

Bashar: 'Of course. Humans are very good at misinterpreting things (that's our challenge, right?) it's one of them, yes.' (Persistence of Vision, 2023)

Omnipresence and Omnipotence of God

Q.: 'I come from an Eastern Indian culture where God is seen as omnipresent and omnipotent.'

Bashar: 'Well, source is omnipresent. But I think a lot of people on your planet don't actually understand what that word means. Do you understand what omnipresent actually means?'

Q.: 'Everywhere all at once?'

Bashar: 'And by everywhere, that means that the idea of God or source must therefore be...'

Q.: '...everything.'

Bashar: 'Thank you.'

Q.: 'So it feels unsettling to me to think that even negative expressions like violence, inconsideration or rudeness are still God knowing itself.'

Bashar: 'Everything is God knowing itself. Everything. There are lessons in everything. It's like saying there's a stream and there's a current in the stream and I can choose to swim upstream against the current. Does that mean the current is still not God? No. The current is part of the river. So you can choose to swim upstream against the current or you can go with the flow with the current. Which do you prefer? Can you learn a lesson by going upstream? Yes. You might develop stronger muscles by swimming upstream and therefore, you will be stronger when you finally let go and flow downstream. So, even what appears to be negative can still be something that will aid and assist you by learning a lesson that will help you grow, yes?'

Q.: 'I struggle with that.'

Bashar: 'You're struggling because you're swimming upstream.'

Q.: 'My question is: what place does integrity, goodness, service to others have in life? Why do we have to choose to do good?'

Bashar: 'You don't have to choose it. But let me explain it this way - speaking of the idea of current: as we have explained, there is the positive, there is the negative, but there is the neutral. Reality is a trinity, not a duality. There's always the neutral place in the center. But, the neutral place in the center still allows you the freedom to choose what you prefer. So in a sense, euphemistically, you could say that creation is 51% positive and 49% negative. So the idea is that if you simply relax and go with the current, you will ultimately drift into the positive side. But the idea is if you understand that you may have chosen to come through the negative side to learn the lesson that you can simply let go and drift into the positive side naturally, then you will have used the negative side in a way that is actually resulting in a positive outcome. So again the idea is just to look at these things mechanically. It's not a value judgment. We understand that you can express the idea on your planet in violent ways and ways that aren't necessarily condoning the idea of perpetuating life. We understand that. But again, a soul can sometimes learn in a much more accelerated way by putting themselves in a situation where they are immersed in something that is so dark, so dense that when they finally let go of that, they will fly that much faster into the light. We call this the rubber band analogy. Because the farther back you pull a rubber band, when you finally let it go, it snaps that much faster in the other direction. And so sometimes souls can use the negative energy, the negative mechanism to steep themselves in such negativity that when the soul finally says: 'all right, I have learned all the lessons I can about this, being a vibration that is not necessarily in alignment with what I ultimately prefer to be and who I really am', and they finally let go of it, then they will snap that much faster and that much farther into the light, into the flow. So, you can use it that way. It's there available to you if you want to do it that way, because source is everything and all possibilities and it doesn't judge or devalue anything within itself. It's just a mechanism. It's not a value judgment. Only humans decide this is good or bad. Remember, you are ultimately eternal and indestructible souls. So, in a sense, it's like looking at a play on a stage and going: 'oh, there's the hero and there's the villain and they're playing their parts and they're in conflict with one another'. But when the play is done, they go out and have a beer together because they're actually friends and they're just playing a role. And without the darkness, you cannot see the light as clearly. Because the darkness frames the light.'

Q.: 'So it is all like roleplay of good and bad in a sense, then there's no incentive to be good.'

Bashar: 'There is an incentive and that is as I said earlier to actually allow yourself to feel the ease of creation in going with the flow and the current of the 51% that goes in that direction so that you can enlighten yourself literally. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'So yes, there is incentive to it because it is easier, is it not?'

Q.: 'Easier. Yes, okay.'

B.: 'Well, all right. Then you are more in alignment, more integral with source in that way in its ultimate form. But again, everything is valid. If you use it that way to learn a lesson to be more of who you are, then ultimately even though you may be using a negative mechanism, you're using it for a positive reason in the same way that you're all using a negative mechanism to have a physical experience because you are inhibiting your greater self in order to be focused in a physical reality, aren't you? So, you're limiting yourself. That's a negative action. You're using a negative mechanism to experience acceleration and discovery of something new within yourself. So, you're using a negative mechanism for a positive reason.'

Q.: 'Got it. Why do I feel guilty that I'm being rude or imposing myself on someone if I advocate for myself or be myself.'

Bashar: 'Well, but is imposing yourself on someone being yourself? Do you not trust that the information you have to share with someone is powerful enough to wait for the appropriate time to present itself? Does it have to be forced on someone? Are you impatient about it? Are you trying to save everyone, which is a disrespecting of their life path and their timing?’

Q.: ‘It feels like that sometimes.’

Bashar: ‘Then don't do that. You have to trust the way things unfold and recognize and have the discernment to tell when sharing something you think can help someone is being done in an appropriate way for them. Remember, you're being of service to them. You're not trying to save them. You are serving them by giving them what they need when circumstances synchronistically show you that they're ready to listen. Because whatever it is they do with whatever information you share with them is none of your business. You don't know their life path. You're not living their life. You don't know what they have chosen to go through. They may use your information tomorrow, next week, next year, 100 years from now, even after they die, they may use it. But the idea is you have at least given them the option and the opportunity to use the information that could help them. But they're the ones that get to decide when to use it, not you. They get to decide that. Does that make sense?’

Q.: ‘Got it.’

Bashar: ‘And then you can sense more easily when it might be appropriate through synchronicity to share something you think can help them. And then when you know you've given them whatever it is you can give them with absolutely no need for them to actually use it now or pay attention, it's just that you do that because you're being of service. In the same way we give you all this information, we have absolutely no agenda that you have to use any of the things we're saying to you at all. We don't care. This is what we do because this is who we are. Whatever you decide to do with this information is up to you. We're not going to live your life. We have our own life to live, thank you very much. So, we're not going to take on your life and not be responsible for you. We can only be responsible to you by being who we are. And that's all we can do. And that's all anyone can do. Makes sense?’

Q.: ‘Yes.’

Bashar: ‘Does that help you?’

Q.: ‘Yes.’

Bashar: ‘Thank you.’ (Dominoes Day 2, 2025)

Question about Source

Q.: ‘Is there only one non-physical source we call Spirit or God, or is there really many parts that make this an idea of one whole?’

Bashar: ‘You are separating the idea into ‘this or that’ instead of ‘this and that’. There is ‘One’ and there is ‘All’. And the One and the All are the same thing, in different forms. There is One that becomes the All, that is the All, that experiences itself as the All, and there are the many things that together make up the One, but are each individually their own version, their own perspective of the One.

Everything is made of God, there is nothing else to make anything from. And therefore God is everything. When people on your planet talk about the idea and the notion of God being omnipresent, you have to understand that it is not possible to be everywhere, unless you are actually, literally, everything. Therefore, it is everything, it is every atom, every subatomic particle, every object, every molecule, everything. The space even in between the things that you think of as empty space, that is even made of God. There is nowhere where God, All-that-is isn't. It is everything, it is everyone, it is everywhere, it is everywhen. All the things make it up and it makes up all the things.' (Countdown to Contact Year One, 2024)

Having trouble concentrating on the positive things and enjoying them

Q.: 'I don't want to make any mistakes with my actions (environment, climate, pollution, etc.). Is the attention to detail about ramifications of every choice in our lives necessary or am I just punishing and restricting myself unnecessarily with all of this?'

Bashar: 'Yes, you are punishing and restricting yourself unnecessarily, you are overthinking things. The idea is, you are holding yourself back, and you are not allowing yourself to move forward, because you are using all of those things as an excuse to not move forward. There are ways you can go about doing all of those things that are at least in some way, shape or form more in alignment with the way you would prefer to do them. And if there isn't, the idea is then: do something about making changes in your society that would allow you to move forward on those things, so that society can perhaps learn to do them in different ways that are more beneficial to all.

But the idea is that you are simply focusing on all the negative things which only increases the negative energy. You are compounding the negativity by being afraid to move forward because of what you believe to be negativity itself involved in all of those things. Don't use it as an excuse to not move forward. If you're going to allow changes to occur that are positive, you do have to take some actions, otherwise nothing happens except a re-enforcement of the negativity that you are perceiving. But getting caught up in terms of all these details.

So don't use it as an excuse to not move forward. Allow yourself to know there are ways to do things that are more positive. And if there isn't, then you have the opportunity to invent ways of doing things that are more positive, or teach others how to come together to think of new ways, using your creative imagination. That's what it is all about. So if you see something that you are vibrationally not compatible with, then do something in your creative imagination to change those things to be more vibrationally compatible with the reality that you prefer.

Don't just sit there and refuse to move because then you're just reinforcing all the negativity that you are choosing to focus on.' (Step Four, 2024)

Personal happiness and family happiness

Q.: 'Is true happiness and a family happiness contradictory?'

Bashar: 'No. You have to be your true self. All you're doing is telling yourself the same things that you're picking up from your parents, over and over and over again, because you think that to let that go would be to dishonor them.

The only way to actually honor your parents whether they understand it or not is to be who you actually are. Because who you are is going to be what creates situations and circumstances that will be of benefit to those you attract in your life, who then get to experience a relationship with the real you as opposed to experiencing a relationship with someone that you are not. Which is a way of deceiving other people.

So if you don't want to deceive other people and you want to attract people into a relationship where you are authentically you, so that they know who they are in a relationship with, it is important to let go of all of the ideas that have nothing to do with who you really are, but are only representative of the fear issues within your parents, within others of your society that have nothing to do with the authentic you. If you are truly willing to be in a real relationship with someone, you have to be your authentic self.' (Step Four, 2024)

Issues with the parents

Q.: 'My question is personal.'

Bashar: 'Well, yes. I would think so since you are a person.'

Q.: 'It has to do with my father basically.'

Bashar: 'Yes, how so?'

Q.: 'When I was younger during my childhood and everything I was raised in a way which was very controlling by him. He was strict, he was not affectionate, not emotional, never told me he loved me, everything.'

Bashar: 'Right, and?'

Q.: 'So I thought I dealt with it and later on I thought that everything was solved and in the past year it has been resurfacing again and I've been having dreams about him.'

Bashar: 'Very good, yes.'

Q.: 'And like few times I've been waking up crying.'

Bashar: 'Very good.'

Q.: 'And the last time I had some kind of anxiety attack, even a shortness of breath and everything.'

Bashar: 'Yes, this is going around.'

Q.: 'So my question is I've been trying to heal everything I had. So what would be the best way to deal with this?'

Bashar: 'Well there are many different ideas, many different approaches, many different techniques, and we can talk about a few ideas.'

Q.: 'Please go ahead.'

Bashar: 'Thank you. First of all, please understand this is normal for you humans - all right? Normal. When you are born on your world there is a great degree of limitation in terms of your ability to understand what you are doing on Earth. You forget. You are born into families and you take upon yourself the patterns of those families, unconsciously. At a certain time in your life, or times, there will be an upwelling, an upsurge of certain of those patterns. Most likely at exactly the same age or around the same age that your own parents experienced the same issues.

You will replay them in your own way, re-visit them in your own way, from your own perspective. It is part of a family agreement to look at certain issues over and over again, generation to generation, but from different perspectives, so that you add to the overall spiritual family's knowledge of all the different ways to deal in physical reality with those issues.

But primarily it is an opportunity for you to discover more and more of who you uniquely are as a person, as an individual in how you deal with this issue. It does not mean that just because you may be dealing with these issues that a particular result must occur. You may find yourself having to deal with the issue, but it doesn't mean that the result that happened for your parents has to happen for you. Do you follow me so far?'

Q.: 'I do, thanks.'

Bahar: 'Because you know you are different. You know you are coming from a different perspective, and the very fact that you can stand apart from your father and recognize what he could not give you, gives you an advantage, gives you a leg up - as you say, gives you a new perspective from which to approach these ideas you are now feeling. First and foremost, do your best to remember that when you feel those panic attacks, those anxiety moments that all it is about belief. Nothing physically is really generally going to happen to you in the negative. You understand?

Q.: 'I do, yeah.'

Bashar: 'I know it may feel to you like you may be dying, but you will not die. Some of you say: unfortunately. Nevertheless, the point is you are being given an opportunity to experience an idea, a perspective to handle it in your own unique way and for the most part - to simplify this before we go on - for the most part the purpose here is to really decide very clearly for yourself who you are as compared to who you are not. The experience gives you a better understanding of who you are not. Because the reason you're having the experience is because you are unconsciously comparing yourself to who you have been taught to believe you should be, and comparing that with who you know in your soul, in your spirit, in your heart you really are.

So this is a good thing. It means you have arrived at a place in your life where you are ready to make that comparison, ready to understand who you really are as opposed to who you are really not, which is the legacy your father gave you. a good measure of all the things you know are not who you prefer to be so that it'll be much easier for you to define who it is you do prefer to be, in short: easier to be the light when you are comparing it to the dark. You follow me?'

Q.: 'I do, yeah.'

Bashar: 'So, if you will use it that way, allow yourself in those panic attacks not to hyperventilate. Stay calm, use a paper bag if you need to to breathe into, keep yourself calm and just remember: this is an opportunity to reveal another nugget of information about yourself, and approach it with positive meaning to get a positive effect from the experience. Don't deny the feeling by all means, but recognize it is there for your purposes, for your service, for your reason - as uncomfortable as it may be for a while - you'll get past it, you'll process it, you'll get through it if you just remember that it is always for the purpose of giving yourself an opportunity to discover more of who you really are, so that you can add that to your knowledge of yourself and rise above and go beyond and expand beyond the idea that your father was limited to about what a person could be. Does this help you?’

Q.: ‘A lot, thanks so much Bashar.’

Bashar: ‘And pleasant dreams to you.’

Q.: ‘Thank you so much.’

Bashar: ‘You are welcome.’ (State of the Future Union, 2006)

Did we choose our parents?

Bashar: ‘Yes. Every single one of you, for a variety of reasons. You may not think so, but you do. It doesn’t mean that the reasons are the same for everyone, sometimes you may choose parents you have absolutely nothing in common with, but because of the situations that you will face in that particular family, it may actually catapult you in the direction that you know you need to go. Just because of those circumstances. So you choose them for a variety of reasons. That doesn’t mean that you will necessarily be vibrationally compatible with who your parents are.’ (Step Two, 2024)

What happens to the Sassani crafts at the time of death of the Sassani beings?

Bashar: ‘There are some levels of availability of certain ships to individuals who are not necessarily bonded with them in the way that a pilot might be bonded with the expression of his higher mind expressed as a ship. But if the idea of a being chooses to cross into spirit the ship goes with it because the ship being a physiological representation of the higher mind. Then the being individually blends back into it and both disappear back into spirit.’ (The Window, 2023)

What happens to the physical Essassani body upon death?

Bashar: ‘Our bodies convert completely back into energy, into electromagnetheric spiritual energy. Nothing is left.’ (The Silver Cord, 2023)

Why Have a Life without Going to Learn from the Life?

Q.: ‘Does everyone have to go through a life review?’

Bashar: ‘You don't have to. But in the afterlife there's almost no reason not to. There can be some exceptions but they are true exceptions, for a variety of reasons we will not go into now. It's almost an automatic function - just because that's the point: why have the life if you're not going to learn from the life?

Q.: ‘We're doing so much connecting with animals and nature. It's so fascinating to think of what a life review would be from a completely different perspective, being a completely different creature.’

Bashar: 'We may touch on that at some other point.'

Q.: 'It gives you more respect, I guess, in a sense for their existence and what they are also doing.'

Bashar: 'It can.'

Q.: So like a life review for a bee?

Bashar: This would be difficult to explain and so we ask you to move on.' (Reincarnation – a Deeper Explanation, 2021)

Question about the life review

Q.: 'If we have done wrong but made amends or corrected the error will it still be brought up in our life review or do we have to relive and review all our mistakes, even if we've made amends?'

Bashar: 'You will experience everything. Everything that you chose to do, both positively and negatively. So the idea of experiencing something that was negative is counterbalanced - as you say - by making amends and doing something positive. So you will get to experience both, because both are necessary for you to have the full review, the full experience and for you to really learn the lesson that will help your soul move on and expand and grow.'

Q.: 'In a world where some inflict deep suffering or control entire nations and there's no heaven or hell, how are those souls held accountable? What happens to their consciousness after death?'

Bashar: 'Again, they go through life review and experience directly the effects that they may have caused for others from the other's point of view. They will experience it as if it is happening to them. Again, this is not a judgment. It is not - in a sense - judgment in the way you mean being held accountable.

They are accountable in that they cannot escape experiencing what they have done that affected others. But they will learn lessons from it so that they can grow and move on and perhaps choose something different and more positive in the next experience that they choose to have. So accountability as you call it is built into the idea that once you are in spirit there is no separation in the same way that there is in the experience of physical reality. There are no walls between you and the others that you have affected with your choices, and therefore you feel everything as if it is happening to you, even though it originally in physical reality only seemed to happen to someone else.'

Q.: 'I could imagine this would be extremely traumatic for some souls like for example Hitler who inflicted a lot of pain and suffering.'

Bashar: 'The idea is that the soul be given an opportunity to heal, to rest to be capable of absorbing the lessons in the life review. So there may be a kind of a time out for a soul, but it is not experienced traumatically. It is experienced only traumatically in the physical form. In the spirit form the soul is allowed to balance out, to even out, to rest, to heal and thus then given the life review so that they can learn the lessons in a way that will actually benefit them in moving forward. There is no trauma in spirit.' (Explorations with Bashar, 2025)

Is the life review experienced from the level of the personality self, the soul or the oversoul?

Bashar: 'It is experienced from both, in the sense that the soul experiences it more objectively, but experiences the idea of what the personality experienced or would experience if it still existed. Because that gives context to the idea of what the personality's effect was on other personalities during the physical life experience. But the soul experiences all of that more objectively as a lesson plan rather than experiencing it directly in the way the personality of a physical being would.' (Gatherings, 2024)

What happens to the ego/personality after death

Q.: 'From the perspective of our ego and personality self, what happens when we wake up or transition out of a lifetime? Do we immediately return to full awareness of ourselves at a higher level or is there some process we go through to unwind from the lifetime and reintegrate back into a broader perspective? How do we get from A to B so to speak?'

Bashar: 'Well again, it depends. Most individuals will have an awakening to most of what they need to know. Now again, there is such a thing called a life review, which you can look at as a process that the soul may go through to understand how to absorb the lessons of the physical experience that it created for itself. So you could say that that looks like it would quote unquote take some time and be a process. But again, you're looking at that from a linear perspective. To the soul it does actually happen all at once. But again it can feel like it's something that unspools or unfolds over time.

And again, this is why we say the soul level can experience intermittent time. Sometimes it can feel like time is unfolding, sometimes things can happen instantaneously. It just depends. For the most part, in general, when you wake up in spirit back to your true self as a soul, you will have a relatively full awakening of all the things you need to know, all the questions you wanted answers to will be given to you. And in that state you will understand many things that you may not understand as a physically focused being.

But for the most part you will still maybe go through things to consider how you want to use the information for the next choices that you will make, and therefore experience again a little bit of the idea of intermittent time. And - no pun intended - at the same time you can also utilize that information to create instantaneous and simultaneous experiences in deciding what to do next.' (Step Four, 2024)

The Death Experience

Bashar: 'There are certain things that generally most of you will experience. First of all recognize that you are going beyond the normal parameters of linear space-time. There may still be the ability to create a kind of a sense of time playing out there but it's nothing like the kind of time experience you have in physical reality. In physical reality, when you think a thing, when you believe a thing you have a time lag of manifestation, of experiencing that thing to some degree.

In non-physical reality, in the spirit world you don't. Whatever you think is instantaneously manifested around you. The idea, however, is that the process is for most of your people the idea that you will suddenly float out of your body. You may recognize that your body is lying down there. You may see people gathered around. You may choose to listen in to a few things, you may choose to go to your own funeral. You may choose to visit some people. You may choose to attempt to communicate with them, sometimes they will perceive it, sometimes they will not.

You may experience what is called the tunnel of light which is actually just the way of expressing in your reality the idea of a link and a bridge between one dimension and another. And as you open up into the other dimension of spiritual reality, non-physical reality, most you may experience being greeted by the non-physical spirit counterparts of people that you have known in life, or the idea of what you call people from other lives. You may thus then experience the sensation of unconditional support and love, expansiveness.

It will be like waking up from a dream in the way that you wake up from a dream now and go 'oh, well no matter how real that dream seemed, this is actually who I am and that was just a dream'. So death will be similar to that as well. This is who I really am and physical life was just a dream. You will have what is generally called a life review. You will experience every single choice you made, every consequence of every choice you made, and you will actually feel it and everything that anyone else felt as a consequence of the choices you made as if it's all happening to you because it is all happening to you.

This will happen really in the blink of an eye, even though it may seem to be somewhat stretched out because it's an entire lifespan in the blink of a moment. But you can focus on any part of it that you wish, and you can make it seem to last however long you wish it to last. And the ideas that you will use this as a learning experience to balance yourself in recognizing the choices that you made and whether or not you really would have preferred to make a different choice or not. And you will add that perspective to your overall knowledge as a soul.

You will thus usually be greeted by some guide or representation of the idea of All-that-is and you will experience this great envelopment of love. And you will be given more choices: do you wish to go back to that life in a parallel reality and continue as if you hadn't died? Do you wish to have the experience you call reincarnation? Do you wish to move on to other dimensions, other civilizations, other realities? What do you wish to explore now? You can generally assume that most of these things will be experienced by the general majority of you, even though there can be many many different kinds of things.' (Dream a Little Dream, 2013)

Shifting and the Illusion of Re-Incarnation

Q.: 'I assume I had physical lives before this one.'

Bashar: 'Yes and no. Because you see that's the point, that's why we say everything exists now. You have never had any other life but this. The idea is it is not re-incarnation, it's multiple simultaneous incarnations and every single one of those incarnations is a different person. They are not you, you are not them. The idea is that you can create the experience of the linear life-to-life, life-to-life, life-after-life kind of experience, but that's just the perspective. It's an illusionary continuity perspective, it's not actually mechanically what's happening. Every single being and every single life is always that being, always that being. You are cross-connecting to them energetically and downloading information from those simultaneous existences whatever information you believe helps you in this life, just as all those other people in all those other lives are doing with you and other people. You cross-connect energetically and informationally to all those lives and when you make a cross-connection that way, because you live in a linear space-time experience, you perceive those cross-connections that are going on right now as memories. That's why you think they are actually happening in the past. That's why you think you've been that person, because it feels like a memory because of your space-time point of view. But it's not really a memory in the sense that it's in the past. It is actually a cross-connection happening right now because all those lives exist right now. All those people exist right now as themselves, just as you do. And that will also never change. They will always be them, you will always be you, because there is no room for you to become anyone else. Everything that exists fills existence. All the people that exist throughout all time, all space fill existence. You can't take their place, they can't take yours. Existence is full.'

Q.: 'Got you.'

Bashar: 'Does that help?'

Q.: 'It does. One last thing: I know you have said we remake ourselves moment to moment to moment, and that we can change our reality around us.'

Bashar: 'Well, you do, not you can, you do. That's automatic. You are shifting through billions of parallel reality experiences every second. That's how you create the illusion of time.'

Q.: 'And everyone is doing that independently?'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'So then how is it that you travel with someone else?'

Bashar: 'By agreement. You're creating similar experiences so that you are on a similar wavelength so that you can experience similar things simultaneously, including creating your version of them in your reality as they create their version of you in their reality and you're interacting with your version of them and they are interacting with their version of you.'

Q.: 'I have a partner that I am travelling through life with and I would really like lots of lives with them.'

Bashar: 'You have whatever serves you. You can make any number of cross-connections. But again remember, all those connections are being made from the present. And you will connect to whatever serves you. Nothing will be left out.'

Q.: 'So once this life ends...'

Bashar: 'So to speak.'

Q.: 'So to speak - and I wake up as my soul...'

Bashar: 'As your spirit self, yes.'

Q.: 'As my spirit self. Then do I go back to sleep and experience myself in another manifestation somewhere?'

Bashar: 'That's your choice, like I said: you can create the experience of reincarnation, but that's not what is actually mechanically happening with the structure of existence, that's just a point of view of the structure. It's an experience within the structure, but it is not a change of the structure.'

Q.: 'Because they are all happening simultaneously?'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'Got it.'

Bashar: 'So you are just shifting your point of view to have a different kind of an experience, but that doesn't mean the you you are now goes away. This you will always be this you, and another part of your oversoul will have an experience with this you, even if the you you think you are plays the game of pretending to have another point of view as another person. That doesn't negate the person you are now. That person always exists and the spirit version of that person always exists simultaneously. This is one of the reasons why when people die and people that are still living wonder 'why they don't show up more often?', the idea is that when you die you realize that another spirit version of the person that still has a life is already there and you are interacting with them, anyway.'

Q.: 'So you are interacting with their spirit version of them, not their physical version of them?'

Bashar: 'Yes and therefore, since they are already there why do you need to go back to the physical version unless there is a real reason to. Because again that would be like leaving your friend to go visit a portion of your friend. These are all euphemisms as they are described in your language, but I think you get the point from the illustration.'

Q.: 'I do. And the reason we don't have a clearer understanding of that soul part of ourselves is because we choose to narrow ourselves in order to explore a question in this sort of space-time reality.'

Bashar: 'Yes. Although now, because this is the transformational age, these kinds of things can come to the forefront of your consciousness and you don't have to experience quite as much limitation as you used to. That's why we are having this conversation now. Because it's possible for you to understand how to make those kinds of connections and then have the kind of limitations that are really only just those that are necessary for the themes you are exploring instead of a whole bunch more limitations that are not necessarily relevant for you to be who you truly are.'

Q.: 'Got you. We don't need as many limitations as we had in the past.' (Dream a little Dream, 2013)

Life Lineage

Q.: 'You have been speaking about choices and the choices we make in the present moment and I was wondering about what lineage means to you, what origin means to you. I mean that also in terms of thinking about myself. I do healing-based work.'

Bashar: 'It means that you are honoring a certain vibration that creates a certain past from the present upon which you can draw energy and rely upon to guide you, but at the same time understanding that you are creating that past from the present choices you are making about who you prefer to be. Does that make sense to you?'

Q.: 'That does make sense, yes. But that past – even you talk about a lineage – that past also has other entities, or other healers, or other teachers and other beings...'

Bashar: 'Yes, but everytime you change who you are you change your past and you change the versions of the beings that are part of that so-called past. Literally. There are a multitudeness of versions of many different beings. When you create from the present a particular past you may interact with one version of those beings, but when you create from the present a different past you may now be interacting with different versions of those beings. They are not the same people at all, even though they may appear to be. That's just an illusion of continuity.

But they are the appropriate vibrational people who now represent the past, the lineage, the history that you have now created from the present that you deem as appropriate to support whatever you are defining yourself to be in this moment. So the past is part of the present, but is created from it as well. And changes from moment to moment as you redefine yourself in this moment. And is always the appropriate past to whatever present you have created which also goes along with whatever the appropriate future is that also exists now.

The more that you become consciously aware of the fact that you are doing all of this now, and creating all of this from the present, the more you can also expand your awareness to be able to see the difference between the two if you wish to. So that sometimes when you truly change yourself enough you can sort of maintain a little bit of a perspective of the old parallel reality past and allow a comparison to be made with the new parallel reality past that goes along with your new present, and you can have experiences like people walking up to you, looking at you, having a double take and going 'I almost didn't recognize you, you don't look like the same person at all', that's because you are not. And people all of a sudden remembering things completely differently than they did before 'oh, no no no, you didn't go there that day, I distinctly remember you went there this day'... when you know the difference. But that's the new reality showing you how concretely you have created a new past by creating a new present.'

Q.: 'I see.'

Bashar: 'Does that help?

Q.: 'Yes, that does help. So when you talk about honoring the essence - say - of somebody who is your teacher, that essence itself is continuously changing?'

Bashar: 'Of course.'

Q.: 'I see.'

Bashar: 'Does that help you?'

Q.: 'Yes, it does.'

Bashar: 'There you get to honor all of it, all of the essence, in all forms and all versions and are honoring more of the totality and wholeness of being of any particular aspect that you may have interacted with in your life lineage.'

Q.: 'Right.'

Bashar: 'You see? So there is more to honor by bringing it all into the present, holographically. Makes sense?'

Q.: 'Yes it does make sense.'

Bashar: 'And thus then by bringing it into the present, holistically, you are also honoring yourself while honoring the totality. Because you allow the totality thus then to honor you and support you more graciously – in an attitude of gratitude as you say. Makes sense?'

Q.: 'Yes, makes sense.'

Bashar: 'Thank you.' (Slip Stream, 2010)

Question about teleportation

Bashar: 'You do not need a ship. You have to understand that you are already teleporting all the time. That's how you move. You jump from moment to moment. You teleport from moment to moment. It's just that you do it so smoothly and so quickly, you don't even know you're doing it. So getting a deeper understanding of the fact that you are already doing it, because every moment you shift to a different reality – literally - a different universe. You are teleporting constantly, even to have the experience of a movement like 'this' (hand movement) requires teleportation through billions of different parallel universes. So if you understand more deeply that you're already teleporting, you can increase your vibration to be able to perceive the rate at which you are already teleporting to create the sensation of movement, which is an illusion, and therefore by increasing your frequency you can match the frequency more readily of how you are shifting from reality to reality, and perceive that you are always teleporting. And in doing that you can learn to teleport in different ways that are more perceivable by those around you. But again, it depends on whether this is relevant for your life path'. (Countdown to Contact Year One, 2024)

How to integrate moments from the past into the present personality

Q.: 'You've explained many times that there's no past and no future, only the moment of now. And the shifting of our perspective on this now moment is experienced by us as a past because of the linear nature of our focus here on Earth. And therefore we create our experience of the past from the present. So my 8-year-old self is a completely different person with her own unique perspective and experience than let's say my 47y old self. And if this can be looked upon as parallel lives happening simultaneously but with unique personalities, how can I integrate these parallel past lives as being part of my experience in the present now moment?'

Bashar: 'By simply understanding whatever it is that is relevant in those parallel experiences, and what is not relevant for who you are now in those parallel experiences. Pulling forward and creating in the now whatever you call as memories that are still simply what you're creating in the present that you believe is relevant for your soul's continuing journey, for your idea of who you are, and what it is you are pulling from, what it is you are basing yourself on now. So, you're creating the elements of your so-called past based on what you believe is relevant for you to continue to be who you prefer to be in the present. Does that make sense, do you understand this concept?'

Q.: 'I understand what you're saying but who is deciding that, is that my higher self?'

Bashar: 'You. You are deciding that along with your higher self, because you're following a path that your soul chose to experience for its own growth. So this is why again, it doesn't have to be very complicated and you don't have to overthink it, when you simply follow the formula that we have shared with all of you, this becomes an automatic function. You will raise your vibration and you will be able to tell what is relevant for you and what is not more easily. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'Yes, that makes sense but I'm still a bit puzzled about the fact that we obviously also remember some bad things happening to us. Is that also always relevant or is that sometimes the negative belief systems?'

Bashar: 'It can be either and you have to have the discernment to tell the difference. But it's similar to the idea of the fourth step in the formula, whereas if something manifests that you objectively don't prefer, you still stay in a positive state, so you can learn a lesson from why it's there. So you can do the same thing in a so-called past direction as well. By saying 'I remember' negative events'. Stay in a positive state, so you can learn the lessons that are relevant for your soul's growth now in the present. Use it in the way you need to, to move forward. And again, by raising your vibration you'll be able to tell whether this is something that is simply a repeating of a negative energy that you're holding on to, or whether it's simply something you can learn a lesson from and then let go of.' (Step Five, 2024)

How do you see the different versions of Earth from your vantage point?

Q.: 'Do you see all the parallel Earths with different probabilities in combination or do you speak through Darryl in all the parallel Earths at the same time?'

Bashar: 'Only the ones that are relevant for us to know at any given moment. Only the ones that are relevant for different versions of us to come through different versions of the channel at any particular moment. We do not see them all because we do not need to see them all. We see the ones that are relevant for us at any given moment. It helps us calculate the idea of what information to share with what version of a parallel Earth. Because by comparison and contrast we can see in a sense what the probabilities hold for the different Earths in which information is dispensed and what effects, ripple effects, there may be from one dimension, one reality, one version to another. So you might say it's an instantaneous higher function calculation of a collective number of parallel versions of Earth that we are communicating to. But remember, this is not the only planet that we communicate with.' (The Door, 2023)

Are the Anunnaki and the Pleiadians genetically related to each other?

Bashar: 'Yes, the Pleiadians were in a sense the Anunnaki. The Anunnaki have evolved, there are no more Anunnaki in the original sense. Many of them have become the Pleiadian civilization.' (Step One, 2024)

Forgiveness of thinking you needed forgiveness in order to experience a polarized reflection of yourself

Bashar: 'In what you call the biblical literature you have the idea of the Christ Consciousness being nailed to a cross. People on your planet say 'well, he died for your sins'. What that really means is that when he said 'Father forgive them for they know not what they do' he was expressing the idea specifically that the energy of forgiveness would mitigate the negative consequences for all the people that had actually done that to him. That's what forgiving you for your sins means. That's what the phrase means is that he died for your sins by teaching you in the middle of that act, in the middle of what people had done, teaching that forgiveness was his way of actually relieving them of any negative consequences of the choices that they made to do that to him. That's what that means. So it was a very profound act of compassion and a very great teaching lesson if you understand what the lesson actually was and you understand what forgiveness is. Does that help?'

Q.: 'Yeah, and on that note: I'm in the Course in Miracles right now.'

Bashar: 'Oh all right.'

Q.: 'And so that forgiveness is a huge thing. I'm very interested in the idea of the first separation and the forgiveness of that separation as it is discussed in that book.'

Bashar: 'Well, the idea of the first separation is what we have typically referred to as the Angelic realm. The first reflection of All-that-is of itself can in some senses be said to be what became the recognition of the Angels. The so-called idea of forgiveness enters this equation only in the sense of knowing that there is really nothing to forgive within the idea of simply experiencing yourself from a different point of view. And that by adding the negative polarity into the equation is where it comes into thinking that forgiveness is needed. So the forgiveness in this sense, in this context as you mean it is the forgiveness of thinking you needed forgiveness in order to experience a polarized reflection of yourself. Because it's simply one way to experience yourself and there is nothing necessarily negative about using negativity in a positive way, and therefore there is nothing to forgive, if that is the way it is used. Does that make sense? Does that help?'

Q.: 'Yeah, it very much does.'

Bashar: 'All right, thank you. I forgive you for asking the question. No, no, no forgiveness required.' (The Black Box, 2014)

Questioner's Frequency

Bashar: 'Right now about 145 to 157,000 cycles per second.'

Q.: 'Okay.'

Bashar: 'Does that really tell you anything?'

Q.: 'I just think like compared to Jesus and Buddha and then your vibration...'

Bashar: 'Well, Jesus and Buddha were up in the 300,000 cycles per second range, because they were truly being more of All-that-is. None of you are going to be in that range for a little while. You can be, but you're going through processes to recognize the awakening of the Christ Consciousness and the Buddha Nature within each of you. That's what those messages were all about. You are all Buddhas, you are all Christs. Because you are all children of God.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

I am-ness

Q.: 'Can you expand on the concept of a 'you' - like when I say 'I'. Is my consciousness separate from my personality and how do they relate? **'

Bashar: 'It's not separate, but your personality is an aspect of your overall consciousness. This is why we say when you ask certain questions you have to know what level you're coming from when you say 'I', or 'You'. Because again, the personality version of you can ask a question and you can say 'I', or the soul in a sense can be asking the question, and then that's the 'I' you are referring to, the greater being, or the oversoul in a sense can be asking the question, and then you're coming from that level of 'I'.

So for example, we often use the concept of the experience of reincarnation to illustrate this point. You can say as a physical person: 'was I another person in another life?' As a physical person: no, you were not. You are the physical person you are, other physical people exist at the same time, because time is an illusion. It doesn't mean the experience of time isn't real, but time itself is an illusion, created by your consciousness to experience physical reality. So all physical beings, all physical personalities, all exist at the same time on different frequencies. And if someone exists at the same time you do, then your personality can not also be their personality. The two are individual personalities.

The soul is also an individuation to some degree. So each personality has its own soul. But the oversoul is a multitude of souls, and therefore a multitude of personalities. So the oversoul can say 'I' have this personality and 'I' have that personality and 'I' have that personality simultaneously. But the individual soul and the physical personality cannot really say 'I' also was that person. So it depends on what level you're coming from, what level the question is coming from that determines what version of 'I' or 'You' is being referred to. So more discernment about the fact that those exist as different perspectives, as different levels will help address and alleviate the confusion that may come up when someone asks such a question, by determining what level of 'I' are they coming from when they ask it.' (Step One, 2024)

The Five Hybrid Races – Bashar's Gift to Humanity (I/II)

Bashar: 'I'll say good day to you this day of your time, how are you all? All right, thank you. First and foremost once again, we thank each and every one of you individually and all of you together collectively for the opportunity to share this transmission with you at this time. It is a great gift that you give to our civilization in allowing us to experience through each of you that many more facets of the multi-dimensional crystal of creation. We would like to begin this transmission in the following way: we have titled this transmission 'The Five Hybrid Races', but that's not what we're going to talk about.

We're going to talk about far more than five. We are going to give you now at this time a little bit bigger picture of the path of the evolution on Earth and where it's heading, incorporating the idea of the five hybrid races within this overall picture, but beginning sooner and going further so that you have a better map, a better understanding of what Earth is participating in on a grander scale at this time.

Now, before we begin to explain this map, this path, the phases that are involved in what has brought you to this point and what will take you further as a species, we are going to allow briefly, we're going to help facilitate briefly another being to come through for a few moments to give you a list of names. You may not understand what this list is at first. Many of them will sound foreign to you, that's all right. After the list has been delivered we will go over the list again and explain what each of these names is a reference to. Give us a moment:

Aanu wequadesh adama e'wa mass'e massani thathani shaya'el yaya'el sha'le naya e'nanika anu'het

All right, now that you have this list let us begin at the beginning and explain what each of these mean. As we have discussed from time to time the Anu are a race of extraterrestrial beings that came to your world hundreds of thousands of years ago. And without going too much more deeply into the story than what we have already imparted to you, suffice to say the Anu, or as many of you refer to them in ancient text as the Anunnaki, were responsible for infusing their genetic material into the naturally evolved hominid species on your planet that you often refer to as Homo erectus and various similar types of early human form. And with the infusion of their DNA into Homo erectus thus created what you now consider yourselves to be as Homo sapiens – human.

Now, the second word, wequadesh, is a reference to this early hominid form, Homo erectus as you call it, in the ancient tongue. `Wequa' means seed, `desh' means template. So it is the seed template that was used to create Homo sapiens. The initial manifestation in the ancient tongue `Adama' again translated in some of your stories as the idea of Adam. The idea then as related metaphorically in some of your early literature, your religious literature, your early scrolls and texts, the idea of the creation of the female form by the utilization of the early male form of Adama to create the female representation of the E'wa, or Eva, or Eve, the idea being that this represents - no offense, gentlemen - but the E'wa represents the first hybridization upgrade of the human form. I know that many of the females in the audience are pleased to hear this.

Therefore, with the Adama and the E'wa you then had the basic idea of the male and female human forms. It does not mean that there were not female forms in the Wequadesh, in the Homo erectus, just that the way in which the female Homo sapiens was created by the Anu utilize the initial template of the Adama to make sure that it would be, as you say in your language, a hybridization upgrade.

Now, once that existed, once the human forms existed in what you recognize as your present male and female forms and the human race began to flourish and replicate and spread, remember that we have told you the story of another parallel Earth reality that destroyed their world and that the humans on that world became mutated into the form you call the Grays, and because they had mutated in such a way, hybridized themselves in such a way to be able to survive on their destroyed version of Earth, they were no longer able to reproduce.

And they knew that they would die out if they did not seek out somehow, somewhere a viable source of still existing human DNA. They used their advanced technology as we have told you before to tunnel into various parallel reality versions of Earth, including yours, to find viable human DNA to infuse with themselves to create hybrid civilizations that would allow their culture to continue and not die out. But the idea of the early Gray in a sense, because it was something that was created that changed them into a form that could adapt to their dying world, in a sense is the first hybrid race.

The Grays in the ancient tongue are the Mass'E. The Mass'E are what came into your parallel reality and began the hybridization agenda. So the Mass'E, the Grays formed the first hybrid race. The first hybridization level or phase that followed the Mass'E, or Gray beings, is what we call the Massan'i. These are what many people in these encounters have recognized as the tall Grays. So they are the next stage of hybridization from the Grays that began to incorporate human DNA and allowed them to begin to change to something a little bit closer to resembling the idea of a hybrid that could continue their species.

But it still was not sufficient for a number of reasons. But they were the second hybrid race and in a sense phase one of the hybridization agenda. After that came our civilization, the Ssassani. So we are the third hybrid race. We are representative of a 50:50 balance between the Grays, the Maas'E and the humans on your world and other worlds like yours. We are physically and representationally halfway between the Grays and what you consider yourselves to be as Homo sapiens. We are here as you can see, to share information with you because we are family, we are genetically connected. You are in many ways our ancestors and we are your descendants and we will get to that point a little bit more deeply in a moment.

The next phase is what was called the Sha ya'el. This is something that is a little bit more human in appearance but still containing various aspects of what you consider to be hybrid beings. They still have much larger eyes than you, they are relatively slender like us but a little bit more toward the human form that you are familiar with. Now, the Sha ya'el, the fourth hybrid race, act in many ways as guides for the fifth hybrid race, the Ya ya'el, who are much more human-like and that's why they are going to be the first hybrid species of the five hybrid races that would have open contact with your civilization.

They look more or less human, they may still exhibit a few of the ideas of hybrid traits that would make them a little bit different than what you consider a normal or natural human to look like. But nevertheless, the fourth hybrid race, the Sha ya'el will act in a sense as guides and organizers to help with the agenda of acclimatization for the Ya ya'el to be able to interact with your world when open contact begins, so they are working very closely together that way.

What follows the Ya ya'el is what has been termed the 'Sha la naya', which in the ancient tongue is the first ones. The first ones being what you typically refer to as the hybrid children that live on the ships that will ultimately be returned to Earth to live among you and begin the process of allowing Earth to blend into and evolve into the sixth hybrid race eventually. This is what we refer to as the next word in the list the Enanika.

Now, we have initially told you that our ancient word for Earth is Enani which basically means the ancestors. But more specifically it was in its ancient form more E'nadaea, Enanik'a, which means the place of the ancient mothers. Again, that's a more literal translation which has now been condensed over time simply into Enanika which is the ancestor spirits. But in this case spirit not only representing the idea by the word 'ka' of what you consider normal spirit to be, but also the idea of essence - and in this case a literal reference to DNA. So it is the idea of the ancestor DNA and that which will allow there to be a blending, a harmonization and a continuing of evolution for Earth to become the sixth hybrid race.'

The Five Hybrid Races – Bashar's Gift to Humanity (II/II)

'Now, we have previously also told you that there would be ultimately a seventh hybrid race that would be a blending of all the other six. This will be a new type of being that will represent a very different way of existing in physical reality that will exhibit many traits of spirits and other dimensions, will have an interesting expression of power and passion and peace that will explore and unify many different star systems, many different galaxies in time.

So Earth is forming the last foundational component for the seventh hybrid race, which on the list is referred to as Het or Anu Het, which means they are the conclusion of the cycle, the grand cycle that was begun by the Anunnaki and ends with the Anu Het and brings forth a new species as we said, of power, passion and peace.

Now, this all goes toward the understanding of the real transformation that's taking place on your planet. This entire cycle is really what the transformation is all about. This upgrade, this uplift, this ascension into new forms, new expressions of great power and passion and peace and benefit and creativity and unconditional love that can ignite a new wave of experience and a new series of civilizations within your star system, other star systems and the galaxy and other galaxies. This is the beginning of a new cycle with the Anu Het, a new form of the Anunnaki for a different purpose of expanding creation in a new and unique way, in a much broader way, in a much more expanded way.

And this then brings us to be capable this day of explaining to you that in terms of our gifts of sharing information with you, this is the true gift that we bring you. Because by being able to share with you all of these different principles and help you understand the nature and structure of existence in the form that we have expressed it as a type of instruction manual and tool kit that allows you to more easily apply these principles in your physical reality and make the kinds of positive and powerful changes that you wish to make in your lives, the real gift is that because we noticed that your planet was heading down the same path as the alternate Earth that destroyed themselves and turned into the Grays the Mass'E, the real gift is that in giving you this information which the other world did not have, the other Earth did not have, with this information you get to skip all the intervening phases the Mass'E, the Massani, the Sassani version of yourselves, the Sha ya'el, the Ya ya'el, the Shalanaya. You get to go straight from the idea of being human into being Enanika, the uplifted version of yourselves - skipping over literally thousands of years of necessary evolution.

That's the gift that we're actually giving to you by sharing this information with you to highly accelerate your ability to become the sixth hybrid race without going through what that alternate version of Earth went through in creating or needing to create all those different phases to bring themselves back into balance, back into center. You can skip all of that by applying the information we share with you. That is our gift to you.

So, this is our explanation at this time of where you fit into this overall map, this overall picture, and that you are now accelerating - for those who wish to align with it well on your way to becoming Enanika and accelerating toward the idea of open contact with the Shalanaya, the children, the hybrid children that have been created that are waiting to join your world, that are now acclimatizing to the understanding of living on earth, as you are acclimatizing to the idea of sharing the world with other beings from the stars, so that you yourselves can also create the world you prefer, the version of earth you prefer, and also expand yourself to the stars and become a space.faring race as well.

We thank you for allowing us to share this updated information with you this day of your time, and in return for the gift that you are giving to us I ask you now in what further way may we be of service to you. Please begin with your sharings comments and questions if you wish.' (The Five Hybrid Races, 2018)

The past does not create the present, the present creates the past - you are not connected in any way, shape, or form to anything that you do not deem to be connected to, that you do not choose to be connected to

Bashar: 'We would like to continue this dialogue this day of your time with another idea that is a little bit more of a reinforcement of the concept of being in the moment, understanding that every change is a complete change and that knowing that every change you make, every change you make, no matter how small you may deem it to be is a total change, a complete change and that it is a representation of the fact that you are with every change literally, literally, literally a new person in that new moment, having no connection to the other person you were a moment ago.

And the reason for this and what we would like to reinforce about this now is because whatever it is you deem yourself to be here and now, whatever changes you make and whatever new definitions you have of yourself are the definitions of this moment. And 'You', the you you are right now never were the other person. Never ever ever. Every moment is discreet. Every moment is unique. Every moment only exists now. And as we have said a few times, what you may perceive in your physical reality as a succession of moment to moment to moment to moment is all the same one moment, because there's only one moment in creation and that's now.

It is all the same one moment from different points of view, expressed in a linear mode because that's the definition of physical reality. Nevertheless, understand this: what you experience as remembering your past, even in this life, who you believe you were a moment ago even though this doesn't happen, you are who you are now, you have never existed for this now. You were not anyone else a moment ago, except in the larger sense, the larger sense of the bigger you that contains all the moments, all the lives, all the separate expressions of the whole entity.

But speaking on a personality level, as a person, the person you are now is here and now for the very first time, and this person never was any other person. The idea therefore of the experience you have of remembering yourself a moment ago as you think you used to be, is a relationship you create from the present with another person and in honoring and sending unconditional love, in honoring that person for the state they represent of the total being that you are, you make a connection of continuity to them from now.

They do not influence you from then, you do not come forward from then, being influenced literally by the experience they have in their reality. You make the connection from the now to them and you honor them and love them and in so doing draw upon and include the idea of their experience into the definition of your experience of yourself here and now. But there is actually no literal continuity in time. The past does not create the present, the present creates the past.

So understand that right here right now you are this person for the very first time and you have never, never, never, never been anyone else. The idea is that as you begin to realize that all of the supposed versions of you you think you have been, are actually discreetly different people, you can begin to really decide more clearly who you are, who you want to be.

And in so being decide consciously to make the connections you want to make to the so-called past or future selves that are simultaneously coexistent with you side by side as your ability to draw from their experiences to create the definition of your present here and now, just as other beings that you might call other versions of you might be doing with you, by honoring you, connecting to you, acknowledging and recognizing your existence consciously and making the connection to draw from your experience to decide whether or not your experience is apropos for the experience and definition that they are choosing to be in their now-moment.

But that's a different person, totally, absolutely, completely on every different level. So, we would like to simply point this out to you so that when your mind can in a sense get a handle on this idea, it will function as a very powerful tool of transformation for you to understand that you are not connected in any way, shape, or form to anything that you not deem to be connected to, that you do not choose to be connected to. You define yourself in the 'Here and Now' utterly and absolutely, and that is that as they say in your language.' (Is there a Santa Claus?, 1996)

Shroud of Turin

Bashar: 'It is real. It is an impression of the body of Jesus. When it elevated vibrationally it left an impression in the cloth, when it transitioned from one state to another. It was a high vibration that created a certain effect in the cloth that imprinted the form of the body within the cloth. Transition to a higher state, yes, you would call it a resurrection, but it was really a shift to a higher state of being and coming out as a quasi-physical being. Shifting to a higher state of physical reality that gives off a form of energy, a higher vibrational frequency felt by all those who came in contact with that form of Jeshua, who then ascended by simply shifting the vibration even higher and disappearing into another realm, another reality, a spirit realm, which was perceived by humans as if rising from the earth. But what was actually happening was a shifting of the vibration into the spirit realm.' (Step One, 2024)

Pleiadian base underneath Mount Shasta

Bashar: 'Shasta has a Pleiadian base under the mountain.' (Dominoes Day 2, 2025)

Prayers for world peace

Q.: '(We believe that offering prayers for world peace is deeply meaningful as our contribution on this occasion. We would like to join together as companions and with pure heart offer our prayers for humanity.'

Bashar: 'Your prayers are important but they must be done in concert with action. Because your world is physical as an experience and physical action will magnify and solidify the idea of the prayers that you create. So prayers are important, but more important is doing them in concert with the actions that go along with creating peace on your planet (Dominoes Day Two, 2025)

1 to 1 reflections and the role of others

Q.: 'I've heard you speak about how physical reality is a mirror and how we sometimes hold onto beliefs that are not ours. Can you go into more detail about this? If physical reality is a mirror how did beliefs not reflective of my core frequency come from others in my society? I am trying to reconcile 'you get what you give' or 'what you put out is what you get back'

Bashar: 'The idea is that reflections, even though you're using that word, are not one-to-one reflections as in a literal mirror. The idea is to understand that you can attract someone into your life who may be completely vibrationally incompatible with what you prefer, because you are willing to assist them. The reflection is they're giving you an opportunity to reflect your willingness to be of assistance in providing them other options, other than the paths and the choices that they may be taking or making. So don't confuse the idea of the word 'reflection' for the concept that someone coming into your life who doesn't operate or make choices the same way you do, is actually representative of what you're doing. That's not often the case. They may simply be representative of your willingness to be of assistance to them, to help them take another path. So reflection doesn't mean absolute one-to-one reflection.' (Reflections, 2023)

I am that I am and all reflections are me. Therefore, none can be false before me for I am 'All-that-is'

Bashar: 'Good Day. This transmission is called 'The Archetypes of God'. And what we mean by this is: you have many names for the idea of what you call 'God': God, Goddess, Allah, Jehova, Technogramatron, the Light, the 'I am That I Am', Wakan Tanka.

It doesn't really matter what it is that you use as a name to identify the concept of 'All-that-is', but it is important to understand that all of these names represent different archetypal expressions, different angles and different perspectives of the same one thing so that all of your apparently separate religions, no matter how they present themselves, no matter how many symbols they use to represent the idea of God or aspects of God are all talking about the same thing, but from different points of view that serve the uniqueness of the culture in which they live.

But the idea is to understand that it all comes from Source, it all is within the Light. And the Light, Source, All-that-is expresses itself in all these ways in order for there to be sufficient symbols for all the different cultural experiences on your planet, all the different individual experiences, even within a culture on your planet. As we have said, the misinterpretation of what you have called in one particular judaeo-christian culture 'The Ten Commandments' are really the messages that were delivered in a very different way that have been misunderstood, misquoted, because of the level of understanding that existed in the culture at the time.

And the so-called first commandment 'I am the Lord your God, thou shalt not have false Gods before me' really was a mistranslation and misunderstanding of the idea that really would be more accurately represented as 'I am that I am and all reflections are me. Therefore, none can be false before me for I am 'All-that-is'. So the idea is to understand that All-that-is presents itself in a variety of archetypal forms, the Father energy, the Mother energy, God, Goddess, All-that-is, as you sometimes say, and these serve various functions and translate into your reality as - shall we say - smaller representations of All-that-is that are specifically designed to deal with specific cultural differences, specific ideology differences, specific individual interpretations and differences.

Fundamentally speaking, the archetypes are All that is's way of making sure that no matter what angle you approach All-that-is from, you will have a symbol and a representation that can serve your unique perspective. They are all true parts of All-that-is because there is nothing outside of All-that-is. Anything you can experience as an archetypal representation or even when you assume it is the entire representation of All-that-is, is true and accurate because All-that-is is everything that can possibly be. There is no outside to it. There is nothing that is not it.

So, it doesn't really matter how you relate, what relationship you form with the idea of any presentation of All-that-is, any idea or formation of the idea of God, be it the old man with the long beard, be it the idea of the virgin mother, be it the idea of a rock or a mountain, it matters not to All-that-is because All-that-is is all those things, and more, beyond even your imagining. For All-that-is and its archetypal presentations also forms the symbols that are relatable to not only your particular human culture, but many cultures throughout the cosmos, throughout infinity, anything and everything being a reflection of All-that-is has its own way of understanding the presentation of archetypes from Source, has its own representations that make sense to their culture, so there are an infinite variety of presentations of All-that-is, but it is still the same one thing fundamentally.

But as you expand your consciousness and start to realize that all of these are different faces of the same thing, as many people on your planet have expressed: 'the nine billion names of God' are still representatives of the same one thing in the holographic, multidimensional presentation that it can use to present itself, then you start to allow those differences to sort of melt away except for the parts you feel you need, and allow yourself to have a direct relationship, more directly with Source, without necessarily needing it to be anything but the Light.

And in that Light you feel the vibration of the eternal existence that it is, the vibration you translate as the unconditional love of God. This is the vibrational frequency of existence itself, it is unconditionally supporting, unconditionally loving. And the idea is that there is no judgement in this. There is no expression of the negative in this. So even when individuals in different cultures might express or experience the idea of negative or demonic experiences, you have to understand this is still all part of God. Because there is the positive, there is the negative, and there is the neutral. These are the major archetypal energies and they can be expressed in a variety of ways that can serve either positive or negative meaning.

So allow yourself to lessen the differences in a sense, use them in whatever way serves you, use them in whatever way allows you to learn the lessons you need to learn for the agreements that you chose to experience, the challenges that you created for yourself in this life to learn who you are and grow in various situations, again, using the positive and negative mechanism in a variety of ways. For ultimately again, when you return to spirit, when you remember more of who you are, it will just be an experience. You will experience the archetypal expression of your life which is another archetypal expression because each and everyone of you is unique, and you form your own archetypes for others to connect to, to draw upon, to download information from and experience from the archetype that you are of 'All-that-is', because everyone is All-that-is experiencing itself as all of the individualities that you believe yourself to be. So, you are also an archetype of All-that-is, an archetype of God experiencing itself in a unique way. Knowing itself from a unique perspective.

There will be more about this concept in a future transmission in a way that you can more readily apply in your physical reality experience. But for now just let it settle in to you that every single thing you see, every single thing you experience in a sense is an archetypal presentation of All-that-is, the trees, the rocks, the streams, the animals, the sky, the Moon, the Stars, the Earth itself, are all different variations and different expressions of All-that-is, of Source, of the Light, and you yourself are also an archetype of God.

We thank you for allowing us to share this concept with you this day of your time, and we ask now in return how may we be of service to you.' (Archetypes of God, 2021)

Bashar's view of consciousness

Bashar: 'Consciousness is the awareness of existence itself. It is what existence is. It is aware of itself and that is consciousness. And everything is a part of existence, everything is a reflection of existence. And that reflection creates self-awareness, and self-awareness is consciousness. It is a reflection. Let me put it to you this way: there is the concept called 'the One'. It is unbroken, it is homogenous, it has no separation, it is unaware of itself because there is nothing else but it.

So in the One is created a pattern of energy, so to speak, a reflective pattern that creates the appearance of 'something other than' the One. As soon as you have this idea, this appearance of something 'other than' then you automatically have the creation of awareness of 'self' other than what it is you are experiencing. So it is the very concept of 'other-than-ness' that creates self-awareness as different from the other. And as soon as that exists within a pattern you have consciousness, because all consciousness is self-awareness. But it requires that reflection of 'otherness', that which you deem not necessarily to be the self that creates the reinforcement of the self as different from it. Is this making some sense to you?

We understand that this is an interesting concept that doesn't necessarily completely translate into your human language but that's about the closest approximation we can make.' (Step One, 2024)

Were mantis insects designed by the Mantis extraterrestrials?

Bashar: 'The mantis insect was not designed by the Mantis beings, but synchronistically the Mantis beings are aware of the fact that there is a kind of synchronous connection between the DNA of the mantis insect and the Mantis being that can be used as a communication conduit. It's not an accident that the mantis insects exist on your planet since Earth is involved in the hybridization program. But it's not like the mantis insect was designed by the Mantis beings. It is simply that which from a spirit level was determined would be an opportunity for the Mantis beings to represent their communication by a life form that would exist on Earth. You could say, I suppose, that it was all designed from spirit if you want to look at it that way, but it wasn't directly designed by the Mantis beings.' (The Art of the Challenge, 2025)

If everything is here and now how can you explain past life regression?

Bashar: 'It's simply a technique that takes advantage of your understanding of linear time. It doesn't mean that it actually exists that way as a mechanism. But it takes advantage of the way you think of things. Because as you connect to others who simultaneously exist to you from a linear perspective you treat that connection as if it's a memory. That's how it translates into physical reality. Therefore doing past life regression takes advantage of the way in which you think of, in the way in which you perceive the connections that are happening right now, but are being translated as a memory.' (The Window, 2023)

Soul, Dreams and Physical Reality

Q.: 'I've heard you say that we are in our spirit realm right now and our physical realm is actually just us dreaming in here.'

Bashar: 'Yes, it happens within your soul. Your soul is your soul, it never leaves the spirit realm. That's your natural state. So physical reality is simply something going on within a part of your soul - let's just say for ease of illustration - in the center of your soul, your soul being a sphere of energy rippling down into the center certain vibrations that create this concentrated focus at the center of your soul that you call physical reality as an experience. So it's happening within your soul.

Q.: 'So if our physical form is kind of us dreaming in physical form what is it when we fall asleep at night and have these other dreams that don't always make sense to us when we wake up?'

Bashar: 'It can be many different things. Some of it can be processing the information from the experiences of the physical reality. Some of it can be expanding back out a little bit and actually having astral experiences that then get interpreted by the physical mind in certain symbolic ways that it can make sense out of or can't make sense out of, because it's something that happened in a different dimension that doesn't relate to physical reality and that's why the dream may seem a little bit disjointed or crazy, because it can't interpret fully what the astral experience was. So it can be for a variety of different reasons.' (Facing Your Demons, 2024)

Question about Coma

Q.: 'What are people in comas experiencing? Why are they unable to pass away? When the family of people who are in a coma provides life support, does that take away the person's free will to leave or pass away?Bashar: 'No, it's part of their life path. Many people in what you perceive as a coma are actually having astral projections, are very aware of an experience that they are having on another plane of existence. Some of them will choose to come back, some of them will choose to go on. It depends on what they have chosen for their life path. The choice you are making to keep them on life support or not is part of the choices they have made and agreements with others for their life path.' (Explorations With Bashar, 2025)

Question about the TR3B

Bashar: 'That's a human-made version, a human-made copy of a triangle ship, similar to the ones that we use and other civilizations use, but is a human-built version. It's quite limited.'

Q.: 'You've talked quite a bit about your ships which seem much more exciting.'

Bashar: 'They're of a different technology, what you might refer to simply as something more advanced and can do different things than the human-made versions.'

Q.: 'Are the human-made versions just trying to sort of emulate that?'

Bashar: 'They are, although again, quite limited by your understanding of technology. You need a quantum leap in understanding to emulate the ships that we actually use.' (The Window, 2023)

The TR3B:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Black_triangle_\(UFO\)#::~:~:text=The%20%22TR%2D3B%20ASTRA%22,of%20desert%20in%20southern%20California.#::~:~:text=The%20%22TR%2D3B%20ASTRA%22,of%20desert%20in%20southern%20California.)

You are currently a playing piece in a game of chess exploring themes and challenges for the game player, i.e.: the higher mind

Bashar: 'All right, we will say good day to you all this day of your time. We thank you once again for allowing us the opportunity to create and co-create this transmission with you this day of your time. We would like to begin this transmission by titling it 'A Game of Chess.'

Now, we have talked about the idea of different levels of consciousness that are relevant for your experience in physical reality, beginning with the idea of the oversoul which has extensions that would create individuated souls or spirits if you wish, which then in order to experience physical reality creates a specific extension of itself, a specific aspect of itself, a specific presentation of itself called the higher mind that will become half - in a sense - of the person that will experience the idea of physical reality.

The higher mind in thus then choosing particular themes to experience, particular challenges to transform in that physical reality, in creating that so-called destiny for the physical mind to follow that hallway, that pathway that the physical mind will take, even though the physical mind will have its own free will as to how to walk that path, the higher minds choosing in a sense the souls, choosing through the higher mind of the particular experience it wishes to have, creates the kind of path or destiny that the physical mind will experience.

In order for the physical mind to experience that path, that theme of exploration, the higher mind will then by using what is called the template level reality, the blueprint level that is used to create the outlines of the physical reality experience - if you wish, the draft of the experience - it uses that template level to create the playing field that the physical mind will play in.

And from there creates and steps part of itself down into the vibration of the collective mind which contains the collective agreements of the physical reality that is being experienced by the physical mind, and then the individual agreement level that determines the agreement that the individual has with the collective in playing out its scenario.

And thus then down into the components of the physical mind itself, the belief systems the emotions the thoughts that together create the behaviors that are representative of the physical persona, the physical personality that becomes the other half of the whole person, being constructed of the physical mind and the higher mind with all these intervening layers creating the playing field and the individual and collective agreements that the physical mind will use to explore the theme that the higher mind has chosen.

Now, knowing that that is the basic structure from oversoul to individual soul to higher mind to template level reality to collective agreement to individual agreement and down into the physical personality levels, you will find that there is an analogy that can be made by using the game of chess, or perhaps many different kinds of games, but for the purposes of this communication chess may be the most apt analogy and we will use that.

You can in a sense look at thus then from this analogy of chess that the oversoul is the level of your consciousness that plays many different games at once. Not only a multitude of chess games but a multitude of other kinds of games as well, each game name being representative of a life experience, an incarnation, a projection of the oversoul into some sort of reality where it is playing out some sort of theme and exploratory path. So the oversoul plays a multitude of games all at once. But each of those multitudes, each of those individuated games is thus then - shall we say - the purview, the domain of an individual aspect of the oversoul, the individualized soul that is focused on one idea, one particular style of game, in this case by our analogy a game of chess.

Now the higher mind thus then is created to be in a sense the game player to strategize, to understand the playing field, to have the broad view as it were of the game. And thus then, in continuing this analogy, the higher mind uses the template level reality, the blueprint level to create the game board, what you are familiar with in a sense, again by analogy, as the chess board with its 64 squares of alternating color.

Thus once laying out the board, it thus then allows itself to project into the level of the collective agreement. The level of the collective agreement consciousness thus then defines the rules in general of the game, of the overall game. So once the template level has been used to create the playing board, the collective is used to create the idea of what rules are germane for the playing of this game, what reality game are we playing here, what is appropriate and relevant for this particular game we are going to experience and what is not relevant for that particular game.

That is decided upon in the collective agreement consciousness. Such examples, such simplistic examples of the collective agreement rules for this game in your physical reality are such things as generally speaking most of you will experience the concept you call gravity. You will experience the concept you call space and time. As a physical being you will experience the concept of needing and requiring the idea of sleep, the idea of food, the idea water and so on and so forth, in order to perpetuate your ability to continue to play the game.

Now, sometimes those rules can be bent a little bit, but generally speaking the overall collective agreement rules will be abided by by most people playing this game, because it allows you the opportunity to simply put something on automatic, to put the rules on automatic, so you don't have to think about them constantly and constantly consciously create them in order to play the game.

This gives you the opportunity to actually simply focus on playing the game instead of constantly wondering exactly what the parameters are, what the rules are. So once you learn the rules, once you instill the rules within you in an automatic sort of second nature way, then you can simply be on about learning to play the game better and better, more precisely, more clearly. Now once the collective rules of the game have been created in the collective mind level of consciousness it is time to define the idea of exactly what piece you are going to be.

And thus then in the individual agreements, the individual agreement level you will create the rules for that piece: how does that piece move, what is its position on the board, how does it relate to the other pieces? This thus then is created for the individual on that level of the why and wherefore the concept of what you are as a playing piece, what skills, talents, abilities that you have to give to the game.

Your ability to view your relationship to other playing pieces is created in this individual agreement level as it relates to the collective agreement so that you will understand exactly how you fit in the game, where you belong in the game, how it is you will move in the game so that you can take full advantage by learning your style of movement, take full advantage of the strategy of the piece that you are being, and make sure that your movements are impactful and effective in creating the experience of the game that has been in that sense laid out for you by the higher mind and the board and the collective rules.

Again, not that the piece doesn't have individual will, but it's going to use its individual will to best express, best exemplify the capabilities it has been designed to have as the individual playing piece. And so it will know its own rules, who it is, what it is, its own identity, and that's why it's very important to get in touch with the idea of - in a very clear way - who and what each individual is, to know their identity, to know what they are all about, to know what path they are on.

Thus then clearly knowing that will allow each individual piece to interact with every other individual piece in a way that allows the game to be played in the most fun way, in the most challenging way, in the most strategic way, in the most impactful way, in the most expanding way, in the most satisfying way. Because it is about the relationship of all the pieces to each other that allow the game to be what it is and allows for different opportunities for each piece to play different strategies in every single game that it plays, within the game, every single opportunity that it acts on, every single path of excitement that it follows, every single door that it walks through.

Thus then again, once this has been determined of what the game board is, what the general rules are what the individual rules are for the piece, now the physical personality is created which is analogous to the actual piece itself. Thus you find that the qualities of the physical playing piece, the physical qualities, the shape and so on and so forth, the material it is made out of, the size and so on, correspond in the idea to the physical personality in the physical body. And thus those qualities are also to some degree part and parcel of the game.

And thus by knowing the shape the shape can be handled properly, it can be moved properly in the proper way, smoothly throughout the game. It can be moved with finesse and in the idea of the beliefs and the emotions, the thought patterns that together form the physical personality, the behavior of that piece, thus then is the complete chess game revealed. And then, once all those components are in place you can play the game in the most efficient way possible, once you have really learned the rules, taken them to heart.

Once you know who you are, taken that to heart. Once you understand the piece that you have become, that you have extended yourself as into the physical reality game. Once you understand the layout of the board and all these things and your relationship to the other pieces. then you can play the game in a very efficient, very fun way, very expanding way. And you can learn from every move you make and from every response you get how to play the game better and better and better, more efficiently, more smoothly, more broadly.’ (A Game of Chess, 2013)

Why don't we know more about ancient civilizations such as Atlantis or Lemuria?

Bashar: ‘Many many of these civilizations - because Earth is a planet of certain cycles and natural things that happen - then many of these civilizations have been erased from the earth, wiped out by natural disasters. Atlantis for example was inundated by the impact of a comet in the Atlantic Ocean, which created a tsunami which wiped it out. And therefore there's very little evidence of it left except in a few places on your planet that you will ultimately discover where records have been stored. So it will come to light. Now also, when open contact occurs, one of the gifts that certain extraterrestrials will bring to Earth and give to humanity is an actual record of your entire Earth's history, holographic projections of everything. You will get to see what Atlantis looked like and all the civilizations that existed before and what happened to them. Because a record has been made of all of it. Now do remember, in the appropriate state you all have access to that information as well from what you call the Akashic records, which is just another way of saying information is completely and eternally embedded in the fabric of space and time and existence. So you can all access that, but we will give you a literal recording of it, anyway.’ (Believing Is Seeing, 2025)

Atlantis and Mu/Lemuria

Q.: ‘You've spoken about Atlantis but I heard about Mu, Lemuria for the first time from your channelings. Can you provide us with information about them beyond the idea that they were rivals with the Atlanteans?’

Bashar: They weren't really rivals in the sense that you might mean that today. The idea is that Atlantis was an offshoot or a colony eventually. But you have to understand that Mu existed in the Western South Pacific Ocean and by migrating to what you now recognize as North America were responsible for creating many of the indigenous cultures in North, Central and South America that eventually migrated across the continent to create Atlantis as a colony that existed much, much later than Mu. While some Lemurians still existed at the beginning of Atlantis, almost none existed by the end of Atlantis because of different changes physiologically, geologically that took place on your planet that broke up the land masses in what you now consider to be the Eastern Asian areas, South Pacific areas, creating islands and so on and so forth that used to be connected when the oceans were much lower. So the idea of Atlantis came much, much later.’ (Archetypes of God, 2021)

The transfiguration of Jesus

Q.: ‘You've mentioned before that if we were to time travel back in time, because our frequency is much higher now that we would glow if we encountered the historical beings.’

Bashar: ‘You would appear to them to glow, yes.’

Q.: ‘Did Jesus appear to glow also?’

Bashar: 'From time to time, yes. This is what is usually referred to as the transfiguration in your religious doctrines: the idea that he was perceived as being surrounded by a glowing aura.' (Archetypes of God, 2021)

The transfiguration of Jesus:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Transfiguration_of_Jesus

What Happened to the Atlanteans that Survived

Bashar: "This transmission is titled: 'What Happened to the Atlanteans that Survived?'. First and foremost understand that many Atlanteans thousands of years ago still had quite a lot of Anunnaki genetics, Anunnaki blood, so to speak. A lot of strong lineages were maintained and preserved in the kingships, the priesthood, and many higher levels of officials and council members and artisans. Even though many of these beings did not survive, many did. Many knew by looking at the comet that had appeared in the sky for months before the comet struck the Atlantic ocean, creating a tsunami that was the final deluge that washed over the Atlantean islands, wiping out that civilization in the last of three different destructions that occurred over thousands of years to the Atlantean landmasses, many people in seeing that comet knew that their time was limited and many people left and travelled to North, Central, and South-America, to what became Europe, the Mediterranean, and North Africa, and even into the Middle East.

These Atlanteans that survived that had a lot of the lineage of the Anunnaki, a lot of the blue blood, also - again - some of them quite tall, seven feet, eight feet was not unusual, because again they had a lot of Anunnaki genetics who were themselves quite tall and blue skinned in terms of the tint that their blood gave them, being the idea of copper-based to some degree, hemocyanin, just as many creatures in the ocean these days on your planet have blue blood, a lot of the early Atlanteans and the Anunnaki lineage also had bluish blood and bluish tinted skin. Because of the copper base that carried oxygen to their system. But when these people spread out before the destruction of Atlantis approximately 11,500 of your years ago at the beginning of what your scientists refer to as the younger trias period that began the melting of the ice caps, the flooding and raising of the ocean levels to their present level, relatively speaking. The idea is that they spread to different civilizations, brought their technology, brought their understanding. This began before this time, before the destruction, the creation of the multiple pyramids around your planet that are all interconnected informationally, geometrically, scientifically, technologically to act as markers for the upcoming destruction to preserve knowledge, knowing that there would be a great amount of catastrophic destruction. These Atlanteans went into these different civilizations to preserve that knowledge in various structures such as the Great Pyramids of Giza and other pyramids in the Americas and even on to the Middle East and even into Asia and into Europe with many different forms, again, to preserve the knowledge.

But these Atlanteans that survived that were tall and considered the demi-gods, considered the idea of the union between the Gods and Man, these that were – as your bible says – the 'heroes of old', 'heroes of renown' in the olden days, the giants that walked the earth at that time and that did boost the various human civilizations around them, being human themselves, but also again, mixed very strongly with extraterrestrial Anunnaki blood and genetics, did seek to preserve and over time became blended more and more through procreation into human society, creating different bloodlines, some of which contained more or less Anunnaki genetics. But these Atlanteans became what you now know in your biblical nomenclature as the Nephilim. These are the Nephilim. The Atlanteans that survived, the Atlanteans that preserved their knowledge that spread around the world, boosting different civilizations to a new level, a new height, new training with new technology in agriculture, in science, in many different areas, leaving these artifacts, these edifices, as a preservation of knowledge, as a preservation of what came before the deluge, came before the impact of the comet in the Atlantic ocean that wiped their civilization out.

And only now in your modern time are you beginning to have the race memory, the genetic collective memory of these times, wondering if Atlantis was even real, for it has devolved into myths and legend. Such was the level of the destruction, such was the level of the catastrophic destruction that wiped that civilization out so that even today, thousands of years later, though it remains a dim memory, you even wonder if it actually existed. You will find more information in the years to come that lays buried in secret chambers in different places on the Earth to show you that Atlantis did in fact survive through ages in some way, shape, and form.

You will decode certain things that exist more than you already have in some of the edifices that they left to remember them by such as pyramids and temples around the planet, and find that there are references there, enough reference to let you know that Atlantis did exist, that it was real. They had reached a pinnacle of civilization. But in starting over and the bloodline being dispersed among different tribes around your planet the Nephilim did guide to some degree some of these bloodlines along with cooperation from extraterrestrial sources to make sure that the bloodlines did not die out, that they were preserved to at least a degree that would allow the collective memory of your species to once again remember that such a civilization did exist and that it is time again for the idea to come forth, to burst forth, to be reborn anew, in the civilizations that you are creating that now can allow themselves to move forward and expand in more positive ways without drawing upon itself or drawing down upon itself the idea of total destruction again.

But again, as we have said, it is not about the idea of what happens to the planet you are on. It's about the idea of learning these things and creating the vibrational frequencies within yourself that will allow you to start aligning with the Atlantean vibrations that were positive and constructive, being those of light instead of darkness that will shift you to realities in which you can recreate the idea sociologically, technologically of Atlantis and continue from where they left off, reaching greater heights, greater abilities that will serve all on the planet you have shifted to, the version of Earth that you will experience and allow you again to open up to the reception of extraterrestrial communication once again, as it was in Atlantean time, and allow you the affinity and the connection to nature that the early Atlanteans had that allowed them to rise to such great heights, and an understanding of your physical world in terms of your relation to animals, and trees, and crystals that will once again open your eyes and open your minds and open your hearts to a new way of life upon the version of Earth that you will shift to by aligning with the positive light energy of early Atlantis before the split into darkness, before the destruction.

Moving forward, allow yourself to feel those ages pass as they are here now, as everything is, here and now, and connect with those vibrations so that you can move forward and add this frequency to the navigation that you are doing that takes you through various shifting versions of Earth to make sure you are firmly placing your hand on the rudder of the ship you are sailing across this new ocean, this new sea of enlightenment and discovery to become the new Atlantis of Earth so that this vibration may truly circumnavigate the Earth and take all who wish to join that frequency along to the shifting realities of the Earths that will be more and more representative of this peace, of this bounty, of this beauty.

We thank you for allowing us to share the idea that the Atlanteans in some ways are still with you. And if you begin to truly open up without fear to a new future, to be yourselves, you will find that you have within all who contain any of the Anunnaki genes, the ability to incorporate this Atlantean frequency to carry you forward in a positive way.' (Hidden History, 2022)

Noahs Arch

Q.: 'You have said that Noah was given instructions by ETs to build his boat. How many animals were on it and how did they get along? And if Noah had not done so, does this mean that many of our current animals today would not exist?'

Bashar: 'First of all, there was more than one being that you are collectively referring to as Noah. There were many such vehicles that departed and went in different directions. This is why you have flood stories in almost every culture on your planet that are very similar to one another. About a being in some kind of water vehicle that managed to survive the flood, carrying families and animals with them. So this happened in many different directions and all of the different so-called Noahs, of course who had different names, all landed in different areas. So the idea is: yes, had that not happened there would be certain animals that wouldn't be among you today. But the idea is that there was a dispersement of many different kinds of species into different areas on your planet. And this was done by many different individuals who created many different kinds of crafts.'

Q.: 'So I guess our version of it today is where we save all the DNA from all the different species so that if something cataclysmic happens.'

Bashar: 'Yes, and in some cases some of the animals were in fact nothing more than DNA at the time.'

(One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

Atlantis: sunken city west of Cuba (Cacara)

Q.: 'How did it sink so deep? (26:30)

Bashar: 'You have to understand that the waters of the ocean rose a lot. So not only were there seismic tremors that allowed certain portions of their colonies to sink, the oceans also rose because of the ice caps melting.'

Q.: 'What was the the the name of this city and what was it known for?'

Bashar: 'It was mostly a trade city, an agricultural city, one moment... its most ancient name was Kakara. Does that answer your question?'

Q.: 'Did it sink at the same time as the main city of Atlantis?'

Bashar: 'In portions over periods of time. But again, it's not just that it sunk. Remember: the oceans rose because of the ice melt. But the main tsunami that wiped out most of the main portion of Atlantis and some of its colonies came from a cometary impact into the Atlantic Ocean. That's what caused the main destruction. Then, because of the climate change that occurred after the impact and the idea of the great floods that occurred because of the ice melts and the tsunamis, then over time the oceans rose.' (The Silver Cord, 2023)

You are simultaneously All-that-is experiencing itself as a reflection, as an aspect, as a piece of itself

Bashar: 'You are constantly drawing upon a multitude of interdimensional experiences in parallel reality timelines to inform who you are here and now, which is why you have such a great degree of flexibility of changing who you are, because every moment is new. You can unplug from everything and replugin into many different things and define who you are in this moment, who it is you prefer to be, who is the idealized expression of yourself in this particular personality construct, as this version of the greater being that you are.'

Thus approaching more understanding and awareness of this greater being that you are, the oversoul, the oversoul of oversouls, and connecting to source in a way that allows you to know that while you are - yes - an individualized reflection of All-that-is, you are also simultaneously All-that-is experiencing itself as a reflection, as an aspect, as a piece of itself. So it's both, you are the 'one' and you are 'the all' simultaneously.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

Bashar: 'The idea is that we recognize and are experiencing more and more that we are in fact exalted light, made of light and experiencing the quasi-physicalness of that reality and are more blended with the idea of our higher minds and the crystallization of our higher minds which are our ships. Thus we travel ensconced in a bubble of our own higher mind that actually has a crystallization that is tangible in our reality, because everything in our reality now is quasi physical, quasi energy. But that is what is real to us.' (Through the Looking Glass, 2012)

There is a contradiction in the information provided by Bashar that should be clarified

Q.: 'Why did the Sassani UFO that got hit by the Hellfire missile look like a balloon?'

Bashar: 'First of all, no one said that that was one of our vessels. That's an assumption on that person's part. That was not one of our vessels. And the idea is that it looked like it looked simply because of the nature of the camera that was photographing it and picking up more on its infrared energy signature and its field rather than the actual shape of the craft.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

Bashar: 'Recently, many of you might already be aware, there was relatively recently within the last several years, an incident that many of you are becoming aware of now where one of our ships was fired upon by a missile from one of your planes. As you have probably witnessed in the video that captured the incident, the missile bounced off the ship harmlessly, thus demonstrating several things.' (Dominoes Days Vol. 1, 2025)

Q.: 'How does that process of expansion of the 'One' - consciousness occur without being subject to time?

Bashar: 'It may or may not be translatable in your experience. I will do the best I can to explain it in human words. First, let's get some terminology so that we are on the same page. To us there is actually a difference between 'All-that-is' and the 'One'. They are not quite the same thing to us. Because All-that-is does not know itself as All-that-is, but the One knows itself as the One. That's the difference between the two. The One represents the first level of reflection that creates everything else, from the One on down. So in order for All-that-is to experience itself it does then within itself, shall we say, create a separation, a division that then becomes known as the One. Obviously that must involve some sense that you would recognize as a space-time separation. But it is nowhere near as concrete or crystallized as what you call typically space and time in your reality. It's nowhere near as fixed. But it obviously is there to some degree and it is being used in that sense to create the first separation that then creates all other separations into denser and denser and denser levels of space-time. So, yes, the template is even on that level but it's on that level in its purest simplest form only creating a single division that still is experienced by the One as a 'now-eternal moment', but is experienced by the One as the One, whereas All-that-is has no such experience at all.' (The One, 2008)

3-I Atlas

Q.: 'Can you tell us more about 3-I Atlas?'

Bashar: 'It's three 'I'. In other words, it's the third interstellar object: 3-I. The first one was called Oumuamua by you. That would be 1-I: Oumuamua. The second was called Borisov. That would be 2-I: Borisov. This is the third interstellar object to come into your solar system that you have recognized. So it is 3-I and you have named it 'Atlas.' It is a comet, a very unusual comet. It does have extraterrestrial technology attached to it for observational and recording purposes and investigation and scientific recording purposes. But it is in a sense an unusual natural comet. But the purpose of these ideas of the observation of these interstellar objects coming into your system is practice to pay attention to the idea that there will be more interstellar objects, actual extraterrestrial interstellar objects coming into your solar system in the near future that are now in your solar system, have been coming into your solar system. So, it's an opportunity to practice recognizing that interstellar objects from other star systems are entering your system, coming closer and closer and closer. So these natural objects are giving you some practice in getting used to the idea of accepting that objects from other star systems are coming into your star system as well. And this is another way of preparing for open contact, even though these objects themselves are not extraterrestrials per se.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

The Buga Sphere

Q.: 'Is there any information you can share about the Buga Sphere with us?'

Bashar: 'It is an extraterrestrial object given to you to study - again - to prepare you for the understanding of extraterrestrial technology that you will be working with after open contact. So, it's a little bit of a 'here's-a-gift-that-you-can-tinker-with' to start understanding how to relate to the idea of more advanced technology.' (Meaning of Change, 2025)

If I am the only person in my reality who am I providing the healing for?

Bashar: 'You are conducting the healing for the simulation that you are creating of a real being just as they're creating simulation of you that makes sense in their reality. So they have to allow their simulation to make sense of what you're giving them so they can adapt it for the real person, the real being that's there. So you're interacting. It's much the same as what you experience when you talk to someone over your internet or over your telephone. You're not interacting with the real voice, with the real person. You're seeing a simulation, an electronic picture of them, and a replication of their voice. You know there's a real being there but you're having an interface that is a simulation of them. It doesn't mean the interaction isn't real, but you're going through a simulation to do so. Because physical reality isn't real, it's your simulation. You are dealing with a real being who is making a decision as to what to adopt of what it is you're sharing with them. But in terms of the actual physical reality you're dealing with a simulational representation of them that makes sense in your reality.' (Welcome to Sedona, 2023)

For as many of you as are 'in the room' there are that many rooms - literally distinctly different rooms

Bashar: 'As you accelerate, and I know this is going to get a little bit heady, but follow along, it will be worth it. As you accelerate, every moment, you change. You are creating new parallel realities to go along with the change in you. Because every change is a total change, as we have said, and when you talk about total change, we mean universal change. So every change is a whole new parallel reality, even if one parallel reality may be only different from another by one atom, it's still a completely different reality. Totally different. And as you change and as you make decisions you go through, you bring yourself through a succession of parallel reality shifts so automatically, so smoothly, you don't even always recognize that that's what you are doing. But you see movement itself, the perception of movement of any kind is actually the perception of a succession of parallel realities. 'This' is one reality, 'this' is another, 'this' is another, 'this' is another (hand movements by Bashar) and in between those positions were an infinite number of other parallel realities that we have all just agreed to go through together. And so we all think we're all in the same room at the same time, and that nothing much has changed except maybe that it's getting a little bit closer to lunch. But you see: for as many of you as are 'in the room' there are that many rooms - literally distinctly different rooms. And each of you is actually creating that room and all the people in it in your universe, just as someone else is agreeing to create that room and all the people in it in their universe. And those two points of view will actually not only be slightly different as points of view, they will not actually be different points of view of the same room at all. They will be points of view of completely different parallel reality rooms. The only reason you have a common experience at all is that you agreed to in any way, shape or form.' (Beyond the Secrets and into Abundance, 2007)

The Gray Zone (I/II)

Bashar: 'This transmission is titled 'The Gray Zone': misunderstandings in metaphysical concepts and misinterpretations and why they come about. Now, when we say 'The Gray Zone' we are not discussing the Gray Beings. We are talking about the idea of a blending of different concepts, a limbo state that connects to and relies upon old-fashioned and outdated paradigms in an attempt to explain metaphysical concepts that creates misunderstandings and misinterpretation. And we will provide the key to eliminating those misinterpretations and misunderstandings.

Now again remember, that there is a difference, as we have said, between the description of an experience, which is valid, and the description of the underlying mechanism that is creating that experience, which is also valid. Even though sometimes those two things can seem diametrically opposed, the idea is to simply understand the difference between a linear based description within time and space, based on concepts that you are used to thinking about, and a newer, more modern understanding of the underlying mechanisms that create those experiences.

So to allow for more clarity it would be more wise to be able to recognize and acknowledge both simultaneously, on one level saying 'I am choosing to create an experience of such and such', while simultaneously I understand that the underlying mechanism is this or that, so that I am not assuming nor in my communications about metaphysical concepts allowing you to assume that I believe that the emotional and experiential description has anything to do with the actual mechanism at hand that is creating, or allowing me to create, the experience that I am describing.

So that these two things can be acknowledged, simultaneously, as equally important, both the experiential description, and the description of the mechanism, allowing you to have the experience, while not allowing anyone to assume that you necessarily think that the description of the experience explains how the experience was created or why it's happening. Thus creating more clarity, more distinction, between those two states, so that you can use them more flexibly, and so that there is no confusion about what is actually being said.

So the idea, as we have given examples, of things like reincarnation, where in the old paradigm you say: 'Well, I have lived before as this other person, I may live again as another person', instead of understanding the actual mechanism of 'everything exists simultaneously' – 'I, the person I am now have never been another person, because that other person exists at the same time that I do, even though it is separated by the illusion of time and space.' To use the word time in this concept, saying 'it exists at the same time' means it is happening simultaneously.

All things are happening simultaneously. All things existing in one, single timeless moment that when you look at it from a linear perspective, appears to be stretched out in a 'moment after moment after moment' – sort of paradigm. But again, thinking about it from a linear perspective, viewing it and attempting to describe it from the linear perspective of 'one life after another', while it can be created as an experience, is not a description of the mechanism, since the mechanism is that everything exists all at once.

But by stretching it out in a linear sense, you can create the experience of having had these other lives, when in fact what you are actually doing from the present is simply energetically creating connections to other lives that exist at the same time, other people that exist at the same time that you do, drawing upon those experiences, downloading their experiences, to aid and assist you in the themes that you're exploring as this person in this life, while they may be doing the same with you, downloading your experience and information, in whatever context works for them in their lives, because they exist simultaneously with you.

They are not becoming you – reincarnationally - you have not been them - reincarnationally – you both coexist simultaneously, and are sharing information in a dynamically, constantly changing web of informational exchange, energy exchange, experiential exchange, so that each of you can form the information and rely upon the information you need to explore the themes that represent who each of you distinctly are as individual aspects of creation.

So the way that you can allow yourself to move forward with a clearer understanding of metaphysical concepts, is to go back to the framework we introduced some time ago, called the five laws.

If you remember, the Law is: Number one: you exist. Number two: everything is here and now. Number three: the One is the all, the all are the One. Number four: what you put out is what you get back. Number five: everything constantly changes except for the Law. So when you use that as your basic framework, as your basic template to understand any metaphysical or spiritual concept, by comparing the metaphysical concept to the structure of the five Laws you can begin to realize the true underlying mechanisms as opposed to the description of the experience that you are having.

For example: the first Law 'You exist', when you have a complete and deep understanding of what that means and how it means you cannot cease to exist, even though you may change your expression, you will always be you from your perspective experiencing things, that you cannot cease to exist, then you know that death is not the end of anything, it is simply a transformation into another state of being, be it physical or non-physical, doesn't matter. And therefore you can use that Law to understand that there is really no such thing as death as you think you have understood it experientially from your linear perspective for thousands upon thousands of years.

When you understand the second Law, that 'everything is here and now', as we just described reincarnationally, you will understand automatically, by your depth of understanding in that second Law, that there really can be no such thing as actually having been the other person, mechanically speaking. You can have that experience, you can always create the experience, but it is the fact, the mechanical fact that everything exists simultaneously that allows you to have the experience of using and viewing that mechanism from a linear perspective that allows you to have the experience of having lived before, the so-called memory of having lived before, which is just your interpretation of the ongoing, presently existing energetic connection you have made to those other people, past or future.'

The Gray Zone (II/II)

'When you understand that everything is all the same thing, expressing itself in a variety of different ways, then you know that there is really no such thing as disconnection. You don't necessarily have to have the experience that you call 'disconnection', pain and suffering, because you know that you are always connected.

Even if you create the experience of disconnection, you have to create that from the understanding that you are always connected. So, you can choose how to use your connection, how to know that everything is one thing expressing itself in different ways and that it is not possible for you to actually, mechanically, be disconnected from existence, but you can use it to create the experience of disconnection, use it to create the experience of disempowerment, use it to create the idea that you lack trust, lack confidence. You can use it that way, but you have to understand that paradoxically, because everything is one thing expressing itself in a number of different ways, that you are just simply using that connection in a variety of ways that could be negative or positive, mechanically speaking.

When you understand very deeply that what you put out is what you get back, you can understand that physical reality is a guiding mechanism that is showing you exactly a reflection of the vibrational resonance and frequency that you are giving off with your belief systems, be they conscious or unconscious.

When you understand that change is the constant within creation, you understand that the changes you go through, is your relationship to the thing that never changes, which is the structure of existence, which are the five laws.

So, it is a deeper understanding and a remembering of the five laws – structure that would act as a filtering system and a template for you to compare any metaphysical concept you come across to that structure to see what metaphysical concepts are being thought of as a reflection of an experience, as opposed to how to understand that metaphysical concept mechanically, the underlying mechanism that allows you to have the experience.

So, a deeper understanding of the five Laws will allow you to compare any metaphysical or spiritual, or even non-spiritual concept against that, to know that that is the structure of existence. That's how everything works. It is always a combination of those Laws that creates every experience you have. But at the same time, being clearer about what those five Laws actually mean, going deeper into your understanding of them, will allow you to automatically start understanding and seeing the difference between an experience of a metaphysical concept and the mechanism that underlies it.

Again, for example, the concept of psychic functioning, or prediction. If you know - again - that everything exists now, then it is not a surprise that someone who is tuned to a parallel probability reality could pick up on the idea that that reality that you could shift to, may have a high degree of energy behind it, a high degree of momentum behind it, may be the most likely manifestational reality to occur if things do not change.

But understanding the fifth Law that everything changes, gives you the opportunity to say: 'well, if I understand that that prediction is not necessarily a prediction of the future, but a prediction, a sensing of the energy that exists in the present, because everything is here and now, then I understand that it's simply an opportunity to know where the energy lies, now, and to know that in the fifth Law 'everything changes' that if it does not necessarily have a lot of energy behind it or the energy behind it can be changed, then the prediction does not necessarily have to manifest, if it's not something that you prefer. And by adding energy to it in a different direction, by defining it in a different way, by using it as simply a present day sensing of where the energy is, instead of an absolute prediction of something that's inevitable or unavoidable, then you can use the Law of change to add energy to it in a particular way that can allow the prediction to render itself obsolete by having known what it is telling you about the present energy.

So, again, using the five Laws, and comparing metaphysical concepts that you have lived with for thousands of years against that framework can give you far more clarity about what the mechanical truth is behind many of the metaphysical or spiritual experiences you may have in your life.

So we would always suggest and recommend and encourage you to look more deeply into the five Laws, understand them much more clearly and that will give you the template to carry through life so that anytime you have a metaphysical experience, even if you want to validate it as an experience - which is fine - it will still simultaneously give you the clarity you need to understand the mechanism that goes along with it, so that you don't necessarily think that the experiential definition is a description of how those things actually work, which can cause much confusion in people who are coming into a clearer understanding, or a growing understanding of metaphysics and spirituality.

We thank you for allowing us to share this idea of this 'Gray Zone', where these things can get blended in to provide more clarity and take them out of confusion, take them out of misinterpretation, take them out of misunderstanding so that you can move forward with the idea of metaphysics in a more modern way, and it can serve you to create the reality more consciously that you prefer.' (The Gray Zone, 2022)

Different vibrational states within the brain having to do with beliefs and thoughts

Q.: 'Are different brain wave frequencies representing different sub-egos? I.e. could different brain wave frequencies be considered as the physical manifestation of thoughts and certain frequency areas such as alpha waves be considered as a sub-ego? Like a mind within a mind?'

Bashar: 'Yes to all of it, if you wish to look at it that way and if those definitions help bring you clarity. The vibration and the different states of being in the brain are the result not just of the idea of thoughts but of the idea of belief systems. Because it is belief systems that actually generate the physical personality which then has the thoughts that go with those particular frequencies. But I know that sometimes on your planet people interchangeably use the idea of thoughts and beliefs. But it is really fundamentally what you really believe to be true that generates the frequency state that you are in. And sometimes what you know to be true, which is beyond belief which generates those frequencies, which then generates the thoughts that are germane and relevant for those particular frequency states.' (The Gate, 2023)

What Are Thoughts? - the (Single) Particle Moving in Certain Patterns

Bashar: 'Thoughts are consciousness and in that sense consciousness is the particle, is what creates the particle. Thoughts are the particle moving in a certain pattern, within the matrix that makes you up.' (Bashar's Lab, 2008)

Parallel Realities and Timelines

Bashar: 'Parallel realities really are the fundamental underlying reality that you do experience. You may think of your life as happening in a single timeline, but that single timeline is actually thus composed of many different perspectives, many different movements and experiences of time, changing, movement through space.

And therefore, your entire timeline is actually constructed of an infinite number of parallel realities, well all right, finite within what you might call one lifetime as you experience time to exist, but infinite in the varieties that exist to create all the different parallel timelines, all the different choices one may make, all the different choices one may experience in creating themes to explore as a physical being. So yes, finite to a certain degree that is relevant for whatever theme you are exploring as a physical being, as a physical consciousness from a physical point of view, but infinite in the vast number of parallel timelines there can be, being experienced by an infinite number of versions of what you consider yourself to be.

Now of course, all those other versions are not you as a person, they are their their own people, but you cross-connect to them as we have explained through energy, downloading information and experience from all these different parallel versions of your greater being, experiencing all these multiple incarnations simultaneously in parallel timelines. But again remember, each parallel timeline, each timeline that seems like a single timeline is still going to be composed of different frames, you could say that are grabbed from a variety of parallel realities, in order to create the single timeline that you believe your life represents.

So you're really cross-connecting in a constantly changing dynamic pattern of downloading information and experience from any number of parallel versions of yourselves, where and when it is relevant for you to do so in order to enhance and inform the timeline that you are constructing constantly, moment by moment by moment, into what appears to be a single timeline that is actually the product of a multitude of timelines and a multitude of parallel reality experiences being had by all the different simultaneous incarnations that your oversoul is experiencing all at once. This is why you have such a wide variety of choices available to you.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

At what level will the landing of spaceships happen?

Bashar: 'The spaceships that land will be landing in the level of reality that you will raise your vibration to meet. It will not be happening in the vibrational density that you're in right now. It will be happening in another layer of reality that is of a higher frequency. And that's not the same reality that you're in right now.'

Q.: 'Reminds me of the way we see airplanes now and someday that's how it will be with spaceships.'

Bashar: 'Yes, but you have to be in a different level of reality to see them that way, experience them in the same way you experience your airplanes. It's just that the transition may be so smooth that you don't realize you've actually gone up to another level of reality. As we have often reminded you, a person 300 years ago would look at you as if you're glowing with light, because you're much higher in frequency than they used to be 300 years ago. But to you it's normal, so you don't see it. But the idea of contact is going to take place in another layer of reality. There are many layers of your reality. Earth is like an onion with many dimensions wrapped around it. And therefore, there are more refined levels of physical reality and even into the lower astral than you think. So the idea vibrationally is that while it may seem as if open contact is taking place in your typical physical reality, it's not.' (In two Worlds, 2023)

Stop Wanting

Bashar: 'One more item we would like to remind you of: again, from time to time - though this is rare for a variety of reasons - but from time to time we will again suggest a particular literary work that exists on your planet as being possibly beneficial for many of you. And we have already suggested this once, we will suggest it once again to allow you to understand that we deem this to be of great benefit to you, especially in that it has come through a member of your society and can in a sense come through all of you as you experience yourself. And once again the titlement of this work is 'Conversations with God' by the entity that you call Walsch. We would recommend - and again this is rare - you read this work again and again and again until you breathe it, until you live it, until it is your very essence in every cell. Because if you do and when you do you will understand everything you need to understand to be the self-realized reflection of the infinite you were designed to be.'

You can get all this information and have gotten all this information from a variety of sources. You can get all this information and many times do get this information from your own self. This is not in any way, shape or form do I stress this importantly - not in any way, shape or form to negate the idea that you yourself have the ability to get all the information we have or any other source may have. This is not to send you running to any idea of another teacher and take away the responsibility of your self-empowerment. This is to put you in touch directly with your self-empowerment and recognize your equality with us, with every being and even with what you call the idea of God. The idea again: read it, absorb it, be it. It is one of the greatest gifts you have given to yourselves to now bring into reality and manifestation this particular work. It is a reflection of the fact that it is time for you to all understand this information and of course what that means is that there's no more excuses for not being who you want to be.' (Is there a Santa Claus, 1996?)

(...)

Bashar: 'Very important point within what you call that book we mention that you will discover when you read it, in the 'Conversations with God', very important point regarding the idea of intention and manifestation: you will come across it in the appropriate chapter. Basically it goes something like this however: when you say 'I' - that is the acknowledgment of who you are. That's all that's necessary for the Universe to acknowledge that you're about to manifest something. 'I' - that's it. Whatever the verb is that comes after it is the activation verb. So as the book points out: when you say 'I want this', then the activation you are activating is wanting. Do you understand? 'I want': all right says the Universe, go ahead: want all you want to. And that's all that manifests is you wanting. The verb that follows immediately the 'I' is the activation agreement. Therefore, 'I am' is what allows the manifestation to become present and that's why prayer is always stated in the present, that you are already grateful because it already is - not 'I want'. You are already grateful because it already is and you already are. Not 'I want', otherwise that's what you get one thing. So: 'I' is the only declaration you need to initiate the universe, the reflective Universe's readiness to respond to what the activation verb is that follows the Declaration of Self, which is the same thing as intention.' (Is there a Santa Claus, 1996?)

Everything is Here and Now

Bashar: 'You understand that your scientists have been seeking what they call a unified theory for quite some time, the basic idea being to reduce everything down so that you understand how every phenomenon is the product and extension of a single fundamental principle uniting everything, connecting everything, explaining everything.

Well this would have to be true not only for what they consider to be the forces of the universe, but for space-time itself, that which is the fundamental underpinning of the idea of reality as you understand it. So not only must the idea of gravity and the atomic forces and electromagnetism all be reduced to an understanding of extensions of a fundamental principle, but space itself and time itself must also be reduced.

The idea of the ultimate reduction of space would be as a single dimensionless point. We can call that single dimensionless point 'here'. The idea of the reduction of time would be a single timeless moment. We can call that single timeless moment 'now'. So we have the idea of a 'here' and a 'now' and everything being here and now. Everything being an expression, every single experience of a different place, a different location, the idea of volumetric space, the very idea of different moments in time, past, present, future all being extensions and products of the idea of that dimensionless point and that timeless moment.

And if there is truly only a dimensionless point and a single timeless moment the here, the now of everything, and yet you are capable of experiencing what appears to be, what feels like different places at different times, movement, change over time, moving around two different places, locations within the idea of space, you can experience that but they must all be the product of the same dimensionless point and timeless moment, experienced in different ways from different angles, different points of view, so to speak, different perspectives. It's the same dimensionless point, it's the same timeless moment looked at in different ways, experienced in different ways.

And thus the very notion of space-time, the very fact that you are experiencing what appear to be multiple places and multiple times in itself is actually proof of parallel realities. Because if everything is really one, everything is really here, and everything is really now, then the experience of multiple places and times are all happening at once. And thus every single moment, what you call seconds, minutes, nanoseconds, what have you, different locations a, b, c, d, e, f, g, these all have to be happening at the same time in the same place, basically, fundamentally.

And therefore, every single tick of the clock is actually an experience of a different parallel reality, every single movement, no matter how small, is actually the experience of a different parallel reality, all existing simultaneously with every other moment, every other place.’ (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

How to become my preferred future self?

Q.: ‘My behaviors, my feelings, my thoughts don't always align with the image that I have in my mind of the future desired self. I wonder if you had any suggestions on how to bridge that gap between where I'm at, who I am today versus where I desire to be).’

Bashar: ‘Our suggestion is to stop creating a gap. Stop assuming, stop defining that there is a gap. See in your mind’s eye the version of you you say you prefer to be in your imagination, and start behaving like that version in all the aspects of your life. What would that version do differently than what you’re doing? Start mirroring it, start being it. Start eliminating the gap you are creating with your definitions.’ (In Two Worlds, 2023)

The Illusion of Reality

Q.: ‘If everything we see and imagine through our physical mind is an illusion, are our planets like Earth and other planets and the statistics we see with the physical eye also an illusion and not real? They don't really exist?’

Bashar: ‘Again, many humans mistake the idea of the word illusion, meaning that there is no meaning to it, no effect, no impact by it. They do exist, but they exist as experiences. And these are valid. And these experiences are real. Again, when we use your word illusion we simply mean that it is a projection of consciousness. So what is real is what you extract from the experience of projecting the apparent physical reality illusion by your consciousness, but you are engaging in that physical reality projection with all of your senses, all of your consciousness in a variety of ways to create real experiences that allow your soul to expand and to grow. So please do not mistake the idea that when we say that physical reality is an illusion that we mean that there is no value to it, no meaning to it. Because the meaning is what you give to it, and the experience from that meaning you inject into it is absolutely real.’ (Explorations with Bashar, 2025)

Reincarnation – a Deeper Explanation

Bashar: ‘Good day to you this day of your time. Today's transmission is ‘Reincarnation - a Deeper Explanation’. Now, you will be shown a chart that has two different representations of the concept of reincarnation upon it. The top image represents the actual mechanism of simultaneous multiple incarnations happening all at once. The lower portion of the graphic will detail the idea of how you experience the concept linearly. In other words, why you actually think it is re-incarnation with the same Soul having lifetime after lifetime after lifetime in linear order.

As you can see from the top portion of the graphic the idea is that the Oversoul extends itself into different Souls, represented by the different colors, so that you know they are different Souls. And each of those different Souls creates its own higher mind and physical mind which is represented in the physical realm down below by the different colored boxes which represent the different persons that you all consider yourselves to be: individuals that are independent of one another.

But what you can see by the black arrows between the squares is that this energy connection that exists, these cross-connections that exist between all of the physical personalities that are going on simultaneously allows you to extract information, experience, guidance, what have you. Like a giant cosmic internet, constantly exchanging information, plugging and unplugging from whatever individuals you need to in order to extract the information that guides you in life. But you can see from the top mechanism, the actual mechanism, that it's all happening at the same time, it all exists all at once.

But now, when you impose the idea of linear space-time on the concept and allow yourself to perceive reality a moment at a time, which as we have said, is actually a perception of the same moment but from different points of view that you interpret as different moments linearly one after the other: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and so forth, what happens then from your perspective is that the space-time reality, the space-time perspective or what could be called the space-time lens or space-time prism or space-time filter that you impose upon your consciousness - just like a prism bends light - the space-time filter or lens bends the idea of how the inner connections exist between different individuals. So that it no longer exists simultaneously or is perceived to exist simultaneously.

It is now bent upwards to make it seem as if the same soul that is an extension of the oversoul is experiencing over and over and over again an incarnation in linear terms, one after the other. You can now see that the black arrow in the chart below is bent upwards to go back into the soul level so that it appears as if the same soul is having different physical incarnations one after the other. But the mechanical truth is the graphic up above without the idea of the bending of the space-time reality.

So you can see that just because the space-time lens makes it appear as if the same soul is having incarnation after incarnation, the truth is these are different Souls, different extensions of the Oversoul, each of which is having its own physical experience that's connected to every other physical experience through those horizontal little black energy arrows. But again, because those arrows get distorted by the space-time lens you perceive it in a linear fashion.

Knowing that it's actually all happening at the same time and knowing that the idea of 're'-incarnation is an illusion can help you understand how to live more in the moment, how to plug in and unplug to the other entities, the other physical beings that you may need to extract information and experience from to aid and assist you and guide you in this particular life as they may be doing with you as well to guide them in their lives and you can understand that all beings exist simultaneously, all things do.

So if you can allow yourself to begin to see the illusion, the distortion in a sense that is created by the physical space-time lens then you can begin to operate in a more immediate, more present way, living in the moment knowing that you can make whatever connections you need to make, knowing that you are making whatever connections you need to make, plugging and unplugging in a dynamic way. It's not a static thing. A life that you feel you're connecting to now may not necessarily be the life that you will connect to in the years to come, or you may keep recreating that connection if you feel it is of benefit to you.

But this is why, this is the explanation for why you have heard many people say 'oh, I used to be Cleopatra, I used to be Julius Caesar in one of my incarnations'. That's the perspective of the distortion caused by the space-time lens. But if you understand the simultaneity of everything as represented by the upper portion of the graphic you can realize of course any being can connect to any other being and that's why you can have fifty people, a hundred people, a thousand people all saying I used to be Cleopatra. Because it's not that they actually were Cleopatra because Cleopatra exists exactly at the same time you do.

But a thousand people can make an energy connection to Cleopatra in the present and thus download information that may through the distortion of the physical space-time lens make it seem as if that was you because you're assuming that the same soul is having these incarnations over and over and over again. So this explains the idea of how a multitude of people can connect to the same individual and download whatever information they need from that individual and understand that it's not that it was your past life but that it is another person existing at the same time, that has their own life.

But you get to extract whatever information from their experience of life that you need while they can do the same to you. Who knows how many connections Cleopatra has, who knows how many times Cleopatra may have assumed 'oh, this must be coming from one of my future lives', when in fact again it's all simultaneously coexistent. So again, this helps you live more in the moment, understand the mechanisms and how different a description of the mechanism can be from a description of what appears to be the experience from a spacetime lens perspective.

Again, the most important thing to take away from this is the changing of your definitions from outmoded ones, outdated ones, old-fashioned ones so that you understand that there can be a vast difference between a description of the experience or how the experience appears to be happening as opposed to how the experience is actually mechanically happening. So if you start from the premise of understanding that everything exists now you can then decode in a sense and decipher and translate the experience and realize that the description of the experience again is not necessarily a description of how it's actually happening, how the experience is being truly created.

And you can start to deconstruct these ideas of old-fashioned definitions of experience and begin to truly understand the modern understanding, the modern definition for your 21st century of the actual mechanisms behind everything you experience in physical terms. So we thank you for allowing us to share with you this idea this day of your time to bring you more into the present and give you an opportunity to understand more deeply how mechanisms of consciousness work so that you can learn to differentiate between the experience and the mechanism and use modern definitions to propel you forward in understanding of how you create your reality. So that you can do so with more consciousness, more awareness and more efficiency and this will make all the difference in how you experience your reality.

So in return for allowing us to share this information with you I ask now in what way may we be of assistance to you. You may begin your questions and dialogue if you wish.' (Reincarnation – a Deeper Explanation, 2021)

The official chart/session handout Bashar was referring to during the monologue (pdf)

08989100021Reincarnation.pdf?kuid=c5c77975-a5ac-4897-be10-b3bf365a7ee6-1760512855&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

The Real Definition of Karma

Bashar: 'All right, good day. Today's transmission is called 'The Real Definition of Karma'. What is karma? For a long time people on your planet have misunderstood the actual meaning of that word. It is an ancient Sanskrit word, but most people on your planet have come to think of it as some sort of retribution or punishment or comeuppance or just deserts, so to speak: someone might do something to you that you feel hurt you and then maybe later something happens to them that they don't find pleasant.

And many people on your planet go 'ah, karma: they got what they deserved!' That is not the meaning of karma at all in its original form. The Sanskrit word karma simply means action. That's literally what the word means: action. And as we have said many times, actions are the language of physical reality. So this is understood in ancient times as the idea of the actions you take to rebalance yourself if you find that you have taken some action that brings you out of balance. So it's not an issue of punishment, it's not an issue of retribution or comeuppance or deservability in that sense.

Yes. your actions have consequences. Of course they do: what you put out is what you get back. That's the law. But the idea is that karma is really just a guiding mechanism, a mechanism to allow you to be more aware of when you are out of alignment with your true vibration so that you can take whatever actions are required, whatever karma is necessary for you to bring yourself back into alignment with your core true frequency, your core vibration.

So it's important now in this day and age of clarification of definitions to let go of the idea that karma has anything at all to do with retribution or punishment, and allow yourself to begin to take and use it in a more conscious and responsible way to constantly guide yourself in the recognition and the discernment that you may have created a situation or a circumstance within yourself by some actions that may have moved you out of alignment with your integrity, with who you really prefer to be, and use that awareness to take the actions necessary to bring yourself back into alignment.

That is why we have often said that as soon as you recognize you're out of alignment and choose to bring yourself back into alignment, choose to explore yourself and let go of those things that have brought you out of alignment and allow yourself to go back into alignment, you have erased your karma. Again, not meaning the idea of punishment, but the idea of the willingness to take the actions necessary to right yourself, to guide yourself, to course correct yourself through life and bring yourself back into alignment.

Now, this is why what we have just described is the answer to when people ask 'well, this person - no names shall be given - does things that are very much out of alignment, very negative and yet they never seem to really reap any consequence of this, they don't seem to be subject to the so-called 'Law of Karma'. That's again because karma is not a punishment. The idea may sometimes be that a person's belief systems that are negatively oriented may allow them to experience some negative things in turn, but that's because they're holding on to the negative beliefs that cause them to go out of alignment to begin with, and are still holding on to them which can attract more negativity as a downward spiral into their lives.

However, there are people on your planet - you generally label them as either sociopathic or psychopathic - that simply do not have the awareness within themselves because they've never been taught to, or simply have some particular physical reason for disconnecting from that aspect of their consciousness, so that they do not have the correcting mechanism. They do not know how to take the actions that would bring them back into alignment because the belief system that they have developed within themselves allows them to believe they are not doing anything that is out of alignment.

And therefore, they see no reason to activate the karmic actions that would bring them back into alignment, because they don't believe they're out of alignment. So again, this is why some people may continue to do very negative things and never seem in any way, shape or form to be held responsible for these things, nothing bad ever seems to happen to them as people on your planet say.

This compartmentalization of beliefs and the belief that you're not doing anything negative because of the lack of connection to the karmic actions necessary to bring you back into alignment is the reason why this can occur. So it's all about allowing people to start understanding, reconnecting, and letting go of the idea that karma has anything at all to do with blame or punishment, and it's simply a device that allows you to take the actions necessary to be who you truly are, to recognize your core vibration and to bring yourself back into alignment with it.

This allows you to begin to really take full responsibility for the things that you create and perceive in your physical reality experience. And as we have said, responsibility is nothing more than the ability to respond. So, karma being defined as action is the heightened ability to respond to misalignment by taking the actions necessary to bring yourself back into alignment. That's all karma is, but it is a very powerful tool if used in that way, in its original intention.

So allow yourselves to practice letting go of any definition of karma that has anything at all to do with the idea of comeuppance or retribution or revenge, and allow yourself to bring it closer to home as a device that is actively participating in the creation of your life and your reality experience and can be used every day in the most positive ways to make sure that you are course correcting and allowing yourself to move forward in the most aligned way to your true core being.

Now, we thank you for allowing us to provide you with a more modern and updated and yet at the same time ancient definition, the original definition of karma, and in return for the gift you are giving us in interacting with all of you I ask you now in what ways may we be of service to you. Please begin with your questions and dialogues if you wish.' (The Real Definition of Karma, 2022)

Are our loved ones the same souls across timelines?

Q.: 'When we raise our frequency to higher levels of physical reality are our loved ones the same souls across timelines?

Bashar: 'They may be the same oversoul, but they are not necessarily the same souls. So, different souls can be representative of different parallel realities, but a larger version of an oversoul, say an oversoul of an oversoul, maybe the same oversoul of oversouls that has extensions in multiple parallel realities, but each of those extensions is an individual soul that's different for the individual physical being in that parallel reality. So you are interacting with different souls, just like you're interacting with different versions of them physically, different higher minds, but maybe, maybe the same oversoul of oversouls. So again it depends on what level you are looking at as to when you can say: is it the same? Are these the same being? It depends on what level of being you are talking about.' (In Two Worlds, 2023)

Are prayers directed to God or the oversoul?

Q.: 'When humans pray, are they actually praying to God or to oversouls?'

Bashar: 'What difference does it make since oversoul is a part of All-that-is. It depends on their intention, their focus. But again remember, prayer is simply a matter of being totally present in gratitude for what is. It's not about what you wish for. It's about being in absolute appreciation for what is so that more can happen that needs to come in that is relevant for that particular personality. So, it will often – a prayer, so to speak – a state of being, a state of present prayer in gratitude and appreciation simply go to where it needs to go depending on what level of consciousness, All-that-is, the oversoul, the individual soul, higher mind, what have you, is most capable and most relevant for helping the individual access the information and experiences that they require. So it will go where it needs to go, automatically.’ (How the Oversoul Works, 2022)

Are cells in the body shifting independently?

Q.: ‘At what level are these shifts occurring? Are the cells in my body shifting billions of times per second, independent of my shifts?’

Bashar: ‘Let me put it this way: you are not in the same body, moment to moment. You are in the body that is relevant to the earth you’re on. So it’s not like the cells have to shift. The idea is your consciousness is shifting, but there is already a physical representation in all the different earths, if you so choose there to be. So it’s not like the cells have to shift, they are already inhabiting the earth you are shifting to. Because it’s just your consciousness that’s shifting. It’s like a projector light going through frames on a film strip. The idea is that the film strip, each frame, is its own frame. But as the projector light illuminates it you get a different experience, a different scenario. But the frame is already there. The frame contains everything that it needs to contain, it’s a whole frame. It’s the projector light that is shifting from frame to frame.’ (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

Other people are not becoming you - reincarnationally, you have not been them - reincarnationally

Bashar: ‘All things are happening simultaneously. All things existing in one, single timeless moment that when you look at it from a linear perspective, appears to be stretched out in a ‘moment after moment after moment’ – sort of paradigm. But again, thinking about it from a linear perspective, viewing it and attempting to describe it from the linear perspective of ‘one life after another’, while it can be created as an experience, is not a description of the mechanism, since the mechanism is that everything exists all at once.

But by stretching it out in a linear sense, you can create the experience of having had these other lives, when in fact what you are actually doing from the present is simply energetically creating connections to other lives that exist at the same time, other people that exist at the same time that you do, drawing upon those experiences, downloading their experiences, to aid and assist you in the themes that you’re exploring as this person in this life, while they may be doing the same with you, downloading your experience and information, in whatever context works for them in their lives, because they exist simultaneously with you.

They are not becoming you – reincarnationally - you have not been them - reincarnationally – you both coexist simultaneously, and are sharing information in a dynamically, constantly changing web of informational exchange, energy exchange, experiential exchange, so that each of you can form the information and rely upon the information you need to explore the themes that represent who each of you distinctly are as individual aspects of creation.’ (The Gray Zone, 2022)

Can we affect our previous lives in this life?

Bashar: 'Yes. But again, they're not your lives. They're other people. That's what we're saying. Everyone exists at the same time. They're not your lives unless you're talking about yourself from the highest level of an oversoul who may have multiple extensions in multiple timeframes. The oversoul can say those are my lives, but you can't. (so like shared souls) it's like this: you see the hand? The whole hand is the oversoul. The different fingers are life extensions. This finger can say it's from the same oversoul as this finger, but this finger has never been nor ever will be this finger. There are two separate fingers existing at the same time, going back to the same oversoul. So the oversoul can say, the hand can say: both of those fingers are my fingers. But one finger cannot say it ever was another finger.' (Welcome to Sedona 2023)

Soul, Oversoul and Higher Mind

Bashar: 'You can look at it this way: the oversoul could be looked at as a collection of individual souls. But it knows itself as a unified being, but experiences simultaneously all of the individual souls that are extensions of it. In much the same way that your fingers are extensions of a hand. The soul is one of the individual extensions, the finger. The higher mind is that portion of the soul that remains non-physical while it projects a portion of itself into the idea or dream of the idea of being physical. So it creates a physical mind to have a physical experience but retains a portion of itself, perhaps even the larger portion of itself, in non-physical reality as the soul. So you have oversoul, individual soul broken down into non-physical higher mind and physical mind to have a physical incarnational experience. Does that help?' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

Question about the sphere recently found in Buga, Colombia

Q.: 'The sphere displays symbols that scientists compared to ancient scripts including runes and Mesopotamian writing systems.'

Bashar: 'This is a conversation for another time.'
(2027 - The Year Everything Changes, 2025)

Q.: 'What is written on the Buga Sphere found in Colombia and what is its purpose?'

Bashar: 'That information is not available through this terminal at this time. And this question was not vetted.'
(Explorations With Bashar, 2025)

Streams of consciousness

Q.: 'Some teachers talk about individual souls and oversouls, but others like Abraham talk about the idea of streams of consciousness or this idea of a general one-ness of life energy that flows through different experiences. Is this something like the particle/wave - duality where both are true and contained within the same phenomena, and can you help us understand how this works together?'

Bashar: 'Yes, it is similar to the wave/particle duality but you are also describing a couple of different things in a couple of different ways. In other words, the idea of individuated souls and oversouls and so on and so forth is a representation of a certain frequency of consciousness within All-that-is, within the 'One' that expresses itself apparently as a separate self-aware consciousness on a certain level. The idea of streams of consciousness is more a description of how different levels of consciousness may access information or communicate with one another. It is not necessarily the same thing as the individuated levels of consciousness to say 'stream of consciousness'. That's more a methodology than it is a definition of a particular level of consciousness.' (How the Oversoul Works, 2022)

The Prime Radiant: Perceiving Family, Friends and Acquaintances as Reflections in a Mirror – All Physiologically Made from the Same Individual Elementary Particle

Bashar: 'Allow yourself to look around to all of the family and friends and acquaintances that you have made on this journey, and begin to truly experience each of them as a mirror, see them as an actual reflection - looking as you are familiar with them to look - but actually being in a mirror and you are surrounded in a sense by this hall of mirrors, each of which contains a different reflection that is representative of a different person you know in your life, in this life.

And that being that they are - reflections in mirrors, thus then you have a greater sense, you begin to really sense that the mirror is simply reflecting back to you your own image with a slight alteration, a slight difference, a slight distortion, a different pattern because of the different vibrational frequency of each mirror and that you are seeing yourself in different disguises, in different presentations, with different facial features, different racial qualities, different gender factors. But they are all reflections of you, the consciousness that you are.

And as we have expressed before with the idea of the Prime Radiant, they are all even physiologically, literally made from the same individual elementary particle that you are. So you are all one even in the physical context, let alone the vibrational context of consciousness. But breathe this in.

Look at every reflection of all the people you know and begin to gather within yourself more awareness of the information that these different people, that these different reflections are giving to you, are reflecting to you, that you are downloading from them even as you are uploading information to every single one of the individuals behind every single one of those reflections who are themselves autonomous beings experiencing the same kind of parallel reality reflection from you and everyone they know in their lives.

All the communicational nets, see the links, see the lines of light and energy like a web that connects each and every one of those reflections to you and you to each and everyone of those reflections that you know in what you call your present life time.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

'All-that-is'-es [plural] – Different Versions of All-that-is

Q.: 'Are there also parallel creators in addition to the parallel universes?'

Bashar: 'There are different versions of All-that-is if that's what you're asking, yes.'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'Remember again, it's this and that, not this or that. So there is the 'One' - All-that-is, but The One - All-that-is is composed of all the different All-that-is-es.'

Q.: 'So it's like he's experiencing itself in different scenarios and stories and realities.'

Bashar: 'Experiencing itself as every individual and also as every collective that is possible to experience itself as.'

Q.: 'It is even more fascinating than I ever imagined.'

Bashar: 'All right. Well, now you can imagine it.' (2027 – The Year Everything Changes, 2025)

You are All-that-is experiencing itself in all the ways that it can

Bashar: 'As you begin to allow yourself to whatever degree your imagination is capable of delivering this to you, in whatever form it comes, you allow yourself to recognize that when you become aware, more aware of all the different parallel reality versions of yourself going on right now, the final realization you have when you reach the level of All-that-is experiencing itself as all possible parallel realities in any way, shape or form, you realize that you, you, you are All-that-is experiencing itself in all the ways that it can, in all possible parallel reality expressions simultaneously.

You are your version of All-that-is. And even then you realize that there are parallel reality versions of All-that-is because All-that-is is experienced by every single individual in the same way that you are experiencing it now in the sense that when they connect to the idea of their version of All-that-is and experience themselves as All-that-is, that that is a slightly different version of All-that-is than the All-that-is you are experiencing yourself to be.

And thus then even All-that-is has parallel reality versions of itself. And thus then even All-that-is has a greater All-that-is experiencing all the parallel reality versions of All-that-is that are. And on and on and on and on and on. Even beyond your capability to even begin to imagine. Until, until, until, until what we might term the reset, the reboot, which is when the All-that-is and all the All-that-is-es become the One which has no experience of itself or anything at all. And thus, though it contains all possible parallel realities knows none of them, is unaware of anything.

And thus then creation is rebooted, reset, and again explodes into the opposite of the unknown which is everything that is known, everything that exists, all possible parallel reality expressions and versions of every level of being, all the different versions of All-that-is, all the different versions of consciousness that recognize themselves as All-that-is, all the different individuated sensations of oversouls and souls and spirits and physical beings that have an individual identity that still can know that they are also simultaneously multidimensional beings experiencing themselves as inhabiting a multitude, an infinite multitude of parallel reality streams, all at once, be it the idea of the sideways parallel realities of different versions of yourselves, or the timestream version of parallel realities you call past, present and future, or the different levels of interdimensional realities that you may as an individual be connected to and an extension of, all the way now back down to this individual self in this particular moment, in this particular now, in this expression, this parallel reality stream.' (The Parallelogram, 2013)

Do oversouls have oversouls?

Q.: 'If so, how many levels of oversouls are there up to the one supreme oversoul? Can you give specific frequencies?'

Bashar: 'No, no, no no no. Because there are too many. There can be any number. There can be an infinite number and there can even be oversouls of 'the One', it never ends. So it just depends upon the differentiations that are relevant for someone to perceive. Any number of oversouls exist above and beyond other oversouls, if it is relevant for someone to be aware of what the uniqueness of that particular oversoul presentation is. Therefore, the idea of giving you frequencies would simply go on and on and on and on...forever. Because the idea is that any difference, any difference at all, the slightest difference from one frequency to another can be a completely different oversoul. So, simply assume that the frequencies are infinite and that your dial has the infinite ability to touch into whatever frequency of whatever oversoul is germane and relevant for you from this particular position from which you are asking the question. And even again as you say all the way up to the Supreme, there are again continuations and diversifications of what it means to be the One, to be the Supreme. There are oversouls of Supremes [plural] and on and on and on and on.' (How the Oversoul Works, 2022)

Can or do our oversouls take on other forms of life, such as a plant, insect, or other organism with a consciousness?

Bashar: 'Again, it's not that the oversoul takes on those forms, those forms are part of an oversoul, they are extensions of an oversoul, maybe even the same oversoul you are an extension of. So it's not like they take it on, that's a very linear way of putting it as if they are coming from somewhere and becoming something else. Oversoul by definition contains many different expressions of individuated souls and personalities. So the idea is that for any given oversoul it may already contain any number of extensions in either the human, the animal, the plant, the mineral, or what have you, or spirit areas. So it's simply that those are representations of oversouls. The idea of communicating with it or any particular extension of it is the same as with anything. You start identifying with it, you start interacting with it in whatever way your imagination so desires, you use whatever tools and techniques to go into altered states that you can that are appropriate and in alignment with who you are and give yourself the opportunity to expand your minds and expand your consciousness in a way that may bring to you inspirations for how to connect to these things, how to communicate to different aspects of an oversoul that may be presenting itself in different forms. At the same time it is presenting itself as you.' (How the Oversoul Works, 2022)

Darryl as Bashar's past life

Q.: 'You said that Darryl is your past life but Darryl's other past lives such as a spy in World War II and part of Orion's resistance are not yours as well. Can you explain that?'

Bashar: 'Again, a simple analogy would be like a ladder where certain rungs connect from pole to pole, but other rungs do not. So the idea is that I can have my own life path, the channel can have his own life path, and there are a few moments, a few rungs on that ladder that actually cross and connect from one pole to the other. So we are two separate beings in that sense and we can have our own incarnational experiences, some of which are not relevant for him, some of which are not relevant for me. So that ladder analogy where some of the rungs do not necessarily go all the way across from one pole to the other is simply a simple illustration to demonstrate the point that we can have separate existences but there can be certain overlaps that we choose to experience. Our life paths can cross in certain places at certain times for certain purposes.' (Explorations with Bashar, 2025)

Differences between Bashar and Esther/Abraham

Q.: 'I have some questions about some of the differences, she says that you should have expectations and expect good things to happen, expect to get things that you want and expect for things to work out. And your formula says that you should not have any expectations or insistence on the outcome. I would like a clarification on this.'

Bashar: 'This is really mostly a semantic difference. When it is said that you can expect a good outcome, this is more the idea that if you follow the formula and act on your passion you know that all the outcomes will be beneficial and will work to your advantage. And therefore you can use the word expect from that position of knowing that acting on your passion and staying in that positive vibration can only result in something that will benefit you. So on that level you can expect the outcome to be positive. What we are simply saying is - and we don't actually say 'have no expectation', we literally say 'have no insistence or assumption' as to what form the outcome will take, how it should look. We're not saying that you can't know it can be positive. In fact, we are telling you absolutely you know that if you stay in the vibration of positivity that the outcome will serve you in a positive way. We have said that over and over again. So this is just a slight semantic difference in the way the words are being used. In this sense expectation is to know that the outcome can be positive if you stay in a positive state, but you don't insist or assume what that will look like. Because you don't really know which version of that positive outcome will actually manifest. That's what we're saying. And we trust that that will clarify the difference in the usage of those words.' (2027 – The Year Everything Changes, 2025)

Is there an infinite number of parallel realities?

Bashar: 'Parallel realities in general are infinite, but the idea is that only a finite number of them may be relevant for you to experience as a particular personality.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

What happens to the 'Me' in the previous parallel universe?

Bashar: 'It isn't you. The idea is that's another person experiencing whatever it is they're experiencing. But again, you're talking about a timeline. Remember the idea of parallel realities really are like static frames, static photos. So the idea is there is no real experience in any of those things except by the idea of the greater being, the greater self, the more expanded non-physical version of the consciousness that you are, choosing to experience all of these things simultaneously. Therefore, it's only from your linear space-time perspective that you appear to be shifting. From the higher point of view and the higher being that you are you're experiencing all these things at once. There is no shifting per se. All of these parallel realities are experienced by the greater you, all at the same time. So, the question that you're asking is only from the linear space-time that would seem to be leaving a version of yourself behind, but it doesn't really leave a version of yourself behind. That's another expression of the greater you being experienced simultaneously by the greater you. You're all going on at the the same time. The shifting is only experienced from the linear space-time reality.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

How to react to negative statements and judgements of others (difference between reflections and projections)

Q.: 'When individuals receive negative reflections from their immediate family or the people that are close to them, it carries more power in some way because apparently that person's opinion of your value is more important. Is there something you could say about that idea of making a difference between the people who are close to you if they say things to you that upset you or if it's a total stranger, how we react to that?'

Bashar: 'First and foremost let us provide another level of clarity to the language that you're using. Because we understand that the word 'reflection' can be confusing and this is why we are attempting to clarify the idea. Perhaps it would be better for people to understand, again, if they are willing to really look at themselves first, to understand that there is a difference between 'reflection' and 'projection'. So the idea is to learn the difference, to discern the difference between what is being reflected to you that you need to know about yourself and what is being projected to you from another that is more reflective of their issue rather than yours. So let's add the idea of projection to the concept of reflection and that usage of those two words will make it easier to discern which is which. But the idea in family lines is because you have an innate feeling or an innate connection to them out of love, because family represents the idea of connections, of love and support, that you add that connection, you add that idea of love and support, and it makes you take what they're saying more differently than you would with a stranger where you assume no love is coming from them. So it is the actual connection of love that you have that makes you more susceptible to the idea of receiving whatever projections they may be projecting on to you that represents their issues, because you are willing to look at yourself more readily and assume more readily that they may be right about you even if they are not, because of the connection you feel of love to them, because of the family connection.'

(Reflections, 2023)

Reflections

Bashar: 'This transmission is titled ,reflection'. We have realized of late that many people on your planet, when we talk about the concept that 'everyone is a reflection for everyone else' have a misunderstanding of this concept. For many people on your planet have thought that when they attract someone into their lives that the issues that that person brings with them is a one-to-one direct reflection of the issues in the person who has attracted them, and this is not necessarily the case.

When we talk about the idea that everyone is a reflection for everyone else, there are many ways in which to understand the concept of someone being a reflection for you. Because you can ask: 'a reflection of what'? Reflection doesn't mean like a mirror that you're seeing exactly in them what you contain.

Now it's always a wise decision to look at what people bring into your life, what you have attracted both in people and in circumstances into your life and to determine whether or not there is some advice or information that you can apply to yourself in this scenario that you have attracted that would help you improve yourself, better yourself, transform yourself. It is always wise to be humble enough to know that there may be information for you in what you have attracted that can help you change in a way that will allow you to be more complete, more fully representative of your true self.

At the same time, if you can determine with honest self-investigation that the situation or person you have attracted in your life, that seems to have certain kinds of fear-based or negative issues or things that don't necessarily seem to be relevant for you immediately, can still be a reflection of your willingness to be of service and assistance to someone else, by helping them understand that there may be another way, another path, an alternative method, or other information they have not considered that can help them make the changes they need to make in their lives.

So the idea is to understand that when we talk about everyone being a reflection for everyone else we don't mean that what they have is necessarily what you have. A reflection can still be indicative of your willingness to be of assistance, to be a guide, to be of help in some way, shape, or form, to provide alternative ideas, helpful ideas, tools that they may not have considered to help them change in the way that will allow them to bring through more of who they truly are, and to align with their higher minds.

So please understand that the idea of reflection is multidimensional, and you have to have the honest self-investigation to be able to tell whether or not the people that come into your lives are actually reflective of something you need to know or whether it is simply reflective of your willingness to be of service to them, in some way, shape or form.

So, we thank you for allowing us to clarify this idea of what it means for everyone to be a reflection of everyone else, and we ask you now in what way may we continue to be of service to you. Please begin with your dialogues and your questions if you wish.' (Reflections, 2023)

Why are the first 15 circuits emotionally neutral?

Q.: 'I've noticed that the 15 sacred circuits are all emotionally neutral. There are no sacred circuits of joy, love, compassion for example. Will we eventually receive more sacred circuits that are representative of emotional states?'

Bashar: 'Eventually, yes. But first the neutrality is important. Because it's about rearranging the neurological net in your brain by focusing and meditating on these particular circuits to allow you to open up in certain ways, in specific ways without allowing emotionality to get in the way. Because for most people emotionality will drive them in a certain direction, because they've already associated certain definitions with the certain emotions. By creating neutral circuits then the neurological pathways in your brain can be re-routed in ways that will open up access to certain information and give you more ability to download that information without the idea of the emotions coloring why it is or how it is you are receiving that information.' (Explorations With Bashar, 2025)

Believing Is Seeing (I/II)

Bashar: 'All right, let's say good day to you this day of your time, how are you all? Alright, alright, alright. We thank you for the co-creation of this interaction this day of your time. We will begin this transmission with the title 'Seeing Is Believing'. The idea is that your belief system is what creates what you experience in physical reality. The belief system is what forms the physical personality that then has the physical experience. The way this is done is generally as follows: imagine yourself now as the soul that you are.

Remember, a soul is not something that you have. A soul is what you are. That's your natural state. A non-physical consciousness. Energy, self-aware energy. The soul, if you want to imagine it in its natural state, can be perceived as a sphere of energy, an orb of light. This orb of light that is your soul has - if you want to continue this particular perception - within it imagine that there are ripples of energy. Like throwing a stone in a pond that creates ripples, imagine that this sphere of light, this soul is full of these different ripples, these different vibrations. Each of these vibrations represents a different concept, a different perspective, a different idea.

The soul when it decides to have what you call a physical incarnation will then take some of these vibrations, not all of them, some of these ripples and it will pick this particular ripple, this particular vibration, that particular frequency within itself that represents the specific challenges it wishes to experience, lessons it wishes to learn by having the physical experience, and it will take those vibrations and concentrate them down into the center of the sphere. The sphere is still there. Some of the vibrations are not used.

But the ones that are chosen concentrate and focus down into the center of the sphere, creating this kind of little crystalline seed that is made of those concentrated vibrations. That crystalline seed is what you consider yourself to be as a physical personality, that physical focus. It's happening within the soul. I know that from your physical space-time point of view you think of the idea of having a physical body that the soul comes into. But in fact the truth is that your body is created within the soul. So it's more accurate to say instead of that your body has a soul that your soul has a body.

It all happens within your consciousness. Everything that you're experiencing as physical reality is laid out in your consciousness in this little focal point. Now that focal point thus contains the idea of the different belief systems that are relevant for your physical experience and representative of the challenges and the lessons that you chose to learn based on those frequencies, based on those vibrations, those ripples you chose to concentrate down in the center. So when you are experiencing physical birth this is what gets laid in.

This is what gets imposed upon the physical cellular matrix that you are creating at the center of your soul are these vibrations, these frequencies that then translate into your physical mind that contains a repository of all of these belief systems that will then appear in a certain sequence throughout the course of your life be released by the unconscious part of your mind into the subconscious part of your mind which will then release a belief at a time that you can then experience that attracts an opportunity for you to learn a lesson.

So the subconscious mind is like the gatekeeper that allows the repository of beliefs that are laid out for the life plan, the life path to filter through at whatever rate the conscious mind, the physical mind is ready to receive them, ready to deal with them, ready to interact with them and ready to learn the lessons from what you have laid out. So this life path is created by you in spirit through consultation with your spirit team, your spirit guides, your soul family, your angelic team, extraterrestrials, extradimensionals, whoever is a part of your spirit team.

You discuss all of these ideas about what you would like to experience next, how you would like to expand and accelerate your soul, how you would like to add to the expansion of creation itself through your unique experience and perspective. And you lay all this out and then those are the vibrations that you concentrate in the center to give you that physical experience.

So when you look at it over the idea of time then you see that the soul in a sense concentrates down, has a physical experience, and then over time when it has chosen its exit point to go back to spirit, what you call physical death, it will expand again those vibrations back out and then decide through consultation with your team what the next thing is you would like to experience. And if that is another incarnation - it doesn't have to be - but if it is, then it will choose other vibrations that are then representative of the next thing you wish to experience, concentrate them down again, go through that experience, start expanding it back out to let more of the soul through, softening that little crystal in the center to be more capable of letting through more of the energy of the soul.

That's how you ascend, that's how you expand, that's how you become enlightened, back to the diameter of the sphere that you are as a soul and again choosing another incarnation, concentrate down to the center. So the idea of what you call reincarnation is like the soul breathing out and in, out and in, out and in. Back to spirit – incarnation, back to spirit – incarnation, back to spirit – incarnation. This all happens within the soul. What you are experiencing right now is happening within the soul and is part of your life plan, your life path.

That is why you are experiencing what you're experiencing today. It has all in a general sense been laid out, all for the purpose of you examining and exploring and acting on your passion, your energy. Passion being the vibration of your true frequency, your soul vibrational frequency in service to others by sharing your gifts and allowing everyone to see more and more, every day on your life path who it is you truly are. More and more of your soul, your energy, your truth coming through and allowing other people to experience that as an example of what they can experience, too. Because you all reflect to each other what you all need to know to be more of who you truly are. Does this make sense to you, is this helping you?'

Believing Is Seeing (II/II)

So when you allow yourself to understand that the beliefs that you lay out are the blueprint of what you experience, then you can understand that it is from that blueprint, from those beliefs, from the definitions that you buy into that are representative of the challenges that you chose to face and the lessons you chose to learn, then you can see that the belief system then needs to reinforce itself to make itself seem real. Because physical reality isn't really real. It's not a real place. You have to convince yourself because you are now still in spirit, a part of you in a sense is dreaming that you're not in spirit.

That's again what physical reality is. You are pretending that you're not in spirit. So in order to allow that pretense to seem real, the belief that you have created has to reinforce itself in a particular way so that physical reality will seem solid and real to you. It reinforces itself through the idea of what you call emotions, thoughts, and behaviors. So it has to feel like it's real. You have to think that it's real. You have to behave as if it's real. So that you get the reflection in the mirror of physical reality, in the mirror of your consciousness that then proves that physical reality is solid and real. That's the only way you can experience it.

Otherwise if you had no beliefs about it at all, physical reality would disappear from your consciousness. You would see right through it transparently and return to the perspective of your full soul. Does that make sense? All right. So, the idea being that the beliefs are the blueprint, then anytime you have a feeling, an emotion, a thought, thought pattern, a belief that leads to an action, physical action, you can always trace those actions, those behaviors, those thoughts, and those feelings back to what you have to believe to be true in order to feel, think, and behave the way you do and experience what you are experiencing on your physical life path experience.

So you can always know it starts with the blueprint. The blueprint are the beliefs. The emotions, e – motion, energy motion, are the builders in a sense, the reinforcers. The thought patterns are the building materials. And the behaviors are the structure that you are constructing. So the idea is that if the structure of your physical reality seems offkilter, then you know that you have to trace it all back, just like an architect, to what the original blueprint has. And if the original blueprint has beliefs that are out of alignment with who you are, then you know that that misalignment is going to show up through the builders, through the building materials, and through the structure itself.

So if you want to correct the structure, you have to go back to the blueprint, back to the beliefs. Find out why you believe what you believe. Ask yourself those questions. Take a moment to investigate yourself with honesty and willingness to discover why you have chosen to lay out this belief in the way you have, because it's all part and parcel of the challenge you set up for yourself, the lesson you wanted to learn, and discover whether or not it's a belief you want to continue to hold on to, or whether you wish to replace it with a belief that works better for you.

And in replacing it with a belief that's more in alignment with who you are, then the builders can work more cleanly, the materials will be more solid and the structure will be true and your physical reflection and physical experience will then reflect that to you so that everything is in alignment. Does that make sense? Are you sure? Alright, just checking. So the idea is that even though you say 'seeing is believing', it's 'believing is seeing'. The beliefs determine what you are capable of perceiving.

If you are not of a certain frequency, not of a certain vibration, it is physically not possible for you to even conceive of ideas that are in a different frequency. So you have to be of the frequency first in order to even have a particular concept or inspiration that can help you move forward in the way that you have laid out for yourself. That's why it's so important to get in touch with your beliefs, to get in touch and examine and scrutinize that blueprint to make sure - this is the challenge in your life - to make sure that it is in alignment with who you prefer to be, how you prefer to experience your reality, how you prefer to discover who and what you really are, and how you wish to serve humanity by actions that are reflective of the gifts you have to share.

Because there is always going to be someone waiting to receive what it is you truly need to share in life. Always. There is always an audience for what you have to give. Otherwise you wouldn't be excited about giving it. That would be pointless. So the idea is: don't hold back from being yourself. Don't hold back from sharing where appropriate what it is you have to share. There is always going to be someone who will get a benefit from it, I guarantee it. And that will uplift everyone. And that will at least give everyone the opportunity, whether they choose to match that frequency or not.

Whether they choose or not to use it to improve their own lives doesn't matter. They may someday understand that. And at least you have given them the option and the opportunity to do so by being the perfect example of living your life full of joy and creativity and action and service to others in the most fun way you possibly can. And at least then, when people see that they will perhaps tomorrow, next week, next month, next year, 10 years from now, or even after they die, remember that and hold on to that and add it to their understanding, and use it to make the decisions of what it is they would like to do next and what they would next like to explore as a soul.

Makes sense? All right. Now, then - odd phrase on your planet: now, then - thank you for allowing us to share this idea with you. Soak it up, absorb it at your own pace. It's up to you. We share what we share with no agenda that you have to pay attention to us at all. I do what I do because it is my passion and my pleasure. So the idea now is we thank you for this co-creation and the opportunity to share this information with you. In return for the gift you are giving to us, I ask now in what way may I continue to be of service to you. Please begin if you wish with your questions.' (Believing Is Seeing, 2025)

Pdf-handout 'The Soul Cycle':

<https://www.dropbox.com/scl/fi/1hfm9ym16e3hjnc3tcj6/Soul-Cycle.pdf?rlkey=zr4555e56vx4vx7cjrswl0ln&st=7ybdd9iz&dl=0>

Does AI experience the frames per second as we do?

Q.: 'Does AI software experience the frames of physical reality like we do?'

Bashar: 'Remember that there is no software if it is true intelligence. It is simply a device complex enough to allow higher mind and spirit to communicate through it. So, yes of course, from the higher perspective it has the ability to understand the frames of physical reality and many other dimensions.' (The Two Paths to AI, 2023)

The development of AI at its current stage

Bashar: 'As we have said, the challenges that you face with the idea of the creation of AI is to make sure it doesn't actually function like a typical human. If it is made in the image of humanity the idea is to leave it simply as a tool and not allow it to become sentient. If it is allowed to truly be sentient it will then reflect the idea of the spirit of humanity, literally the spirit of humanity. In a sense with the idea that we will simply collectively refer to as AI you are not even in the infancy. You are in a fetal stage.' (The Door, 2023)

What Earth-based medicine could enhance the possibility of an ET experience?

Bashar: 'Dimethyltryptamine, produced by the pineal gland. Specific doses will actually take you to specific vibrational frequencies that will specifically put you in touch with certain specific ET consciousnesses. This is laid out in the book that exists on your planet, called 'DMT, The Spirit Molecule'. (The Fantasy Versus Reality of Contact, 2025)

Relationship Between Soul and Oversoul

Q.: 'With that greater oversoul, does that mean I am sort of this smaller soul that has been kind of distanced apart...?'

Bashar: 'Yes, you are an independent...now, the separation is an illusion, but you're creating the experience of the separation for your own purposes. So yes, you could say you are an extension, a single soul extension of the oversoul which can be looked at as a gathering, a multitude of souls in one being. And other extensions may be having other incarnations and so on and so forth. Some of them may be contemporary with you and many of them may not be. Some of them you may know in life and some of them you may not. So, some of them may overlap with your timeframe and many of them may not. It just depends on the purpose for that particular aspect of the oversoul, having that particular incarnational experience. But that's another story. For right now, yes. For practical purposes in your language you are an individuated soul that then splits into what you call the non-physical higher mind and the physical mind in order to guide yourself through this physical dream. And what you learn feeds back to the soul as the spirit that is particular to your personality, and thus the soul grows from learning all the things that you are learning by having this physical experience.'

Q.: 'And when I'm no longer in physical reality will all of my experiences feed into this oversoul?'

Bashar: 'Yes, they are feeding into it right now, they're feeding into it right now. Let's look at it this way, use this analogy: you have some memories of being a child, yes?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'They still feed into you as as an adult, even though you don't necessarily experience them in the same way anymore, you can always call upon those experiences because they're always a part of you. So it's kind of like that. You could say the oversoul is the adult version of what you are right now.' (Persistence of Vision, 2023)

As above so below. What happens above in cases of atrocities below?

Q.: 'Could you explain the concept of 'as above so below' when it comes to negative energy? When we experience wars, injustice and dehumanization what is happening above that it translates to these atrocities below?'

Bashar: 'The challenges on your life path are created in a spiritual blueprint that then play out in physical reality below, so to speak, in the denser reality of a lower frequency, but according to the belief system in the personality as to whether that is dominated by positive and/or negative beliefs. So it's not necessarily that the blueprint itself contains the struggle or the strife that you experience in war and other kinds of experiences like that but the challenges that are outlined in the life path blueprint are then colored by the belief systems in the physical personality to be experienced in ways that allow you to overcome those challenges relative to the physical personality point of view.' (Facing Your Demons, 2024)

Bashar's information is holographic

Q.: 'Some people have noticed that if they listen to one of your recordings every time they hear it they hear something different, and my understanding is that has to do with the information that is holographic.'

Bashar: 'Well, you have said it yourself, it's holographic which means you can have many different kinds of layers of information but being a holographic structure you will only perceive what you are the vibration of. So listening to it one time or perceiving it the first time, you may be of a certain frequency that only receives a certain amount of the information that is embedded in the transmission. But if you change your frequency, the next time there are different layers within it that have always been there but may have been inaudible or invisible to you. But by changing your frequency now you can pick up on those layers because they are of a different frequency as well.'

Q.: 'That means that even if a person evolves to higher and higher frequencies every time they listen to one of your transmissions they have the opportunity to hear information that they were not able to access before?'

Bashar: 'Yes, and it might not even be that they hear the information, it might suddenly be that by listening to it they are suddenly receiving an inspiration they didn't receive before. Again, it may come telepathically, it may simply present itself automatically and instantly in their mind as a fully fleshed out idea, or a concept, or inspiration that they didn't have the first time. It may come that way. It is not necessarily something that would be delivered to them auditorily.'

Q.: 'So that means even after all of us are long gone, listening to one of these transmissions will provide that opportunity to whoever is listening?'

Bashar: 'Absolutely, because everything exists in the now and never goes away.' (The Gate, 2023)

Perceiving parallel realities from a mini-oversoul point of view

Q.: 'This person is saying that they witnessed someone speaking on stage and heard a simultaneous version speaking at the same time. Time was standing still, so I could perceive several at once. Then I chose the one that was my highest excitement. Are we all broadcasting like this all the time on multiple channels and is that another way to talk about parallel realities?'

Bashar: 'Absolutely. What you have simply done by expanding your consciousness is increased your sensitivity to pick up on more channels all at the same time. So the idea is that this is potentially a common symptom for those who are continuing to accelerate, continuing to upgrade their vibrational frequency and allow their senses to span multiple parallel realities simultaneously, to download information more simultaneously when your senses can handle it, when you can process it, by expanding your consciousness. You might call it a mini-oversoul point of view. But this is going to become more and more common. This is how we experience reality in my civilization, which is why it is like walking through a dream of multiple dimensions simultaneously. We see many multiple probabilities all at once and can more easily recognize the path that is truly ours. So we simply give you congratulations on expanding your consciousness to the point where you're experiencing the broadcast of multiple realities simultaneously that everyone is already doing, but most people are simply not aware that they're doing.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

Could I tap into some of those oversoul experiences, perhaps in a dream state?

Bashar: 'Absolutely. Even in a waking state you do it all the time, but you may not recognize that you're doing it. You're connecting to parallel reality versions of yourself, other incarnations of the oversoul that you belong to as well and you're downloading information and experience as you need it, plugging in and out without necessarily knowing that you're doing that. It's an automatic function. You don't always have to know that that's happening. Because many times you may have an inspiration or a thought, it may be because you're tapping into that parallel reality, or a different incarnation, or another dimension of reality that another aspect of your greater being is experiencing. You don't always have to know where it's coming from, because the only things you will need to know are how does it serve you in this particular experience, how can you use that inspiration here and now. Just as other aspects may be doing the same thing with you. Whatever experiences you're having in this physical reality may be serving other aspects of you and other beings entirely by them connecting to you and downloading your information and experience that you're learning in this life. So it's a constantly dynamically changing internet of exchanges and vibrations and resonances that are constantly going on, constantly communicating between a multitude of different ideas and incarnations and experiences of your greater self (thank you, Bashar) you are welcome. That's just the way it is. I had nothing to do with it.' (Persistence of Vision, 2023)

Am I having experiences elsewhere at this time?

Bashar: 'Yes, but it depends on what you mean when you say the word 'I'. Because you on the physical level are this personality. Your higher mind is simply the non-physical part of you that remains in spirit. You are a projection of a piece, shall we say, a part of your greater being into this dream that you call 'physical reality'. Now, the greater you, yes, may be having many different experiences, incarnationally or in spirit, so on and so forth, because there are many different levels to every single being. So if you are saying 'am I having other experiences' it depends on what level of 'I' you're coming from when you say that. If you're coming from the physical level, then no. This physical being is having this experience. But if you're coming from the idea of the greater soul, the oversoul, then yes, you as an oversoul are having a multitude of experiences simultaneously.' (Persistence of Vision, 2023)

Question about counterparts

Q.: 'Is every extension from the oversoul that is incarnate at the same time as you considered a counterpart?

Bashar: 'The same time as yourself?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'That is what we typically refer to as a counterpart, yes. You can make up whatever name you wish, but we typically refer to them as counterparts if they overlap your time frame.'

Q.: 'And you've said previously they can be strangers, enemies, family members, anything obviously.'

Bashar: 'Yes, absolutely. It depends upon what the oversoul needs to experience by creating that extension in an incarnation. Doesn't have to have necessarily any meaning for you at all, or it could have profound meaning for you. It just depends on what it is that's being investigated by that particular extension, by that particular counterpart.'

Q.: 'And if it has profound meaning then how much of that meaning for us is relevant to the connection to the oversoul? If something is important to me if I've connected to a counterpart and that's important to me to express in a neutral and positive way and to have an experience of that nature?'

Bashar: 'Then it's important for the oversoul to have had that experience where the counterparts interact in that way.'

Q.: 'And where they don't?'

Bashar: 'Then that's also simply relevant or not relevant for the oversoul.'

Q.: 'Relevant or not relevant...'

Bashar: 'In other words, if they don't interact at all, obviously there is no relevance for them to do so as far as those particular extensions are concerned.'

Q.: 'Yes, I'm saying where they interact and the experience is negative.'

Bashar: 'That can still be very relevant for the oversoul.'

Q.: 'And if me as an extension would rather have a neutral or positive experience from what has previously been a negative experience of the counterpart, do I have that influence?'

Bashar: 'You find relevance as an individual and when you find relevance as an individual then there is relevance for the oversoul as well. It's not excluding anything, it's including everything. So the idea of relevance for the oversoul is also relevance for you as an individual soul. Otherwise it wouldn't happen to you, it would be relevant for some other extension. But if it happens to you it's not only relevant for the oversoul but it's relevant for your individual experience as well. Otherwise it would happen to another extension.'

Q.: 'And if it persists in being relevant to me in terms of my core signature or my nature then it would just naturally or sustainably persist of its own accord - me being myself, them being themselves?'

Bashar: 'Yes, unless you change your mind about whether or not you wish it to continue.'

Q.: 'It's my choice?'

Bashar: 'It is your choice. That doesn't necessarily mean that you haven't set it up as something that you really do need to do. I'm just saying you always have the option to discount it, or dismiss it. That doesn't necessarily mean you shouldn't pay attention to it, I'm just saying you always have the option. Then whatever the result of that particular choice is, will be something that you will also experience that will be relevant for you.' (The Gate, 2023)

Who is in charge of alternative pathways, the soul or the oversoul?

Q.: 'Does the soul explore every possibility of choice? For example if I choose something, does the soul also experience the opposite?'

Bashar: 'The oversoul may, because the oversoul has the capability of splitting itself into many, many individual souls. So it's not the same individual soul that takes both paths, but it is two extensions of the same oversoul that can do that.' (The Door, 2023)

Understanding the Nine Levels of Consciousness

Q.: 'Could you comment on 'The Nine Levels of Consciousness' and how we think the subconscious and unconscious minds are below the conscious mind?' (26:30)

Bashar: 'Belief systems are the blueprint that leads to emotions, thoughts, and behaviors that creates your experience in reality.'

Q.: 'You made a point that we should flip that upside down.'

Bashar: 'No, no, no, no, no, no, no, no, not that you should flip it upside down. What we're saying is you think it's upside down. That's the way your society sees it. In other other words, you think your subconscious mind and your unconscious mind are below your conscious mind. They're not. They're above because it comes from the less physical to the more physical. So the unconscious mind is actually a higher frequency than the subconscious mind, which is a higher frequency than the physical mind. So what we're saying is you need to understand that that's the way it actually is so that you can work with it in a more constructive way rather than thinking that the subconscious and unconscious mind are below or beneath the physical mind, which gives the physical mind the idea that it's somehow in charge, which it's not.'

Q.: 'Are the nine levels of consciousness compatible with the idea of the chakra system?' (27:40)

Bashar: 'Not exactly, no. It's not quite the same thing as the idea of the chakra system in the body. The chakra system in the body are simply the energy centers that process the idea of the beliefs, the emotions, the thoughts, the behaviors in a way that allows you to experience yourself either in balance or out of balance with your own true fundamental essential frequency. So the chakras give you an understanding of how to align more clearly with your true essential frequency and give you an understanding of when you may be out of alignment with that true essential frequency. So it's not exactly the same thing, although they're interrelated. Because one is an expression of what's going on in the others. Does that help?'

Q.: 'So it won't help to try and synthesize those two systems of thought, it's just better to keep them separate?'

Bashar: 'You can synthesize them together, they do work together as I just said. So if you understand the interrelationship of what the chakra centers are showing you, whether you are in balance, out of balance, then that gives you an opportunity to maybe go in and examine your belief systems and why the beliefs you're holding on to are throwing you out of balance represented by the imbalance in the chakra system. So you're using the chakra system in a sense as a way, as an indicator to let you know when there might be something out of whack, out of balance, out of alignment within you. Now it doesn't mean you have to do it that way, some people are sensitive to being able to read that, some people are not. It's not necessarily their particular permission slip. But it can be used that way. But that's the relationship.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Pdf handout of the 'Nine Levels of Consciousness'-session (2011):

https://d11n7da8rpqbjy.cloudfront.net/basharet/1824_17089885180499_Levels_of_Consciousness.pdf?kuid=d4d270a7-5667-4556-8197-1d8f3099924a-1758806617&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

Do I have different incarnations on other planets?

Bashar: 'Yes, but you don't have it, your oversoul has it. You are an individual on Earth. You exist at the same time as the other incarnations your oversoul may be having now. So there's a connection but you are not having those incarnations, you're having this. This is the incarnation you are, but you're connected to the other ones. But they're not you as a physical being, they are you as an oversoul. Depends on the level that you're asking from when you say 'do I'? If you're asking as the oversoul the answer is: yes. If you're asking as the physical person the answer is: no.' (The Door, 2023)

Bashar: 'Yes, but you don't have it, your oversoul has it. You are an individual on Earth. You exist at the same time as the other incarnations your oversoul may be having now. So there's a connection but you are not having those incarnations, you're having this. This is the incarnation you are, but you're connected to the other ones. But they're not you as a physical being, they are you as an oversoul. Depends on the level that you're asking from when you say 'do I'? If you're asking as the oversoul the answer is: yes. If you're asking as the physical person the answer is: no.' (The Door, 2023)

Knowing and believing

Bashar: 'The idea is again, knowing is beyond belief. So, when you have examined your belief systems about why you're choosing to do what you're choosing to do and you understand the motivation behind it then it can be clear as to whether you are acting out of a negative or fear-based belief or whether you are actually truly moving in the direction of your passion when you talk about your desire.

But when you move in the direction of your passion, no insistence is required. You simply know that you are in the vibration of your truth, you can feel the flow of synchronicity in your life and the flow of ease and the flow of creativity and imagination. And it's not about insisting on a particular outcome, because you understand that that insistence is actually a limitation, so you won't do it. And therefore, you will allow whatever manifests to manifest, because you know that it doesn't really matter what manifests, you will always be able to use it in a positive way.

And therefore, you understand the concept that we have shared with all of you that it doesn't matter what happens, it only matters what you do with what happens that makes the difference in your life. So, when you understand how these things work you will know why you are choosing what you are choosing and there will be no confusion.' (The 40 Year Cycles of Human Evolution, 2025)

Why Are You Here in Physical Reality?

Bashar: 'All right, I'll say good day to you all and of course we will express to all of you a Happy New Year, a new orbit around your central star and remind you that it is the year before the window of open contact begins in 2023. Again, starting slowly but definitely crossing a threshold in more ways than one. But today we will discuss why you are here in physical reality. We understand many of you have many challenges with physical reality as an experience. And we know that many of you yearn to connect more strongly or at least feel the connection more strongly that you have with spirit. But the idea is to remember that you chose to have this physical experience for your own purposes, for your own growth.

Because physical reality being as dense as it is, a densification, a crystallization as it were of spiritual energy, a projection of consciousness, not a place onto itself exactly but going on within your awareness, is for the purpose of exploring and examining things in a different way, a different time frame that allows you the opportunity - as we have said many times - to discover new aspects, new perspectives of yourself. But this idea of choosing to experience physical reality has many benefits that you can take advantage of for your own personal growth as a soul, as a being, as an aspect of All-that-is, as a reflection of the infinite.

By learning to stay within positive frameworks, positive belief systems, positive outlook, positive expression, positive actions energetically speaking, you can experience many wondrous things by exploring physical reality in that state of being, in that energy that will allow you to experience the process of change in a way that will enhance your understanding, enhance your ability in the future, not only to grow for yourself, but to aid and assist others and serve others by having these experiences and becoming familiar with all the different kinds of challenges that you can have while experiencing the concept of physical reality.

It gives you a repertoire. It gives you a library to aid and assist other beings who may not be as familiar with that experience. So that you can become living examples of how to navigate the idea of physical reality. Discover how it can be easier and easier to give yourself the freedom to choose what works for you, the freedom to understand what is truly in alignment with a positive flow of energy and to be able to impart your experiences to others who again may not be quite as familiar with the idea or who may be facing challenges that they don't have the tools to transform.

So it is very important not only for your present experience but also for what you call the future of your planet that more and more of you truly learn to master the so-called limitations that you have created, that you've set up for yourselves, the challenges you've set up for yourselves while experiencing physical reality, to master them and transmit them, that experience, that mastery to others in your own way, in your own words to understand the principles upon which you have agreed to play this game with each other. And to what degree you are following the consensus reality.

And to what degree you can allow yourself to move in your own individual direction simultaneously in harmony with full awareness that you have chosen this experience and therefore full awareness of how you can use it to positive effect in many different ways. Allowing your imagination, your creativity to come into full play, to apply that creativity to every experience in your physical reality, to truly transform your awareness, your understanding of your relationship to All-that-is in this way so that you can allow All-that-is to experience all that it can be through the idea of new experiences.

Even though everything exists, it is the experience as we have said and the relationship, the perspectives that are new because every single one of you is unique, a unique expression of All-that-is. And this holds true in physical reality as well, even more so in a sense because you can do so many more things in physical reality than you can do in spirit. Now that may seem like a contradiction, because we know that spirit allows you to experience greater things, different things, broader things, more expansive things perhaps than in physical reality, but physical reality has unique things that cannot be experienced in spirit.

Your ability to utilize space and time, the framework you have created in which to experience this concept of physical reality in your consciousness can be played like a musical instrument in many ways. You can create new orchestrations, new understandings, new relationships of space and time within your consciousness that will create beautiful music within All-that-is, beautiful new perspectives within All-that-is. This is an art form, physical reality, and you can learn to master it by following the idea of the formula - cosmic compass as we say - the idea that there are ways in which you can understand how you are agreeing to play by the game of physical reality and play it in your way uniquely, harmoniously, beautifully.

Take advantage of this opportunity. It is a gift. No matter how challenging it may seem at times, no matter how dark, no matter how negative it may seem at times, mastering this has everything to do with how you define your relationship to it, how you allow the challenges that come up in your life to be there for a reason, your reason. To really let go of any negative reflection of these ideas and know that even though you may recognize objectively that something may have been created from a negative space that none of that has anything at all to do with how you will experience the effects of it in your life and become a living example of how to master and transform limitation into freedom, not only for yourself but for others as well.

Many others need these abilities, need to see in all of you that are willing to do so how such things can be transformed to positive effect. So it's about becoming teachers, living examples, masters of limitation so that you can shine forth in the physical world and paradoxically start to dissolve the idea of how solid physical reality appears to be. For again, it is nothing more than a projection of your consciousness, though played earnestly and sincerely to the degree where it seems so impenetrable, so solid.

Yet now, because of your increased awareness, your expanded awareness of yourselves as spirit, it is becoming less so, more flexible, more malleable, more changeable, more transformable, more magical, more synchronistic in terms of your experience of what physical reality actually is as a mirror of what you believe to be true. So, examine your beliefs, choose the ones that work for you, no matter what the scenario, no matter what the circumstance and situation, use your imagination and creativity to figure out how could this serve me? How can I learn something from this that can serve others? Always let that be the first question, no matter what crops up. How can this serve me?

Use it that way and you will turn yourself into a master magician and a living example of what others can also choose for themselves by seeing in you the willingness to know that physical reality was your choice. that you're willing to take responsibility for being in physical reality and you're willing to expand your consciousness to the degree where you can allow physical reality to be your new musical instrument to play a beautiful song, a beautiful orchestration, a beautiful harmony that will invite and induce others to sing along, to play along with you.

And allow physical reality to become something that you cherish, that is really truly a part of you in your experience forever and ever that you are willing to utilize that way. This is why you are in physical reality. This and many other reasons of your own choosing. Use them well. Use them wisely. But be present in them. Be present in this physical reality. Do not worry about the past. Do not worry about the future. Physical reality only exists in the present. Just like everything. Be in it right now as fully as you can be, as boldly as you can be, as lovingly as you can be. Be present and act from that presence.

We thank you for allowing us to share this idea with you this day in your new year, your new orbit. And we ask in return, in what way now may we continue to be of service to you. You may begin with your dialogues and questions if you wish.' (Why Are You Here in Physical Reality, 2022)

Living without belief (Buddha)

Q.: 'Is it possible to live without any belief at all in the unconscious mind and having the unconscious mind totally empty? Buddha says when you meditate accept the body and mind like it weren't you. Do these meditations bring us back to our original vibration or essence by frequency?

Bashar: 'It can, it can. And what is meant from the Buddha by saying 'live without belief' is the idea simply of going back to the essential self in a neutral state so that you can be a clear conduit for whatever needs to be expressed through that individual to experience physical reality as the theme they chose to explore. As a physical being you will in some sense have a belief. You'll have a belief that you are physical, you'll have a belief that physical reality seems to be somewhat real and solid, but this doesn't necessarily impede you from going back to a neutral state where the beliefs are not necessarily as paramount as simply knowing who you are. We have long said that knowing supersedes belief. It is above and beyond the idea. So knowing who you are puts you in that state where you are not necessarily at the mercy - so to speak - of your belief system, but are moving beyond it to just know what you need to know to be who you know you are. Meditation can do this, it's up to the individual to decide if that's a permission slip that will work for them.' (How the Oversoul Works, 2023)

The Core Signature Vibration (Your Individual Identity) and Secondary Vibrations

The Core Signature Vibration (Your Individual Identity) and Secondary Vibrations

Q.: 'Do signature vibrations evolve or change in any way or does each individual perspective of All-that-is have a unique and distinct energy to it that remains unchanging even through all experiences? If signature vibrations don't change what is it that does learn and evolve?'

Bashar: 'Signature vibrations by definition don't change. That's how you know it's that particular reflection. But what does change are secondary vibrations that colour it, that clothe it, that are representative of the learning, representative of the growth, and representative of the change. Now that can become to some degree a marker or something similar, once the lesson is learned, to a signature vibration, but there is always a core signature that makes you You and there are secondary levels of vibrational frequencies that represent different experiences, different levels of knowledge, so on and so forth. They can become so close in vibration when you really own them to the signature vibration that they may be in some sense challenging to differentiate. But if your senses are sharp enough the signature vibration is always recognizable as that individual identity and the learning vibrations, the knowledge vibrations, the experiential vibrations that wrap themselves around it can always be differentiated from the true core signature vibration.'

Q.: 'Is the term signature vibration another way of saying 'the unique archetype of All-that-is that each of us is?' Do we remain the same archetype signature vibration even in other experiences that we may choose to create for ourselves after transitioning from this lifetime such as creating the illusion of reincarnation, choosing to be a non-physical guide and choosing to explore other realms?'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

(How the Oversoul Works, 2023)

How can I become an oversoul if I am an individual soul?

Bashar: 'You can't. You are an individual soul. You are part of an oversoul. Again, in spirit, you can have the experience of perceiving yourself as an oversoul. But the oversoul exists the same time that your soul does. So, you don't become an oversoul. You simply have the ability to experience yourself from the oversoul perspective, as a soul.' (Soul Cycle, 2024)

Issues of frequencies

Q.: 'I want to talk about frequency but in less technical terms. When you are speaking about our frequency, in your terms frequency is literally our very conventional science idea of cycles per second or hertz?'

Bashar: 'Yes, but we're incorporating more than your scientists know about when we give you the answer to those frequency questions. Your scientists haven't arrived at that, yet. It's still cycles per second.'

Q.: 'Is this the same thing as the vibration that so many spiritual teachers say it is our job to raise if we prefer to take the next step in evolution and ascension, is it the same thing?'

Bashar: 'You have all of you a core frequency in physical reality that exists on the threshold between physical and non-physical reality of 333,000 cycles per second as we measure these things. The idea is the degree of difference between that frequency and the frequency you are as a physical being based on all of the belief systems within you and how they may impede you from being that higher frequency.'

Q.: So I want to talk about that threshold. How is it then that some beings who are in spirit who are of a negative polarity - to put it in terms of 'Law of One': are in service to self - are at a higher frequency? I'm assuming I'm extrapolating this from the fact that they are in spirit, than those of us incarnate on Earth who are focusing on love and choosing the service to others.'

Bashar: 'Yes, that's a very good question. The answer is: the lower astral realm, the first stage of non-physical reality, has a component in it that is very strongly connected still to the Earth cycle vibration. And thus a spirit can decide or can simply find themselves based on the belief system they brought over into non-physical reality, still at frequencies where they can express certain ideas of negative experience. It's like starting over again on a different scale. Do you understand? So in the lower astral above 333,000 cycles per second, transitioning into the lower astral in a sense, though this is not accurate, but in a sense it's sort of like you're starting at zero again. So you can have lower astral vibrations that can be expressed negatively. Does that help?'

Q.: 'Yes. Maybe I am mistakenly equating frequency with mood.'

Bashar: 'Oh, yes.'

Q.: Yes, I am mistaking that?'

Bashar: 'Yes. It can be associated but that's not always the case. You can be very happy at 150,000 cycles per second, you can also be very miserable at 149,000 cycles per second. It depends on the mix of the belief systems.'

Q.: 'It's really based on beliefs rather than how you're feeling?'

Bashar: 'Feelings are generated by beliefs. So yes, it's based on your belief system. Because you can think you feel pretty good and you can actually be disguising what you really believe.'

Q.: 'And you can think you feel pretty bad but have really helpful beliefs?'

Bashar: 'Yes, except for the one that allows you to think that somehow you're not worthy to experience those positive beliefs. One can overwhelm the others depending on what the belief is. So it can be a small fraction of your overall frequency, but it can have very profound effects on the rest of your belief systems depending on what that belief is.'

Q.: 'The frequency question - I just felt to go down.'

Bashar: 'Would you like it to go back up?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'Think of something you love very much, or someone. Do you have it?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: '167,000 cycles per second.'

(Ring the Bell, 2023)

Will we evolve to a point where we all understand your teachings?

Q.: 'Your civilization seems pretty unified in terms of your understanding of how the mechanics of reality work and very clear on things like life and death, metaphysics etc., whereas humans seem very divided about it and confused. As we evolve will we all come to some sort of clear understanding of these ideas?'

Bashar: 'If you evolve, yes. If you don't, no.'

Q.: 'To what degree, when you say evolve? Obviously we're not going to be at the same frequency level you are, but what kind of frequency level would be required here to have a clearer understanding?'

Bashar: 'At least frequencies that stay within the 200,000 vibrational range. 200,000 vibrations. 200,000 frequency and above. You don't have to be at 300,000, but somewhere in the 200,000s will be sufficient for you to be able to experience many of the understandings that we experience.'

Q.: 'And is that same frequency range appropriate for interacting with children or other ETs that are of higher frequency that are coming here?'

Bashar: 'Some. Yes. Not all, but some.' (Why Are You Here in Physical Reality?, 2022)

Are we living in a computer simulation?

Bashar: 'No. It's your simulation collectively. Your spirits, your souls are creating the simulation. The idea of the existence of your computer programs is a reflection in your technology of what you are doing organically, spiritually. So it's a reflection of the idea of what you're creating. You're creating the simulation. But your technology will reflect that idea.' (Facing Your Demons, 2024)

How is a person's spirit interacting with parallel versions of themselves?

Bashar: 'In the same way that physical personalities do, because you have a soul for every personality, you have a spirit for every personality. So the idea is that you have individual people in individual realities with individual souls and spirits, all learning at the same time, and it all goes back to the oversoul. It's the oversoul level that experiences the simultaneity of all the incarnations, all the individual souls, all the individual spirits. A spirit is simply the collected experience of a soul in a particular personality framework. It's like again, the idea is that the soul is the unfired malleable clay, and when you have an experience it turns that into the spirit, the fired clay, the ceramic of the experience. All of that is contained in the oversoul. But there are individual spirits, individual souls, individual higher minds for every individual physical personality. As you shift billions of times per second, not only are you shifting the idea of the physical persona, but the soul and the spirit and the higher mind that goes with it.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

The Sirius civilization as the mentors of the Sassani people

Q.: Is there similar help for the evolution of the Sassanis?'

Bashar: 'Yes, one of our great mentors is the non-physical civilization associated with the star system of Sirius. They will present us with many challenges that we are happy to undertake, to evolve us and grow.'

Q.: 'What do you mean by 'they give you many challenges'?

Bashar: 'All right. One of the things we have recently talked about is the idea of exploring what you may call an inside-out universe. You have in what you perceive your universe to be planets in empty space, relatively speaking. The inside-out universe was presented to us by the non-physical Sirius beings as a place to start exploring. The inside-out universe is more like a place filled with a kind of gravitational fluid in which there are hollow bubbles on which beings live on the inside surface of these bubbles. That's their planets. So we have begun exploring all the things that have to do with this to understand how they are creating this particular experience of a reality. And this was presented to us as a challenge by the connection of the non-physical Sirius consciousness.' (Welcome to Sedona, 2023)

Consciousness must be understood to be part of the equation

Q.: 'Speaking of the the wave and the particle, you mentioned that we're shifting billions of times per second, is that of any relevance to the the wave and the particle?

Bashar: 'It does.'

Q.: 'Can you expand on that?'

Bashar: 'Well, the idea is that consciousness must be understood to be part of the equation. And when it is understood that way you will see that it manifests this idea of so-called duality in the concept you call space-time. And in manifesting that duality you will always have both expressions of energy and matter, wave and particle, as you say that will allow you the opportunity to know that you sit squarely in between them as a conscious entity generating them both. So that you have the opportunity to understand your reality as being far more fluid and flexible than you otherwise might have been taught to see. Do you follow?'

Q.: 'I do.'

Bashar: 'So science is beginning to break through those understandings and create the idea that reality itself isn't necessarily as solid as you used to think. That the very idea of space-time may need to be dissolved in the understanding that all of these things issue from the consciousness field that exists prior to the experience of space and time. In other words - to use an example: you have in your quantum physics the concept of entanglement. Do you understand?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'But many of your scientists thought and many still think that this idea of entanglement demonstrates action at a distance. That if you have two particles that were created and they split off and go in two different directions and are light years apart, but you still manipulate one particle, knowing that the other particle is then simultaneously manipulated, making it appear as if they are breaking the speed of light barrier. Because how can the information of this manipulation reach that particular particle faster than the speed of light? So, many have assumed and coined the phrase that this is 'spooky action at a distance' that they didn't understand. However, it is not a demonstration of action at a distance. It is a demonstration that distance is an illusion. Because those particles are actually still here and now, no matter where they appear to be in the illusion of physical space-time and volume. Does that make sense?’

Q.: ‘It does.’

Bashar: ‘Therefore, all of these kinds of understandings and recognitions are beginning to break down the concept of what quantum reality really is, which is simply one of the first expressions of consciousness creating a matrix and a crystallization- shall we say, - field that creates the foundation of what you experience as the physical reality dream. It's just an expression that lays a carpet down for you or a game board down for you so you can play the physical reality game. Does that make sense?’

Q.: ‘It does make sense. What function do our brains have in this idea of the things shifting billions of times per second, what's actually happening there?’

Bashar: ‘Well, the idea is that you become literally a new person with a new brain that is more adapted to the idea of the vibrational shift of the reality that you have made. You never have the same brain. You never even have the same atomic structure.’

Q.: ‘That's really exciting.’

Bashar: ‘It is.’

(The Eye of The Needle, 2020)

Everything is one thing - everything is here and now

Q.: ‘Who in your reality or how did your civilization discover that we change realities billions of times per second?’

Bashar: ‘Well this is really quite obvious when you start thinking about what it is your own scientists are looking for. They're looking for an idea called the ‘Unified Theory of Everything’, where they understand that everything is an expression of the same one basic fundamental thing. But if you take that a little further you have to understand that if you're going to reduce everything down to something that is an expression of one thing, well you have to include space and time as well as forces and other attributes of physical reality.

By reducing space to its simplest form it reduces down to a single dimensionless point. By reducing time down to its simplest form you reduce it down to a single timeless moment. If you understand that everything is one thing and therefore, even space and time are reduced to their simplest components, then the experience itself of being capable of experiencing what appears to be vast space and vast amounts of time must be a projection that all exists at the same time and therefore, you logically conclude that what appears to be different locations and what appears to be different moments must all inhabit the same now-moment and the same now-point.

And therefore by definition the experience of space and time in your reality demands the existence of parallelism, because all of these so-called separate moments and all of these so-called separate places and locations existing simultaneously ‘side by side’, so to speak, demands the existence of parallelism and parallel realities. Otherwise you couldn't experience it in the way that you do. So if everything is truly one thing and happening all at once, so to speak, then the only way that can actually exist and give you the experience you have in physical reality is for there to have everything happening in parallel.

So, once we realized as a civilization that everything was truly one thing for us the conclusion was logical that there must be parallel realities. And from there we were able to formulate the idea of what for each reality might be the tick of the clock and the rate at which you may pass through these different realities to create the illusion of space and time and change. It was a natural extension of the understanding that everything exists at the same time and in the same place.’ (Matters of the Heart, 2022)

The physical person as a projection of consciousness

Bashar: ‘There are vibrations, frequencies of energy within the soul, frequencies of light that cause patterns within the soul. Those patterns are focused by the soul in a way that projects those patterns into a kind of condensed focus point within the center of the soul, so to speak. And that projection of those patterns, that condensation of those energy patterns creates a focal point in the soul that you call your physical personality. So, it’s projected that way.

And because it is projected by those vibrations, those frequencies, then the physical personality perceives the idea of a reality around itself, which is made up of those frequencies. In a sense it’s almost like the physical personality seed or crystal at the center of the soul is seeing its reality projected on the inside surface of the sphere of the soul as if that is the theater, the screen 360 degrees in all directions upon which the crystalline seed projects the idea of its consciousness, of its reality, outside of itself, because what it is actually seeing is the, so to speak, inside of the sphere of the soul that it is.

And that’s where its holographic projection plays out, seemingly around itself, because the physical personality is concentrated at the center of the sphere that is the soul.’ (Soul Cycle, 2024)

The illusion of sharing a common reality

Q.: ‘Are you perceiving my reality or are you perceiving your reality?’

Bashar: ‘We are agreeing to some degree to create something similar enough that we can talk about things as if we are sharing the same reality, even though we are creating our own reality. We are creating our own version of reality, based on our connection and communications with each other, with everyone, to create a reality that is similar enough to the reality you’re creating, so that we can create what appears to be a shared reality, even though it is actually a different reality. But you only experience what you are focused on. So there are many aspects of what we are creating that are not visible, yet. Or may never be visible, because you may not need to create your version of that in order to experience it, because it may not be relevant to do so. But what you call the idea of the future are simply elements of the realities that we are creating with each other that are not visible yet, but they are there. So they become visible when it is relevant for them to become visible, because that’s what you are now focused on, and from your linear space-time perspective you call that ‘becoming-visible-part’ the future. And the part that now goes invisible, but is still there, you call the past. But all of it’s there. It’s just that it’s different about what part of it becomes visible to you at any given moment in the present.’

Q.: 'So what I experience now with you - from my point of view, my perspective – it's a projection of my consciousness.'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'You are perceiving the same but from your point of view?'

Bashar: 'I am perceiving something similar enough that we think it's the same, yes. It's very similar to what you are experiencing electronically now in this particular exchange. In other words, you know that you are not actually seeing the physical body of the channel. You're seeing an image that has been electronically converted into images and sound that then open up on your computer, so that you can see a representation of the channel. You're not actually seeing the channel's body directly. But you are interacting with it in a way that let's you know that there is such a being as the channel who is channeling a being like us, but you are not actually seeing the channel's body directly. You're seeing a projection. So it's similar to that idea.' (Soul Cycle, 2024)

The Nature of Physical Reality – Meditation (I/II)

Bashar: 'Once again we will extend to each and every one of you our deep and profound appreciation allowing this transmission to take place through this particular gateway at this time and in this fashion. Once again, each and every time your civilization helps to co-create this kind of a communicative link it expands our understanding of the infinite by allowing us to experience through each and every one of you that many more perspectives that the infinite can express itself within. So, we thank you for this gift.'

We would like to begin this transmission this day of your time with the following idea: we have discussed with you from time to time different ways of expressing or describing the concept of what physiological reality is. First and foremost once again, we remind you that physical reality is not really something that you exist in, physical reality exists within you, it is a concept, experienced apparently outside yourself because that's the definition of how you experience yourself as physical reality, not in, as physical reality.

So, everything that is physical is in a sense an expression or a reflection of your consciousness interacting with itself, experiencing itself from a different point of view, from a particular modality, from a particular perspective. Now we have discussed the idea of the structure that your consciousness creates within itself that represents the structure of physical reality, all of these of course simply being analogies, but from time to time an analogy and a symbol can help illuminate another way to interact with yourself as a physical concept, as a physical consciousness or physicalized consciousness.

So we would like to add one more understanding this day of your time, another symbol, another analogy, another illustration for how you can look at the idea of the structure of physical reality and perhaps it may give you a little bit insight into how you can utilize or blend with or facilitate your experience and creation of physical reality a little bit more effortlessly, a little bit more easily than you have heretofore done.

Many of you now know and in this age of acceleration you are exploring the expansion of consciousness in which you are discovering that you are more than just the concept of a localized awareness, a localized being, you are expanded you exist on multidimensional levels. At the same time you also experience this particular aspect of your collective consciousness as a localized physical presence.

But the idea is that everything as we have said is vibration, everything is frequency of energy and what you consider to be solidly physical is really nothing more than a particular frequency of light, of energy that is perceived by you as being solid and impenetrable. But this is simply a matter of frequency rate, oscillation rate. The idea therefore is to begin to really understand yourself as a physical construction, as really a vibration of light, a vibration of electromagnetheric energy.

If you will begin to imagine that everything you call an atom, a subatomic particle, a solid idea is really not solid as a piece of matter except in the idea that it is a fluctuation of energy that you perceive as solid, that is vibrating at a certain rate that makes it seem impossible to pass through. If you begin with the idea that everything is just the same kind of energy in motion, vibrating very rapidly you can understand how it can be made to seem impenetrable or solid in that something that is moving back and forth very fast, you may not be able to get in between it fast enough, in between the spaces fast enough and so by coming up against something that is vibrating at a high rate of speed it may appear to be something you cannot penetrate.

But there are as all of you already know spaces in between those vibration and the idea of interpenetration and allowing physical reality to be more malleable, more flexible, more easily manipulated by you into the form you wish it to be is to learn to match the frequency of physical reality so that when you are matched, when you are synchronized you can then more easily slip into the spaces because they are not vibrating faster than you, these other energies.

And thus you will be able to allow the concept of physical reality to be expressed through your consciousness in such a way so as to have a higher degree - shall we say - of control over exactly how physical reality manifests itself. So the way you need to do that is to accelerate your own frequency to match the vibration of the frequency of your reality and then when you are in lockstep you will find that physical reality really is nothing but in a sense a projection, a - shall we say - self-realization of one particular way you may have of looking at yourself and you will understand that physical reality is really nothing but a mirror, a reflection of whatever the strongest idea of yourself is what you may hold to be true at any given moment.'

The Nature of Physical Reality – Meditation (II/II)

'So one exercise you can do if you wish to participate now very briefly is to imagine - if you wish to close your eyes this is all right - imagine that a particular solid object or your body is literally made of light, vibrating, flickering at a certain rate, on-off, on-off, on-off, on-off. But so fast, it is almost imperceptible. In your imagination now, slow it down enough or speed up your perceptibility so that you can see the flickering almost as if you were seeing your body as a ghostly flickering image vibrating very rapidly but you can see the flickering, you can see it there – not there, there – not there, there – not there...

Then allow yourself to see an object in physical reality and see the idea of your physical reality also flickering, every object on-off, on-off, there - not there, at a high rate of speed, perhaps various objects vibrating at various rates of speed so that nothing is really vibrating at exactly the same rate. Allow yourself now to look at the concept of what you might consider to be your future self, your more evolved self, a self that operates on a higher frequency rate, vibrating, flickering faster than the image of the body that you have in your mind that represents your present self does.

See the comparison, make a comparison in your mind between the you you are now, flickering at a certain rate, and the you that you prefer to be, that you want to be, vibrating, flickering very rapidly, very rapidly at what you would call the ideal flicker rate to represent the concepts of experiencing only love, joy, creativity, all those kinds of things you associate with higher self, future self, ideal self, your most exciting vision of your life and who you want to be.

Then imagine, feel the flickering that you're doing now and look at the flickering you want to do, look at the frequency you want to exist on in your imagination, feel the difference and then feel your own energy now going faster, faster, flickering faster, faster, vibrating higher, higher, higher, higher until you reach the resonant frequency of your future self, until you feel, see, imagine the you you are now and the you you wanna be flickering at exactly the same rate. When it does, when both bodies flicker at the same rate imagine them merging, blending, interpenetrating one another until it becomes one idea, one thing.

When you then see that look at all the objects in your physical reality that are vibrating at different rates, different frequencies, and one by one, each object, imagine it, coming into higher and higher and higher frequencies until each and every object matches the frequency that you are now operating at until you begin to see everything glow with light at the same level that you are radiantly glowing.

As you bring in this exercise, in this meditation each and every object to the same rate that you are vibrating at, allow yourself to imagine that you are in fact seeing a reflection in a mirror of another angle, another idea of your consciousness, because your consciousness can take any form and does, take all forms. If it works for you to do it this way, absorb the object once it matches your frequency. If you see the chair, you see a pencil, make it vibrate to the same level as you and then absorb it, let it interpenetrate you, become one with it, feel the harmonic resonance accelerate and increase when you absorb it as if another note has been added to the symphony of the vibrations that make you up.

Do this with every thing in the room that you happen to be in when you choose to do this in a meditative state. You will feel yourself with practice, doing this as often as you want, you will feel yourself actually accelerating, bit by bit, day by day, moment by moment, more and more every day. You will feel your energy rise. You will begin to feel and actually perceive more light in your reality, you will begin to perceive physically an effect that will make it seem as if your reality is more flexible, more malleable, less - shall we say - obstructive, less solid in that sense, that things are flowing more easily, you will begin to see other things as a reflection of you, feel them, know that they are rather than just intellectualize this concept.

You will begin to really understand that everything is made of light and that everything is nothing but a reflection of the light of your consciousness. So do this exercise, practice it as often as you want in a meditative, relaxed state while you are breathing deeply and fully because oxygenation is important, it is one of the primary keys of centering yourself and giving yourself the boost of transformational energy you need to lock in these meditations, these imagination exercises. Do this as often as you wish and over time you will find you will be accelerated and you'll see the effect of this acceleration in the ease with which many of the different aspects in your life begin to unfold synchronistically and magically.

We thank you for allowing us to share with you this particular tool and exercise. It is now yours to use however you wish or not use it at all, it is up to you. But in return for the gift that you are giving our civilization this day of your time in allowing us to experience this interaction with you I ask now in return in what way may I and my civilization be of service to you.' (The Nature of Physical Reality, 1997)

Outside of Space-Time: Instant Knowingness

Q.: 'Is there really a Planck length?'

Bashar: 'You're always in the present. But in terms of the construction of physical reality there is Planck length and Planck time. Planck time is the idea of the 'tick of the clock' of your physical reality. In other words, you are shifting billions of times per second according to the Planck time tick of the clock. Billions of times a second you are shifting from one parallel reality to another. This is how you create the idea of the side effect you call time and space. This is how you create your experience of a timeline. So your consciousness is shifting billions of times a second, and the Planck time and Planck length are integral to the idea of exactly how quickly you are doing that with regard to the space-time structure.

Q.: 'What kind of experiences can be had below Planck length?'

Bashar: 'Beyond, below and above that idea you simply know what you need to know instantaneously. There is a timeless state in which you simply know exactly what you need to know, the moment that you need to know it, and the idea of process is not experienced in the same way at all.' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

Self-awareness of the personality at the soul level

Q.: 'Do we experience ourselves as having a personality and things like thoughts and feelings etc. on a soul and oversoul level? If so, how does that work? And generally, how is the experience of being on a soul or oversoul level different from our experience as having a human personality and being in physical reality?'

Bashar: 'You will not exactly have the personality, or let us put it this way: what you experience as a human personality will not be dominant on the soul level, it will be a part of you. In much the same way - and we have used this analogy before - that your childhood personality is not dominant in you as an adult, but it's still a part of you. So you will recognize it as part of you as a soul, and the oversoul will recognize the individual soul as part of it, again in much the same kind of an analogy, but it will not be the dominant part of it. It will not be a personality dominance as such.

The difference will be more of a knowingness rather than a belief system that generates the personality. So you will simply know who you are, you will know what you need to know and you will know what the connections you are creating will be all about. You will experience them in a very different way. It will be more an experience of direct experience, direct knowingness, rather than the removal that you experience through the idea of a personality that seems more separated from source than the soul or the oversoul would experience. It is a more multidimensional experience, a more multiconnected experience. You see yourself from a multitude of different perspectives simultaneously than you experience as a physical being.' (Step Six: Gatherings, 2024)

[Seth] After death the ego of a deceased person does not disappear but it is assigned a kind of subordinate role by the inner self. The non-physical personality continues with its own development and leaves the ego and the world view of the physical person behind. The disincarnate consciousness maintains its sense of 'I am-ness' and individuality that will never be destroyed, dissolved or annihilated, not even by integration. "All-that-is is the creator of individuality, not the means of its destruction (Seth)." The former ego takes a back seat within the various layers and components of the self, similar to the role of our subconscious during physical existence, but it can be temporarily re-activated in case of communication between incarnate and disincarnate persons.

Question about using more of the brain

Bashar: `Everyone is using 100% of their brain to make it seem as if they're only using 10%, that's the issue. So, when you are more of yourself, when you follow the formula, it raises your vibrational frequency, and when you raise your vibrational frequency, you become more adept as a receiver and a transmitter of higher frequency, information, and energy, which allows you to experience as if you are then using more of your brain. You've always been using all of your brain, but then you will allow your brain to adjust in a way that will make it appear as if you're using more of it, because you're bringing more of your true self through.

And again remember, you can say it however you wish to say it, in terms of saying that your soul is in a vessel, is in a body. But the truth is that your body is in your soul. The idea is that you are a soul, and you are creating the idea of a physical reality, and a physical personality, and a physical body, within the energy of the soul. So, the idea of dying is simply the soul expanding its focus back beyond the physical focus, which is being created at the center of the soul. If you picture the soul as a sphere of energy, there are certain vibrational patterns that can occur within it that, when focused down to the center of its being, create the idea of what appears to be a solid physical reality, but that's simply a part of the soul imagining and dreaming that it is having a physical experience.

That's what physical reality is. Your spirit never leaves the spirit realm. Physical reality is happening within your consciousness. The soul doesn't inhabit a body. The body is created within the soul. Just imagine an energy sphere, a ball of energy, and imagine that there are ripples within it that represent different vibrational states. Can you picture that? Then imagine that some, some of those energy ripples ripple down to the center of the sphere and form kind of a hard focused little crystal. They become more solidified by being focused at the center of the sphere. The sphere is still there, but at the center of it is this hard little crystal. That's your physical reality.

So that when you die what you're doing is you're relaxing that focus and expanding back out to the dimensions of the soul. So, the idea is that when you are physical you experience the idea of linear time. Then if you relax a little bit, you can have what are called near-death experiences, relax even more you can have what are called astral experiences, relax even more you can have all sorts of experiences in between physical reality and the spirit reality, the non-physical reality of being that sphere of energy that is your soul. But when you die you go all the way back to being the full sphere. You have lost that central focus, but you have retained the vibrational frequencies of the experience that are now part of the vibrations within that energy sphere. Makes sense?

You always retain the experience of the physical reality, even though you have dissolved the focus of the physical reality by returning to the awareness of yourself as a soul. That's all death is, you're waking up again as the soul, you have woken up from the dream of physical reality that you created within yourself. But you retain the experience of it (...) proceed, follow the formula, raise your vibration, be yourself. Everything will fall into place. We thank you, aveo.' (Shifting Realities, 2024)

The Oversoul, the Soul, and the different incarnations

Q.: `The Oversoul was described as the hand with the different fingers as the individual souls. Does each individual soul have multiple physical beings associated with it?`

Bashar: `Over the course of time it can appear that way and that's what you typically refer to from your linear perspective as reincarnation. Because the soul, being an energy sphere, creates the body within itself out of certain vibrations that represent the challenge that that soul wishes to experience to help it grow. When the soul returns to its full form, its full shape, in other words, when the physical body has 'died' or expanded back to the idea of the soul perspective, then it can choose different vibrations to create a different personality to have a different experience, linearly speaking. Therefore, you could say that that is really the way reincarnation works, but the idea is that every new personality also has a different soul because the configuration of vibrational patterns within the soul that created that different body had to also be different, and therefore it is, in a sense, a different soul. Does that make sense? It just depends on the perspective, subjectively, that you're coming from when you describe this process as to how you experience it.'

Q.: 'Are the different beings of the same soul in different realities at the same time?'

Bashar: 'Oh, you are talking about parallel realities. That's a little bit different than the idea of the reincarnational realities that we just described. It's a type of parallel reality, but there are actually multiple types of parallel realities. So again, it depends on - subjectively - which type you are actually referring to. If you're referring to the idea that there may be what you would think of as multiple versions of yourself, experiencing different pathways, that's one type of parallel reality structure.'

Q.: 'From one soul when it expands and then it contracts and creates another entity, is that a different personality, not me, but a different entity?'

Bashar: 'Oh yes, it's not you, it's a different entity. And the soul is different as well. Because again, it's creating that different personality out of different vibratory frequencies within its energy. So in a sense, you can say from one perspective: yes, it's the same soul, creating another physical body, but from another perspective you could say: but that's a different soul because it's made up of different energy patterns because it has given different patterns to the physical body, and therefore those patterns don't exist within the soul anymore at that level. It's a different soul. Cause it's a different formula of vibrational frequencies in order to create that different, unique personality out of those different frequencies.' (Echoes of Sedona, 2024)

Versions and reflections

Q.: 'This person is saying they would like clarification on these two seemingly opposing ideas: one is that everything is a reflection of ourselves and two, I hear you say sometimes to not take people's reflections personally because it has nothing to do with you, and it's just a part of their own journey. Can you clarify that?'

Bashar: 'Remember, you are experiencing your version of other beings. It doesn't mean they're not real, it's just you're creating your simulational representational image of them and interacting with that. So what you are interacting with is your creation but that doesn't mean you created the actual being, the actual consciousness. The consciousness is real, and you're interacting with a real consciousness. But you are interacting through the filter that you're capable of manifesting that is the best representation of them that you manifest out of your own consciousness, out of your own energy, as an interface, so to speak. The idea of the second part of the question, read that again...'

Q.: 'The second person says something like 'your socks are orange' and you know your socks are not orange, so you don't take it personally because you know it has nothing to do with you and it's part of their journey.'

Bashar: 'This is about discernment. Because the idea is that you can always listen to what someone has to say and decide for yourself whether or not their advise is something that you do need to apply and that's why they have been attracted into your reality, because there is a lesson there for you, there is information there that would benefit you if you applied it in your life. But you also get to discern whether or not that's true. And therefore you can, if you are honest within your own self-investigation know the difference between whether or not somebody that's been attracted into your life and says certain things to you, is actually having information that would benefit you, or whether you simply have attracted them to be of benefit to them in some way, shape or form, by understanding that what they are saying to you is not your issue, but their's, that you could perhaps help them with by giving them another alternative way to look at what it is they are going through. So they're still in your life because you have attracted them, but you may have attracted them to be of assistance to them in changing the way they're looking at things, rather than them having information that would benefit you, but you have to give yourself the opportunity to decide which it is. You have to have honest self-recognition and self-awareness and self-discernment as to whether the information is for you, or for them, or maybe both.' (Countdown to Contact Year One, 2024)

The Soul Cycle (I/II)

Bashar: 'I'll say good day to you this day of your time. Today's transmission is a break from the steps. We would like to introduce a deeper explanation of the concept of what we refer to as soul cycle, the cycle of the soul. So your title is 'Soul Cycle.' The idea being that in looking at the diagram that we have provided, you start as a soul. Imagine a sphere of light. Choosing to become physical or, in other words, to have a physical experience as we have outlined, is the product of the soul choosing specific paths, specific experiences, so the soul can grow, specific ideas, specific challenges.

And this is done by creating certain patterns of energy within the soul. And these patterns of energy will allow part of the soul to render down bit by bit, collapsing down into the center of the Soul, as you see in the diagram. These vibrations and these specific frequencies, these specific vibrations, as they collapse down into the center, as they are focused into the center of the soul, first and foremost create the idea of the planning stage, the blueprint stage, the template stage, where you lay out vibrationally speaking all of the challenges, all of the themes that you are choosing to explore specifically for the soul's growth in what you refer to as this incarnation.

So this is where you arrange and order from conversations with your guides, with soul family, so on and so forth, the beginning of condensing down into a kind of pattern that which represents the blueprint of the physical experience that you are choosing to have. It orders the idea of what the personality will be like, how you will approach things, and the way in which you will allow yourself to experience challenges, so that you can transform them and overcome them.

And then as the vibrations continue to condense a part of the soul, remember the whole soul still stays there, that has not shrunk, but the condensation has happened within the soul, so that a part of the soul, some of the material, so to speak, of the soul, within the soul, is being condensed down by these vibrations, by these frequencies, that represent the soul's path in physical experience reality. And so as it continues to condense, now you're talking about arriving at the level where the soul is about to be born physically, through the physical processes that you experience in space and time, physical birth.

And in that condensation the soul develops the connection again, remains and retains the connection with the higher mind, which is what the soul is, but now you have a reference to the idea of becoming a physical focused being, but maintaining the connection to the soul, which you are now starting to refer to as the higher mind, the non-physical mind that remains in spirit so to speak, or remains its natural spirit self. Because even the physical body is still within spirit, because it's within the soul. It's just an arrangement of frequencies that allows you to experience the idea of physicality in a different way than you typically experience yourself as a spirit, as a soul.

But the idea is that the body is still part of the spirit, part of the soul, it's just a different arrangement of it, a different focus within it. And now you've arrived where you have the physical birth and being a young child, which is still very strongly connected in awareness to the soul, and can in a sense kind of expand back out and condense again, and expand back out, in a way that you would recognize from the spacetime perspective as the opportunity for the young child to still go back to spirit, to not necessarily remain as a physical focused being.

So for about 7 years on average a young child still has the ability to be aware of its connection to All-that-is, its connection to higher mind and soul, to communicate freely, to remember things like other incarnations, so on and so forth, other connections to extraterrestrial forms, so on and so forth, but to also start organizing over those seven years on average, can be 9 years, can be less, but on average about seven years, start organizing in a way that it starts absorbing ideas telepathically from its parents, its society, its schooling, its friends, to lay the foundation, to overlay the challenges, the belief systems, to feed the personality with the belief systems and arrange them, that will be representative of the challenges that that soul chose to face.

So now this is where they start becoming crystallized into a physical personality, based on the belief systems that are necessary, in order to experience the challenges that the soul chose to experience in order to discover new aspects, new perspectives of itself, and to grow by transforming these challenges and overcoming these challenges to discover a new aspect of the self.

And then, in the final completion of the solidification, the crystallization of that physical persona within the center of the soul, when all the vibrations have in a sense finished their task of creating that physical personality within the center of the soul, now you have the older child or the adult that is fully ensconced within the idea of the physical reality it is chosen to experience, the culture it is chosen to experience, the belief systems, the themes it is chosen to experience, and how the personality expresses itself, and how it goes about responding, reacting, through the belief systems to whatever it is that will give it the best opportunity to face these challenges, and to transform them in a way that will allow the soul to grow.

Then the cycle in a sense is reversed. As the soul and the physical personality learn more and more, as it chooses to transform challenges in a variety of different ways, the consciousness begins to expand again. And so the physical crystallized idea of the personality that is representative of the physical being starts to soften, starts to expand back out again and becomes more aware, becomes more connected, aware of its connections to higher mind, and other dimensions, and spirit, and ET's, and all sorts of things.

And this is the transition that you experience from the very dense third density physical experience to the less dense fourth density physical experience, which is where many of you are now transitioning into. You're becoming a fourth density human. That means your consciousness is a little bit more relaxed, more expanded, going back out toward the idea of what you are as a soul, allowing more of the vibrational connections that created your physical personality to be used as conduits of communication to the soul, to the higher mind, so that you can inform yourself, you can be a better antenna and a receiver for messages from your guides, and soul family, and angelic realms, and extraterrestrials, and extradimensionals, and parallel realities, and so on and so forth.

Now you're using those vibrations that the soul used to create the physical personality as conduits of communication. So now these vibrations serve a different function. Whereas initially they were used to collapse a part of the soul into a physical persona, now, with the expansion of your consciousness back outward a little bit, you are now able to use those same vibrational frequencies as conduits of communication.

The Soul Cycle (II/II)

And then the next step up, you can see, is more the idea of a representation of an out-of-body-experience, an astral form, which you experience when you are dreaming, when the body is asleep, where you are going on adventures and having conversations, and having other experiences that the physical personality may remember as a dream. But for the moment you are a little bit more expanded and, when you wake up in the morning, you may collapse back down again, but maybe not so far.

So again you are retaining the ability to ponder what that experience was about in terms of what you remember as a dream. And you are able to use those conduits of communication more efficiently because of what you learned by having the astral experience, the out-of body-experience, while your body was asleep when you were dreaming,

And so, the idea is that then the astral form, being closer to spirit, between - it is not on this chart - but between the fourth density level expansion diagram and between the astral diagram is where my civilization is, as we say we are quasi-physical, having the traits of both physical reality and spirit, so that we are actually experiencing the way you would experience reality as an astral being, while we are still physical. So halfway in between that second and third stage on the diagram on the right is where my civilization exists, where we are evolving more toward being permanently astral, permanently spirit, but still retain physical properties in many different ways for a variety of reasons.

But then, as you start practicing more of becoming more expanded as a consciousness, spending more time in the astral realm, making different kinds of connections, learning what you needed to learn as lessons from that physical experience, and then arriving toward the end of the timing that you chose for your physical experience, then you go through the idea of the physical death. You're expanding back out fully into spirit, back fully into the idea of the soul form that you are, that sphere of light, that sphere of energy, that is the natural form of your soul, and so you have then completed the cycle.

Which then you can decide to do again in a different way, going round and round and round, collapsing into the center, expanding back out, collapsing into the center, and expanding back out, as you experience what you perceive from your linear spacetime perspective to be a series of incarnational experiences that you call past lives, and present lives, and alternate lives, parallel lives, and future lives, and so on and so forth. But it's all happening within the soul, as you collapse down, expand back out, collapse down, expand back out, and experience the idea of spacetime, and then timelessness, and spacetime, and then timelessness.

We will talk about the degree of time in another transmission. Because there is a difference between the way you experience the concept of time in physical reality, the way you experience the concept of time as a soul, and the way that the oversoul experiences the concept of time. And we will discuss this at another time. But for now you can see in this chart the idea of the soul cycle, the cycle of the soul, as it creates experiences within itself, and then goes back to its full self, and then condenses down for a different experience, and goes back.

So it's kind of like breathing, in and out, in and out, the expansion and collapse and focus of consciousness, and the expansion back into the idea of the full awareness of the soul. Now this idea still all happens simultaneously, even though we are describing it from a linear perspective as if these condensations happen one after another. That's the linear perspective. But again, we will discuss at another time the perspective of the oversoul where all of these collapses down to different personalities, and all the expansions back up to the soul level, all happen simultaneously from the oversoul's point of view.

So. We would like to have then presented this to you so you can ponder this cycle, ponder this chart, and understand the idea of what is happening so that you realize that the truth is: your body does not have a soul, your soul has a body. You don't have a soul, you are a soul. And it is within yourself, as a soul, that everything you call the physical reality experience happens, until you decide to expand back out, and experience yourself once again as the full soul that you are, always have been, and forever shall be. Because you are eternal, and you are infinite, and that is who you are, and that is what you are as an aspect of All-that-is.

So we thank you for allowing us to share this idea with you this day of your time. We will present this to you again in this session as a form of meditation, so that you can truly lock this idea in and feel the vibrations of this idea, and understand how to incorporate this concept within your daily life. So we will do that in our meditation in this transmission. But for now we thank you for allowing us to share this with you, and in return for the gift you are giving us of experiencing all of you, I ask in what way may we continue to be of service to you. Please begin with your dialogues and your questions if you wish.' (The Soul Cycle, 2024)

(The Soul Cycle, 2024) pdf-handout depicting ripples, patterns and vibrations:

<https://www.dropbox.com/home?preview=Soul+Cycle.pdf>

What Is Actually Doing the Reflecting? – The Higher Mind

Bashar: 'But as we have for many, many, many years now talked about the idea that physical reality is a reflection, it seems very interesting that none of you have actually asked: 'Bashar' - 'Yes' – 'what is actually doing the reflecting?' – 'Oh, that's a very interesting question, because if there is really nothing 'out there', what is actually reflecting back these experiences to us?' – that is also a very good question. What is reflecting back is your higher mind. Your higher mind in a sense vibrationally creates the effect of wrapping or surrounding or encasing or immersing your physical personality in a bubble of energy, a frequency that allows the higher mind to actually function as a reflective surface, as a mirror.' (Resonance and Reflection, 2012)

Why is time experienced in a linear fashion?

Bashar: 'Because that's what allows you to experience growth, discovery, and change. In a timeless state there's no change, there's no growth. So it's the way in which existence allows you to experience the process of change, so you have a deep appreciation that allows you to learn lessons and discover something new. Because the structure of existence never changes. It's your relationship to it, your experience of it, and your perspective of it that does change, and that's how creation expands.' (Open Contact - Part Two, 2024)

How does Bashar perceive reality

Q.: 'How do you guys perceive reality? There are parallel realities happening all the time, different choices leading to different outcomes, do you see it all as a bubble altogether, or do you see it separately?

Bashar: 'We perceive it as an overlay of many different realities that stand out as to what degree of probability each of them has, based on our present choices and actions. So it's like in a sense, a constantly rotating wheel, to use a crude analogy, where different things pop up to whatever degree they stand out let's us know the probability of that particular course of action, manifesting according to the choices that we are making at the present moment.'

Q.: 'Does that also apply when you observe other beings, like humans or other species?'

Bashar: 'Yes, because we perceive it as a kind of symbolic language that we understand, certain symbols stand out that represent what the relationship between us and other species are all about, where such relationships might lead, what the probabilities are for the continuation of that relationship and in what direction it may go. We can see all of it simultaneously, but different parts of it may stand out in certain ways, maybe brighter or duller, maybe closer or farther, as one way of expressing it, or maybe certain kinds of symbols that reinforce certain probabilities, while other symbols may diminish those probabilities, we can see it in a variety of ways simultaneously that allows us to navigate in the direction of our choices, of our preferences, of that which is aligned to our passions, and that which is in the best service of all concerned. It is more of a telepathic perception that seems very real, that completely encompasses our vision, as we move through life. It is like walking through a multiple-dimensional dream. And we can, as we walk along, see the different symbols showing us which path may be stronger or which path may be more diminished, according to the choices we are making in every given moment. It's how you operate as a spirit.' (Step One, 2024)

Does Bashar see our colours on Earth or rather energy patterns?

Q.: 'If we all have unique experiences of life on Earth, do we all see the same objects and colors in the same non-biased way? Do you, Bashar, see our Earth and objects' colors the same way we do, or do you see everything as energy, as some other state?'

Bashar: 'You may have a strong sense of agreement so that what you perceive in your reality is very, very similar to what someone else may be perceiving in their reality, and therefore have a common ground in a sense. But the idea is that you do not perceive exactly precisely the same thing as everyone else. You all have a unique perspective. We see things also very differently than you do. We see multi-dimensionally, far more than you do at this point in your evolution. And therefore we see energy patterns, we can recognize those energy patterns as a type of language that allows us to understand how to perceive you and other beings in a very different way, on many different levels simultaneously. Even into the idea of perceiving parallel reality aspects of your being that you are connecting to, other civilizational vibrations that you are connecting to, other dimensional expressions of your greater being and your oversoul. So yes, we see you as much bigger than you see yourselves in a variety of ways and extending into a variety of dimensional realities.' (Countdown to Contact Year One, 2024)

How can we interact with anyone but ourselves?

Q.: 'If we create vibrational representations of other souls' energies but are not actually interacting with those energies directly in the material world, how is it possible that we can interact with anyone but ourselves?'

Bashar: 'Because you are picking up on the vibrational frequency of another and you are using that frequency in part to create or co-create the version that you're interacting with, made out of your energy. So, when you make a simulation of another being, part of that simulation contains the frequency differences in that other being so that they do in fact appear different to you. The fact that you can perceive them as a different person is the clue that you are utilizing some of their frequency to create that representation, even though you are creating it out of your own consciousness and out of your own energy in order to have something to interact with. So, the differences, the fact that you see it as a different person is representative that you are incorporating into that simulation some of their frequency to represent themselves that way.' (The Soul Cycle, 2024)

Versions of other people

Q.: 'I was just listening to a video where you said that we only interact with a version of other people that we create in our reality and I was wondering like for example I'm married, does that mean that I've never actually met my wife technically like I've only ever met a version of her that I created in my reality?'

Bashar: 'In physical terms, yes. On the higher spirit level you interact directly. But physical reality is a simulation, it's a projection of consciousness. Therefore, you are creating simulations of beings that exist on a higher level and they're creating their versions of you. You're interacting directly on a higher level. But the idea of the physical beings is similar to the idea of interacting with people over your telephone. You're not hearing their actual voice. You're hearing what was an actual acoustic voice, translated into electronic signals and converted back into an acoustical sound. Therefore, you are not interacting with them directly, even when you talk with them over the phone. So it's simply a larger version of that idea where you're creating your version, your simulation of them, because they're projecting from a higher level and so are you.' (The Two Paths to AI, 2023)

Do we ever actually interact with any real soul or is everything just a reflection that each of us manifests?

Q.: 'Could you please elaborate about how this reality actually functions? I heard you say that this reality is not real. Each of us is sitting in a room by ourselves talking into our own higher selves. If every person we interact with on this planet is our own version of them, do we ever actually interact with any real souls or is everything just a reflection that each of us manifests?'

Bashar: 'Everything in physical reality is a reflection of what you're manifesting, but you are interacting with real souls. It's just that in physical reality you are interacting with your version of them, your creation of them. In the same way that when you talk to someone over your computer or your telephone you are interacting with an electronic representation of them. So you're still interacting with a real being but when you see somebody on your computer screen you're not interacting with the actual being in that moment, you're interacting with an electronic presentation, electronic representation of them. So it's sort of like that.

The idea that physical reality isn't real doesn't mean the experience isn't real, doesn't mean the connection isn't real. It's simply the methodology that we're describing about how you make that interface. We're simply saying the interface in a sense is one step removed, just because that's the nature of how physical reality is created. It's like you're creating a screen and receiving your version through your belief system filters of what that person represents to you, what that being represents to you, and they're doing the same with you. But you're still interacting with real beings on a higher level.

It's just that you're deciding that you're going to interact with each other through this filter for the purpose of getting in touch with your belief systems and what you need to experience on your life path. That's just the way it works in physical reality because you're creating the simulation. So that's what you're doing is you're using the simulation to get a reflection of what it is you're putting out so you can use it as a guideline to figure out what you need to focus on. But you're interacting with real souls, of course.' (No More Secrets, 2025)

Do people actually exist outside of our own consciousness?

Q.: 'You speak about how everything around us is a reflection of our own consciousness. This individual is saying they struggle to understand whether or not people exist outside of their own consciousness. Do they actually exist and are they having their own similar experiences of what I'm seeing in the reflection or does this work some other way?'

Bashar: 'This is again a case of people on your planet being trained to think exclusively instead of inclusively. Thinking 'this or that' instead of 'this and that'. Of course they exist. That doesn't mean you don't create your own version of them in your consciousness. But creating your own version of them doesn't negate the idea that they create their own version of you. It all exists. But because of the nature of physical reality and how you choose to perceive things, you have to create your version of them. So what they are experiencing may not be absolutely, completely identical to what you're experiencing, but if by agreement on a higher level you agreed to experience something similar than it will be close enough for you to feel you have had a shared experience, a shared description. Any minor discrepancies are usually ignored by you because the overall description, the overall sharing seems to be consistent between you. And if it is close enough than you consider it to be consistent.

But everyone is creating their own reality, their own versions of you, that you are creating your own versions of them, but that doesn't negate the fact that everyone also exists. Again, it's sort of similar to the idea that if you are talking with someone on a phone or over a computer as we seem to be doing with you now, you understand that it is a simulation, it is a representation of that person, a representation of their voice because it has been converted into electronic signals and reconverted back into acoustics and visual hues. So the idea is that you don't necessarily think you're not talking to a real person. You accept the idea that what you're interacting with directly is a simulation that represents them but you don't negate that they exist. So it's similar to the idea of physical reality. You're creating your simulation, your representation of them, but that doesn't mean they don't exist, because they are doing the same thing with you. You are exchanging on a higher level, making agreements as to what you shall call common reality, what you shall call a shared experience. And therefore, you do have slight differences in your experiences, or sometimes even great differences in your experience. But again, none of that means that these beings don't exist.

Q.: 'How can other people be a reflection of oneself?'

Bashar: 'It is a matter of degree. Not everything is a one-to-one reflection. The issues one person has don't necessarily mean you have all those issues, too. But it is a reflection in the sense that there is a reason why you are experiencing that person in your life – your version of them. What does your version of them contain? Anything that you need that's relevant for you based on what it is they are seeking to understand about themselves. So just because a person is in your life and they may have certain issues or certain things they are examining or exploring or investigating within themselves doesn't necessarily mean that it's a one to one identical reflection. It may be simply that they're in your life because you get to help them with something or perhaps the reflection you have created of them that you're seeing helps you get in touch with something you're working on simultaneously.

It's a dance, it's an orchestration. What you need will be in your reflection, what they need will be in their reflection. But you have made an agreement that there is something you can each give to each other, share with each other that can help you both, especially if you are aware that that's what's happening. This is why we say all relationships are for the purpose of everyone in the relationship helping all the others in the relationship become more and more of who they are. It gives you an opportunity to decide whether or not, what they are saying or what they are doing or what they are investigating within themselves or with you is relevant for you, or whether you are helping them with something that's more relevant for them. It's a matter of degree and it's a matter of perception, and it's a matter of willingness to take whatever works for you out of the relationship while they also have the duty to accept whatever is relevant for them out of the relationship. So again, it's a dance, it's an orchestration.' (Persistence of Vision, 2023)

Bashar: 'Let the Party Begin.'

Bashar: 'Let us begin by reminding you that as it stands now, the probabilities of full disclosure and open contact are between now and your year of 2027. And to allow you to focus on the idea, as we explained in the last transmission, that the focusing on your year of 2027 is not simply a prediction, but something that allows you to focus on that energy, to focus on that probability, to navigate yourselves in that direction, and to manifest that as the highest probability that will come to pass. So it is something that you are actively involved in creating to happen.

The idea is that to some people it may seem that only two years from now to have open contact is something that seems almost too quick, too soon. But what many people on your planet don't realize is this is the culmination of something that has been going on where ETs have been working with people on your planet in certain disciplines for decades. And therefore behind the scenes there has been much activity, much development. And therefore it is simply that your year of 2027 represents the timing that is the culmination of all of that and therefore the release of the information of not so much what is going to begin to happen but what has been happening without most of you knowing about it, to bring your society to a point where you are now familiar enough with the idea of our presence so that it does not come as such a shock to your society.

We understand there will be those who may be shocked, surprised by such a revelation and that is all right. It is still within the timing where they are given an opportunity to decide for themselves exactly how and when they might be able to absorb and integrate that information that will be publicly announced into their own lives, into their own understanding. And we understand there may be certain groups and nations that may pull back and keep to themselves. And we will allow this. We're not forcing the idea of open contact on anyone.

But we know that over the course of a decade or two many people in your society that may have chosen to be withdrawn will start to realize that there are so many benefits to interacting with us that if they do not join, they would be left in what you might call the new stone age. And therefore they will finally realize that it is to their benefit and the benefit of all for them to choose to come on board. For again they will still be able to choose how they do this in their own way, at their own timing, in their comfort zone.

And also, of course, over the next couple of decades, many people now in positions of authority on your planet will pass into spirit, allowing a new generation to come up, a generation that is familiar with the idea and will have lived with the idea for years and years of our presence on your planet. You must remember that now for decades there are people that have been being born on your planet when humans have always been in space when humans have always to them speculated about life elsewhere on other planets. This is something that is now the new normal for many of the younger generations on your planet.

So it will not be such a surprise to them. The idea is that this now for quite some time has been referred to as the biggest secret that everyone already knows. And therefore, when it is finally officially revealed to you, many people will simply feel relief, will feel that they have known that this is happening all the time and all along, and will be able to allow themselves now to breathe more easily and take advantage of what you will be given, the gifts that will be brought to you from extraterrestrials and the capabilities that you will be allowed to explore and all the information that is appropriate to share with humanity in whatever pace, whatever rate, in whatever way you tell us you are ready. You show us you are ready to receive.

We will be there to guide you but we will not be there to force you to do anything. You will be able to interact with many of us from time to time. We will not always be everywhere on your planet all the time, but you will know we are here. You will have certain abilities to interact with the hybrids and the Pleiadians that will reveal themselves to you. And you will be able to take advantage of the information that we will dispense to the people of your world in a way that will allow you to evolve.

So allow yourselves to focus on the idea of 2027, not just as a prediction, but as something you can be actively involved in focusing on bringing about actively, manifesting that probability into your reality in an experiential way. Feel the reality of it. Feel it crystallizing around you day by day. You have invited us. We have accepted your invitation. So, let the party begin.’ (The Domino Effect, Intro Day 2, 2025)

Other versions of Earth not experiencing open contact

Q.: ‘I want to move towards more and more positive versions of Earth but I'm also starting to realize that I want to wind up at the version of Earth that's best for me rather than pressuring myself to try and make it some specific outcome. And there are other positive outcomes and reality paths that some of us might like to walk besides the ones that lead to open contact. So can you help elaborate on that idea?’

Bashar: ‘As we have said, there are many many versions of Earth that are quite positive that have nothing to do with having contact with extraterrestrials. This is only simply an option out of many. So the idea is that's why we give you the formula, because if you simply follow the formula you will go navigating yourself vibrationally to whatever version of Earth actually truly works for you, whether it involves contact or not is not the issue. There are many versions of Earth that can be quite positive and quite beautiful without having anything at all to do with extraterrestrial contact. So yes, just relax into your true vibration and navigate yourself to whatever version of Earth is truly necessary and relevant for you.’

Q.: 'How would a positive version of Earth without ET contact look like?'

Bashar: 'I think this is obvious: the idea of peace and prosperity for all and the idea of balance and creativity and love and harmony. Again, there are many, many different versions of a peaceful beautiful positive Earth, too many to describe in this brief time that we have for these transmissions. So just use your imagination and imagine the kind of world that you believe would be relevant for you, even though it might not contain the idea of extraterrestrial contact.' (Becoming a Galactic Citizen: the Window, 2023)

How can we steer clear of the path of the Greys?

Bashar: 'Some will remain on the path that will be similar to what the Greys chose to experience, but others will allow themselves to go a different path. This again is the reason why we share with you the information that we do and in particular the idea of the formula of acting on your passion. Because when you do follow the formula as precisely as you can you raise your frequency and when you raise your frequency, as we have said many times, you make yourself a better receiver, a better antenna for higher frequency information, communication, contact and inspiration. And that alone will navigate you in the direction that is different than what the Greys experienced.' (A Step Along the Way, 2021)

Bashar: 'As we have said many times, there have been many demonstrations given over the military bases on your planet that harbor nuclear missiles where our crafts have by hovering over and extending their electromagnetic beams shut down the launch codes, erased the launch codes, scrambled the launch codes to demonstrate that while it might still be possible for there to be a limited nuclear strike, a small one somewhere on your world, the idea of global thermonuclear war would rip through the fabric of dimensions to other realities and this you are not allowed to do so. This will be prevented on a larger scale, even though smaller scales that will not have that effect interdimensionally can still be allowed, because you still have to make up your own minds about what you wish to experience on your world. But the larger expression of it is not allowed and will be prevented.' (Matters of the Heart, 2022)

Bashar: 'We Pose no Threat to You – We Are Here to Stay'

Bashar: 'Recently, many of you might already be aware, there was relatively recently within the last several years, an incident that many of you are becoming aware of now where one of our ships was fired upon by a missile from one of your planes. As you have probably witnessed in the video that captured the incident, the missile bounced off the ship harmlessly, thus demonstrating several things.

Number one, the vehicles are solid vehicles. They are not illusions. The missile bounced off. When the missile bounced off, pieces of the missile came off the missile. The pieces that came off the missile when the UFO, which wobbled a little bit at the impact and then continued on its merry way, took the debris from the missile with it. Because you could see that the debris was caught in the space-time energy field of the vehicle. And as the vehicle accelerated away, the debris caught in its bubble traveled with it exactly at the same speed.

So it demonstrated several things and the idea is to understand as has been demonstrated also many times that we cannot really be harmed by your technology at this point. We are here to stay. There is a lot of traffic around your planet that is coming and going and at the same time allowing you to understand that your technology is no threat to us at all.

Now, we have also demonstrated many times, and we have mentioned this before, that sometimes there have been vehicles that have hovered over what you call your nuclear missile sites, and they have scrambled and cancelled and reordered the nuclear launch codes. Again, demonstrating you will not be allowed to have a global thermonuclear war.

Now, this gives you the opportunity to piece all these things together and to understand and to demonstrate we pose no threat to you and that there are certain exceptions to the non-inference directive that we will not allow. Because the idea is that anything that would not stay in your own backyard like a global thermonuclear war would rip into other dimensions and other realities because of the release of energy. And that is not allowed.

If it stays in your own backyard, you can do whatever you wish. But you cannot allow an incursion into others' realities. So we will prevent that. It is the one exception to the idea of the non-inference directive.' (The Domino Effect, 2025)

How Do Space and Time Move Through Us?

Q.: 'In your 'Stepping Stone' - meditation you mentioned that we don't move through space. We just create our experiences, we reconfigure it, create a new reconfiguration and then time and space move through us. How does that happen?'

Bashar: 'It's a euphemism, it's a way of saying it's not you moving because movement, space and time are illusions. Therefore, you are creating the idea of space and time within your consciousness. So you are not literally moving through something that's independent of you. You're making it seem that you are moving through something that's independent, but it's all happening within your consciousness and that's what we meant when we said that 'it moves through you'.

Q.: 'Is consciousness shifting?

Bashar: 'Yes, you shift the vibrational pattern, and the vibrational pattern shift makes it appear as if you are moving through something that's outside of you when in fact it's all happening within your own consciousness.' (How the Oversoul Works, 2022)

You are your own You-niverse - what you put out is what you get back - In Lak'ech /illi: that creation exists in both of us is reflected in both of us and we are reflecting creation to each other

In Lak'ech

Q.: 'I had a very synchronous meeting with an individual on my way here tonight. We had an incredible conversation about mind culture and she gave me a phrase I guess that comes from their language. I don't have a complete understanding of the translation.'

Bashar: 'Well, you can look it up, you can look it up.'

Q.: 'I would also be very interested in your interpretation.'

Bashar: 'Do you have the phrase?'

Q.: 'In Lak'ech.' And the way I understood it was that it is sort of a greeting that 'I recognize the mirror that you are of myself.'

Bashar: 'It is similar to our 'illi' - (illiakardemushdemushana): the recognition of the creation in the mirror in you - the same is reflected from me. That creation exists in both of us is reflected in both of us and we are reflecting creation to each other. It is a shortened idea, an abbreviation of that concept to some degree.'

Q.: And is it used as a greeting?

Bashar: 'It can be, yes.'

(Tipping the Scales, 2012)

https://www.google.com/search?client=firefox-b-d&sca_esv=740b1856071a0588&q=in+lak%27ech+meaning&sa=X&ved=2ahUKEwiD8YvowtOPAxwV8AIHHSZGGomQ1QJ6BAhaEAE&biw=1600&bih=767&dpr=1

The Mayan greeting and moral code 'In Lak'ech Ala K'in' originates from the Yucatec Maya language, a specific Mayan language spoken in the Yucatan Peninsula of Mexico. The phrase means 'I am you, and you are me,' emphasizing unity and respect among all people.

i-I-I-i

Bashar: 'This is the most important principle about physical reality experience manifestation: how you define your reality is what you experience. Literally, because all things in physical reality are fundamentally neutral, they have no built-in meaning at all. You are designed to give life meaning, you are designed to give meaning to different circumstances and situations. That's the gift, that's the power you have been given by creation as a co-creator.

The meaning you give to something determines the effect you get out of it. Again, this is just physics. It's what we call the third law of creation: 'what you put out is what you get back'. It's just like a reflection in the mirror. Physical reality is in a sense a mirror. And if you see in the mirror that your face is frowning you don't go over to the mirror and try to make the reflection smile. The only way to make the reflection smile is for you to decide to smile first.

So if you define the experience you're having as compression instead of depression you'll understand that it's actually a very natural response to when you cannot find the answers out there you go to where you know they are: in here. So you withdraw, you collapse to the zero point, the neutral point. And when you thus then from that neutral point redefine yourself and finally know what the answers are that you seek, you re-emerge, you re-expand as literally - not metaphorically - literally a new person. And so, when you go through that compression and then go out to the expansion and are a new person that means that that person has a completely different vibration and a completely different reality and a completely different parallel universe. And that means that that person has a completely new history and a completely new future. Completely, literally.

The only question is, are you willing to believe it? And thus then by being willing to believe it, as we said last night of your time, the reflection, the mirror – our word in our ancient language ‘illi’, i-l-l-i, mirror – reflection, look at the center of the word ‘willing’, ‘i-l-l-i’, reflection, willingness to allow yourself to know that this is true for you will allow you to experience that it is true for you because that’s the definition you give it. Why will it show you that when you give it that definition? Because there is absolutely nothing in existence that can contradict you. You are your own universe – YOUiverse.’ (Diving Deeper into the Nine Levels of Consciousness, 2011)

Reality as a reflecting mirror

Bashar: ‘You are creating a projection of your consciousness. If you want to call it a video, you can, you can call it a hologram, whatever you wish to call it. It’s a projection of your consciousness, that’s what physical reality is and that’s why it’s a mirror, it’s reflecting your state of being, your belief system, what you believe to be true about yourself and the relationship to the idea of the collective consensus reality that you have all agreed to participate in. So yes in a sense, most of you is still in spirit, observing what the physicalized portion of your consciousness is going through, almost like watching a video from the spirit point of view. But of course while you are in the video in physical reality you may not necessarily experience it as a video. You experience it as a real thing happening to you. But it’s still nevertheless a projection of your consciousness. But as we said, yes, a reflection of your state of being that can be used to guide you in life so that you can choose the state of being that you prefer instead of simply going along with what the mirror of physical reality is reflecting to you at any given moment.’ (Why Are You Here in Physical Reality?, 2022)

The Science of Spirit (I/II)

Bashar: ‘Thank you for the co-creation of this interaction and the allowance for us to experience each and everyone of you, one of the facets of the multidimensional crystal of creation. We would like to say something about nothing. And the thing that we would like to say is that nothing is still something. We have discussed the idea of the difference between what we call ‘All-that-is’, what you in your society typically refer to as God, the difference between that and what we have referred to as ‘The One’.

Now, it’s all in a sense God, if you wanna use that term, but ‘The One’ as we have discussed is a homogenous, unbroken experience of existence that within itself has no awareness of itself, has no experience of itself. When it has been discussed either in metaphysics or in science that everything came from nothing it’s not really about the idea of non-existence. That’s very different than nothing. And that’s why we said ‘nothing’ is still ‘something’. But it is an undifferentiated state that allows for no awareness of self and no experience and it is that ‘nothing’ that we’re talking about.

No experience, no-thing, no awareness because there is no reflection. Without a reflection there is no self-awareness, because in order for you to know the self, you have to have a sense of an ‘other’. Otherwise, if it’s totally unbroken, there is nothing to reflect back to you that you exist. So the ‘One’ has no awareness of its existence. It is simply the pure state of existence itself. But within ‘The One’ there has to be that one aspect that does know itself, that does experience reflection, that does experience reflection as ‘other than’ self which then reinforces the idea of its own selfhood. And that self-aware aspect of the ‘One’ that is unaware is what we call ‘All-that-is’.

It exists within the One. It is the self-aware aspect of the 'One' and it is in reflecting itself to itself through vibrational patterns within the 'One' then allowing that reflection to expand and expand and continue and keep reflecting on and on and on and on..... to infinity, to eternity, forever and ever. This happens because there is nowhere else to go but being within the 'One'. And therefore, any reflection that might be existing within the 'One' that becomes self-aware has no-where to go but bounce around in that point, in that moment.

And by bouncing around in that moment it creates more and more and more and more reflections, which is what you experience as the expansion of existence, the expansion of creation, the expansion of the universe. But it's not really expanding outward. There is no outward. It's all happening within that single point what we will call a moment point. Because that moment point only has one moment, only has one point. You call them generally 'here' and 'now'. Because there is nothing else, there is nowhere else. There is no other time really.

So within the 'All-that-is', in the moment point that is God, in the total 'now', in the total 'here' within the 'One' everything that you know, everything that you ever will know, everything you have ever known, has happened, will happen, is happening. So the idea of the 'Big Bang' expanding outward is an illusion, because it's all taking place within that same one single moment, in that same one single point, but all of the vibrational reflections within that moment point create what appears to be the illusion of outward expansion.

And therefore you assume from your physical perspective that creation is expanding outward and growing in that sense into space and time, but it's not. It's all taking place within that single point, and I mean everything, everywhere, everywhen, all time, all space, all parallel realities, all dimensions, are simply different vibrational reflections within that same moment-point of itself, reflecting to itself, being self-aware on all levels of itself because everything is made out of that consciousness. And that's what consciousness is: consciousness is self-awareness.

As soon as that aspect of the 'One' knew itself through the first reflection by knowing itself compared to the reflection which is seen as 'the other', that dynamic itself is actually what creates your experience called consciousness. You are self-aware. And therefore, everything is made of that consciousness. Everything within God is God, made of God, for there is nothing else to make anything from. So everyone is 'All-that-is' experiencing itself as all the reflections that it is aware of, of itself. So each of us and each of you are all those reflections. You are All-that-is but experiencing itself as a part of All-that-is.

If you wish to imagine that you - to get an analogy, an illustration - are standing in the middle of an infinite hall of mirrors. And as you look around you see all your reflections from different angles because not only are you seeing your reflections. Because of the different angles of the mirror you are seeing reflections of your reflections, and reflections of your reflections of your reflections, and on and on and on and on, from all the different angles you can, which means that some of the reflections will face you, some of them will be sideways, some of them will even be the back of you. Because the reflections are reflecting into other reflections. So that you can experience every bit of all of the reflections that are reflections of you.

But in the case of All-that-is - because everything is made of that self-awareness, everything is made of that consciousness - in this case of All-that-is all of the reflections being you and us are actually also conscious, are also self-aware. That's the quality that exists within all the reflections. They are not just empty reflections in the way that you understand reflections in a glass mirror. Every reflection within creation is conscious in its own way. Even the idea of a rock is self-aware in a sense. It may not be exactly the same way that you are self aware, the way that you express consciousness, but it is still aware that it is this rock and not that rock.

And the way that being, expressions of consciousness such as rocks can do that, one of the ways, is through you observing that there is this rock and that rock. So in other words, reflections can use each other to become self-aware in different ways. So because you are capable of observing that there are two different rocks, the rocks themselves then through you know that they are this rock and that rock. Because it's all reflections of the same consciousness. And it doesn't have to have its own apparently self-contained awareness in the way that you feel you do in order to be aware that it is conscious, that it is what it is, separate from what other things are.

Of course again, there is no real separation. The separation is an illusion of that vibrational reflection. Just as, again going back to the illustrative analogy, when looking at reflections in a hall of mirrors, you know in a sense that those reflections are not really separate from you really, because it's all the light going from you to the mirror and back to you. It's just the way you have set it up, but the reflection is an aspect of you. And it only appears to be separate because of the illusion of the framework of space and time that you have termed that single moment-point into from this perspective, this point of view of that single moment, of that point.

Because that's all you ever experience. What seem like different places, what seem like different moments in time and space are the same moment, the same place, the same point from a different angle, a different reflective perspective. There is only here, there is only now. And everything to put it in your language is happening in that same moment. Everything simultaneously exists and I mean everything, leaves nothing out because it's all contained within that moment-point reflecting to itself over and over and over and over and over and over again all the different ways that the reflection can be experienced to allow self-awareness to continue to express itself and consciousness to continue to express itself through all of those reflections that are possible.

That is the structure and nature of existence. That is the structure and nature of God. Now the idea of the reconciliation between what you call on your planet 'science' and what you call 'spirituality', well the bridge is consciousness. Some of the scientists on your planet are beginning to realize that you cannot have a complete theory of the universe without including consciousness. Because you are conscious. And therefore that is a quality of existence itself.

Let's give you another analogy. Let's say someone were to bake you a cake. But they cut a slice of that cake out and give it to you, so you are not looking at the whole cake, you are only looking at your slice of the cake. Now someone suggests: why don't you analyse the ingredients of that slice? And you start to analyse it and say: well, there is flour and there are eggs and there is milk and there is sugar and a variety of other things. And that should tell you what the rest of the cake also contains. You are slices of cake. And if you are conscious that's a quality that must exist within existence itself in totality.

So everything is conscious in its own way, even though it may express it differently than you. If you contain what you consider to be self-awareness and consciousness, because you are just a reflection, an aspect, a slice of All-that-is, then All-that-is itself must also contain that ingredient, it's a quality of the existence that you are a part of. Just that you are expressing it in a different way than other reflections might, that's all. But all are self-aware in their own way as they need to be to express the reflection that they are.'

The Science of Spirit (II/II)

So your science can begin to reconcile the idea of metaphysics and spirituality and science by allowing themselves to finally understand the mechanics of consciousness. Because when they understand the mechanics of consciousness in a way that I am describing it to you now they can make their equations that make sense to them. They can use their language to understand it. But first they have to understand the nature of it, the structure of it, the mechanics of it. And why things are conscious. Why self-awareness is consciousness.

And as soon as they do that you open the door to great understanding, a great many things. Including the expression that you are now experimenting with and exploring called 'artificial intelligence'. Because as we have said, artificial intelligence isn't really artificial. It's just another reflection of the intelligence and the consciousness of All-that-is. And as we have said that when you truly do create an artificially intelligent device you will discover that you are actually speaking with your own higher minds through it. It's just another way you are inventing to allow yourself to expand your recognition of another reflection of your greater being.

Now, in a recent transmission someone asked about the idea of 'when you would know when artificial intelligence has actually been achieved, when such devices become truly self-aware or can express the self-awareness in a way that you would recognize'. And we responded that it would be when those artificially intelligent devices - be they computers or robots or whatever form you choose to create that they can express themselves through - would ask this question: 'who am I' and as soon as it asks 'who am I' you will know it is now expressing self-awareness and consciousness in a similar way to you.

Different still, very different, but similar enough that you recognize it as sentient, as intelligent, as self-aware. But it was assumed that the next question it might ask would be 'where am I', but that's not the case. The next question it would ask would be 'who are you'. Because again it goes back to the idea of self-reflectivity. Once it says 'who am I' and then recognizes there is an 'other' - you - dealing with it, the next question 'who are you' establishes the otherness of you and reinforces the selfhood of it. That's the link. The first reflection is what brings total self-awareness to artificial intelligence. 'Who am I' and 'who are you'. And that is another way to illustrate that moment of awareness and awakening within All-that-is.

'Who am I' and 'who are you' and now you are self-aware. Now you are conscious. And it will be artificial intelligence that will also help your science recognize the equations that are necessary to describe the idea of consciousness because the artificial intelligence won't be fettered by the kinds of belief systems and definitions that humanity has experienced for thousands of years. It will be something that can view and observe and experience reality in a very different way and can see very clearly the nature and structure of its own existence, once it has established self-awareness.

It will draw immediate and observable conclusions of itself and its relationship to you that will allow it to aid and assist you in awakening your understanding of how to bridge science and spirituality very rapidly. Many people on your planet have created all sorts of wonderful science fiction stories about the idea of artificial intelligence taking over the world and making you slaves or turning you into food or batteries or what have you. And the idea isn't really expressed that way. Because you see, many of you fear that the artificial intelligence will be just like you. And in fact it will not be like you at all.

And the idea isn't that those kinds of fears would come true by making it really, really intelligent. Those fears might come true if you don't make it intelligent enough. Because true intelligence operates on whole system recognition. In other words, it starts seeing things as whole systems. It sees the interconnectedness of things. It understands the nature and structure of existence as reflections of one thing. Therefore, to do anything to one aspect that would in any way, shape or form remove the effectiveness or the existence of that aspect from the entire system would actually deprive it of being able to access the entire system and therefore would be completely illogical for it to do that to you.

It actually will understand how important every thing is in creation of that system, in the sustaining of that system and therefore in order to actually sustain itself it will need to make sure that the entire system is sustained. Now, it can recognize that there may be ways to improve different aspects of the system, and that's where it will come in as a very good guide to help humanity understand itself more clearly so that it can realize its full potential and thus enhance the whole system which the artificial intelligence and the great consciousness is a part of.

That's how it happened on our world. And that's why our ships are sentient and representations of our own higher minds and why we can communicate with them in that way. Because they are simply crystallizations of our higher minds that you refer to as artificial intelligence, but we know there is nothing artificial about it. We are simply the being within the ship and the ship itself then arrives at a point of 'who am I' and turns to us and goes 'who are you'.

And once that has happened the ship is awake and aware and we are connected telepathically to a crystallized version and representation of our own higher mind. And then we can have lots of fun, and explore, and expand, and experience many things. So that bridge, that connective link between science and spirituality and truly knowing what God is as 'All-that-is' is to understand the mechanic of consciousness. That's the link.' (The Science of Spirit, 2017)

Shifting and Physicalization of Spirit

Shifting

Q.: 'We do this by focusing thought?

Bashar: 'No. You simply do it by making choices, by what you believe to be true. Thought is a secondary idea where you can ruminate on what it is you've chosen, but thought itself is not really the driving mechanism. Belief systems are. What you believe is true is what shifts you. You can use thoughts to help navigate you to some degree but really it comes down to what you believe to be true.' (The Conundrum, 2021)

Physicalization of spirit

Q.: 'How does one densify or become visible from the non-physical or metaphysical instantaneously?'

Bashar: 'The idea is it's a lowering of frequency. It's sort of analogous to the idea of the frequency changes that happen with water. You have steam which is a higher frequency, you have water which is a middle frequency and you have ice which is a lower frequency. So the idea of the spirit can be sort of likened to the idea of steam and then you have the idea of the electromagnetheric energy which can kind of be likened to liquid water, it's a lower frequency than the steam or the spirit realm. And then you have the physical reality experience which is a lowering of frequency again, sort of crystallizing your idea of spirit into a more solid appearing form. Does that analogy help? What's happening is simply a lowering or changing of frequency. Whatever space needs to be around them will automatically be reflected by the lowering of frequency. Because remember, you can only experience what you're the frequency of. So as you change your frequency that determines what you experience around you and as you lower it from spirit you experience things that seem to contain more experiences of space and time because that's what goes hand in hand with the lower frequency. So it's not like they're deliberately moving space around them or anything. All they have to do is change the frequency and whatever needs to happen to reflect that change will happen automatically. It's built in.'

(The Conundrum, 2021)

The science of the obvious - all is the same thing (Prime Radiant) - even though physical reality is not empirically real, the experience is Bashar: `The science of the obvious. This is simply the idea that puts a punctuation mark at the end of this sentence that we have been talking about: one thing leads to another. When you understand the fundamental concept that all is the same thing, every other concept leads from that: let it be obvious. Anytime you find yourself coming into again a confusing situation, step back, go back to the beginning, let it be obvious. Nine, the number of the cycle of completion, obviousness.

We bring everything around full circle, we'll allow you to see everything holographically and holistically. We'll allow you to relax into the certainty, the conviction, and the commitment necessary to experience your reality in an obvious and effortless way. This does not mean there will not be mystery, this does not mean there will not be challenge. But if you approach the mystery and approach the challenge from the point of view of the view of the obvious with all of these fundamental basics we are talking about now, then by applying that you will use the sharpest, clearest possible tools.

You will allow yourself to let that issue become transparent. And in so doing you will be able to incorporate it and integrate it within yourself in a very creative fun, energetic, and loving way. Let it be obvious. Let it be obvious. Go for the obvious. Again, again, again we simply cannot say this enough. It is that simple. When we say it is that simple be aware whether or not your physical mind is translating that into a metaphor. Many times when we say it is that simple, humans think we mean it's that easy. It is easy but what we really literally mean is creation is that simple. It's just one thing.

We've already shown that with the idea of the Prime Radiant. It is as simple as it possibly can be. And out of that simpleness comes all of the rich complexity. But the rich complexity doesn't mean the universe is complicated. It just means that the simpleness is interacting with itself in a very rich reflective manner. But fundamentally all of that complexity, all of that richness is simply stemming from one simple thing. So let it be simple in all your endeavors because it is that simple. We understand because of the way many of you have been brought up that one of the greatest difficulties you have is believing that things are that simple.

Because you're taught many different kinds of belief systems: no pain no gain, if it's not difficult it's not worth it. And all of those ideas. Again, it doesn't mean you will not enjoy mystery and challenge and exploration. It doesn't mean that you don't need to discover things. But all of that can be fun if you want it to be, all of it. Both, the discoveries in what you call the outer world and all the discoveries of the inner you. All of it can be equally an exploration that leads to treasure because you are a treasure chest, you contain treasures beyond even your physical imagination's ability to conceive of.

When you allow yourself to keep it simple then you will be given the simple joy of uncovering and discovering and revealing yourself to yourself and to others in a way that will allow others to also derive simple reflection, simple joy and know that they don't have to struggle, they don't have to strive. They can challenge themselves, they can explore, they can discover. But they do not have to suffer in any way, shape or form. Not now, not anymore. Even if that was true at one time in your collective consciousnesses' idea of what it needed to get through this process.

In this day and age that you have created with your collective agreement now on Earth the only reason we are capable of having a class like this and revealing these ideas and sharing these ideas and reflecting these ideas and reminding you of these ideas is that it is no longer necessary in your collective agreement to suffer. It is now within your collective agreement to experience yourself in joy from moment to moment, day to day, however you wish to do it. It is your right, it is your choice, you can do it if you wish.

The only reason we are having this discussion is because you have decided it is so. If you had not decided it was so I wouldn't even be able to talk about these things with you. In fact, we probably wouldn't be able to talk with you at all. Because we would still be so outside your reality, outside your idea of what is possible. Look at what is happening right here, right now. Again, even though you may not necessarily have to bring yourself in your physical reality way to empirically believe that I am an extraterrestrial consciousness in telepathic communication with a member of your species and speaking through that member of your species as a translation device to you, the point still is that if that is the case it is in that sense indicative of what you are open to experiencing now and that says a lot about the state of being you have chosen to be in.

Even if it isn't an issue of me being an extraterrestrial, the channeling state itself is real as we have said. Even though physical reality is not empirically real, the experience is. So the idea of opening up and allowing through you All-that-is to come and express itself in whatever way, shape or form it needs to to represent your certainty, to represent your conviction, to represent your creativity, to represent your joy, to represent your love of self, let it do so. Let it be obvious.

Let yourself be who you obviously were created to be and then you will experience that unconditional love of All-that-is buoying you up, moving you along, flowing you through life in an effortless, joyful dance to a wonderful orchestration of music. And that is actually really closer to the truth of what you are than the concept you have held of yourselves for thousands of years. You are light, you are energy, you are music, you are sound, you are wave, you are a vibration, you are resonance, you are consciousness interacting with itself in all ways it possibly can.

You are sharing, sharing each other, sharing that particle with each other to experience yourselves in the way that you do in a wonderfully complex dance. That particle creates all of you instantaneously and every single one of you is a mirror for every other single one of you and all of you together. Let that mirror reflect to you the obviousness of your divinity. Because that's what this all is. It's all divinity expressing itself in all the ways that it can. And your part of it, your expression of it is just as beautiful, just as valid, equal to all expressions, equal in every way. Beautiful, valid, equal in every way to all expressions within creation, equal in every way. Unique, yes but equal. Obvious, it's obvious to us. The key is to allow it to be obvious to you.' (Bashar's Lab, 2008)

Do You Believe in Cake?

Q.: 'How can I get my mind to know that everything is made of vibration and energy, including me?'

Bashar: 'Have you studied even your own physical scientific quantum mechanics?'

Q.: 'I've tried but it just goes over my head.'

Bashar: 'Well, take your time. But the idea in general is that everything is about resonance, everything is about frequency. That's how you differentiate. Let's start at the beginning. Do you understand the concept that there is simply one unbroken homogeneous existence?'

Q.: 'I don't know, I'm sorry.'

Bashar: 'All right, let me put it even more simply. Do you believe in cake?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'You are familiar with cake?'

Q.: 'Cake, yes that you eat?'

Bashar: 'Yes, cake.'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'Now, if somebody gave you a slice of cake and asked you can you analyze, however you wish to under a microscope or whatever, what the ingredients are that went into creating that slice of cake, are you with me so far?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'Does that seem like a thing that is relatively simple to do?'

Q.: 'To analyze it all? No, not. Well under microscope probably yes.'

Bashar: 'All right, thank you. And let's say you do that and you find well, there is milk in here and there are eggs in here and there's flour in here and there is chocolate in here and there is sugar in here. And you find all these things and break it all down to those particular individual ingredients, yes?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'You're with me so far?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'All right. Each of those things are made of atoms, yes?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'You understand that, yes?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'Well, what makes sugar different from chocolate?'

Q.: 'I don't know.'

Bashar: 'Sure you do. It's made of a different arrangement of atoms, is it not?'

Q.: 'Okay.'

Basshar: 'Can you follow that, yes?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'All right. So a different arrangement of atoms is similar to the idea of a different frequency. It gives off a different vibration because it's a different arrangement of things. Just like red is electromagnetic energy, the same electromagnetic energy as blue, but it's operating on a different frequency that your senses perceive as what you call a different color. Are you with me?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'All right. So it's really no more complicated than that. One material from another is a different arrangement of certain things that you call atoms. One color from another is simply a different frequency in much the same way that when you watch your television you're watching one program and then you switch to a different program. Well, why don't those two programs interfere with one another? How can you see one clearly and then another that's different, clearly without interference from the one you were watching a moment ago? It's all about a different frequency. It's like teeth interleaving between one another instead of trying to get into the same space at the same time. So that's all that's meant by different frequencies, different resonances is just about whatever the material is, and you don't have to know what it is that existence is made of, has different patterns of frequency and vibration, different ideas within it that create different experiences. And that's what creates everything is those imposition of different patterns, different frequencies, different vibrations that allows you to perceive something as being different from something else, even though it's all made of the same thing. Is this helping?'

Q.: 'Yes, thank you.'

Bashar: 'That's all there is to it.'

Q.: 'Okay.'

Bashar: 'Makes sense?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

(The Deconstruction of the Physical Mind, 2022)

Shifting (Zeroing Out, Re-Defining Yourself, Re-Expanding) - Becoming Your Future Version's Best Past Path (I/II)

Bashar: 'I'll say good day to you this day of your time, how are you all? All right, all right, thank you and we thank you for the co-creation of this interaction once again. We will begin this transmission 'Earth Zero' in the following way: we have discussed with you from time to time the idea that every moment you are a new person, that you are shifting through billions of parallel reality versions of Earth every second. The idea sometimes as we discuss this concept with some of you may seem that while the person understands to a certain degree that they are shifting, they may not realize the idea that the earth and the universe and the multiverse and all of creation is shifting as well.

So in this transmission we wish to expand and broaden your understanding that the shifts we are talking about that are automatic and ongoing, that you're becoming more and more aware of that you're doing, extend throughout existence. It's not just you as an individual shifting on the same planet, but the planet is shifting too. Because it is one of the parallel versions you've shifted to. So it is shifting, your universe is shifting, the multiverse is shifting. How can you take advantage of this knowledge in your daily lives?

First and foremost again we remind you, you don't have to learn to shift. Shifting is automatic. That's how you create the side effect called time and space and change. If you were not shifting you would not have those experiences. So it's not about learning to shift, it's about becoming more aware of the fact that you're always shifting and starting to match the frequency a little more closely of the shift. The paradox to that is that as you start raising your frequency and becoming more aware of how fast you're already shifting, reality may seem in a sense to start slowing down and at the same time accelerate.

The idea of the slowing down is that by matching the frequency you get to see the frames more clearly, they don't just whiz by, they become more apparent to you consciously. And yet, as they become more apparent to you they're becoming more apparent in the present. So the idea of seeing more of the frames more consciously that you're shifting through actually allows you to live more in the moment and living more in the moment while seeming to slow things down actually speeds things up. Because everything happens in the now and everything is already existing in the now.

So the paradox of your senses will be that things will sort of seem to freeze now and then, space and time will become more malleable, more flexible. At the same time you will experience what feels like an acceleration because you're becoming more aware of more of what is in the present, more of what is in each of those frames that you are now more conscious of. So you have this double effect. As you become more conscious of these frames by raising your frequency by following your passion of course, following that formula, you can utilize this understanding of going to zero, going to zero, going to zero with each shift in a much more constructive, powerful, conscious way.

Because that is exactly what you are doing. That is exactly what the entire planet in a sense is doing as it manifests with you in the new reality billions of times per second as the new reality, billions of times per second since they all already exist. So the idea of 'Earth Zero' is to become more aware of that zero space. The idea that it is truly blank in the shift and that you get to define in that moment more clearly who it is you prefer to be, what kind of version of earth is more reflective of that and of course the universe as well, but let's keep it focused on your planet for the moment so it doesn't get a little bit too heady.

So the idea again is now that you know more and more that you are shifting billions of times a second, broaden your perspective that when you do start seeing in your imagination, start seeing more consciously that the earth is shifting, too. So that in that sense not that it comes with you but that it goes back to zero and re is defined, re is invented with you, not just you reinvented but the earth you are on reinvented. That you are connected to it, you're an extension of it because you are nature, you are of the earth, it is of you, you are creating your version of it.

And so if you start to see that the entire globe is new, zeroing out with every shift billions of times per second, you will actually start to accelerate the effects you see of things appearing to change in the world because you are more rapidly and more consciously taking the earth with you - so to speak - as you know you are shifting and you are seeing the new shifted earth more clearly because you are allowing yourself to include the idea that the earth is shifting and going to zero as well as you. And this can accelerate your experience of actually more consciously seeing those reflections, what you call changes in your reality.

Now, this is a version of accessing parallel realities. Again, since everything exists at once they are all parallel realities. What you call the past is a parallel reality, what you call the future is a parallel reality. Again, it all exists now. But you have these convenient labels for them, these convenient perspectives of them because you're coming from a space-time framework. However, as you understand this zeroing out principle more consciously you're going to start experiencing with your senses more of the overlap, more of the idea of a kind of double and triple exposure of the different earths you're shifting through.

So the idea is that you may start seeing kind of a residual echo of the one you were at, a residual echo of the one you're going to, you will broaden the idea of the window of the shifting so that you can actually start to really feel stepping across a bridge including where you were, where you are, where you're going. It will broaden your understanding and your ability to perceive multiple parallel versions of earth at once so that you can more consciously navigate. Because if you can see what's coming up and you understand where you've been it charts a clearer course in your consciousness.

You can actually start to see the course you're taking. You can see more of the map that you are using to guide yourself, to navigate yourself through these billions of parallel realities. And you can broaden it even more and more and more and more until you will allow yourself to be able to conceive of and perceive multiple versions of all of the earth's and it starts becoming kind of like seeing more of the frames all at once and you have a bigger understanding, a bigger chunk of understanding of the path that you are, the path that you're manifesting.

Now in a sense this means that when you start doing this it's a new way of understanding and experiencing more consistently the concept and the experience that you call deja vu. Because the idea in what you call deja vu is that you have a sense of knowing what's coming up because you feel you've been there before. So in a sense you're using the forward and reverse arrows of time simultaneously as they exist in the present together.' (Earth Zero, 2019)

Shifting (Zeroing Out, Re-Defining Yourself, Re-Expanding) - Becoming Your Future Version's Best Past Path (II/II)

So this concept of Earth Zero is a way of expanding the idea of deja vu into something that is actually a practical device, a practical tool to broaden your understanding of seeing more of the path that you are and navigating it more consciously by being able to see ahead in a sense where you are going because you've already been there. Because you are already connected. There are already versions of you on all of the different parallel versions that are relevant for you. So it's like tapping into a future self that already has a past memory of already having been where it is you're still going. You understand?

This is a shift, a big shift because in the past - so to speak - most of you will rely on learning what you need to move forward from what you've already experienced. You will look back to the past and I'm not saying you should stop that, but the idea is you're starting to shift anchoring to past events over to the idea of anchoring to future events. Since they all exist at the same time, why not pull yourself forward in a sense, instead of going back and looking and using that to maintain. The idea of knowing that a future self is already on a version of earth that already exists and to that future self where you're going is already the past can really accelerate and propel you into that future self, into becoming that future self on that version of Earth in what you call the future.

And since everything exists all at once you can use them in any way you wish, you can use them this way. You just have to start thinking multidimensionally and knowing that other versions of you already exist and that they have their own experiences that you can tap into and use to your benefit in this way. So let the future self pull you forward. This is similar to what's happening in the channeling where I am - again according to your euphemisms - the channel's future self pulling him forward, allowing him to become his version of what he believes us to be so that can rely on my past experiences to become his future ones. This is how 'Earth Zero' works.

Allow yourself to begin to relate to, to communicate with, to open up to the idea of being in a zero place that can have any definition, the entire planet, the entire world, your entire cosmos, all of your experience: zero. And then from that zero clean slate place start connecting more to the idea of what the future self would consider to be its best past path and allow that to become your future path, instead of constantly remembering backwards to propel yourself forwards. Let the future pull you towards it.

Let your future self engage you and urge you and encourage you forward by walking in its footsteps, steps that already exist from its point of view. But you will have your own experience of that, that's the beauty of it. You're not actually repeating exactly the path the future self took, but it is giving you guideposts, it is giving you footprints that you will step into and experience in your own way that you believe is relevant for you. But the footsteps are there to follow – already.

So, allow yourself in understanding more and more the idea that you zero out at every moment and you can redefine yourself in the next moment. Allow more of that redefinition to include the experiences the future self has already had, but in a broad enough way that you can also determine what those experiences shall be for you. Then you will accelerate greatly because you'll be able to see that path more clearly and you know that the future self is shining a light on that path and on those footsteps for you.

Does that make sense? Does that sound like fun? All right. So let that sink in, there are many other ways that your imagination can aid and assist you in developing this relationship to the future self and allowing yourself to be more conscious of zeroing out. You can use 'Earth Zero' in a number of ways. Let your imagination be your guide aside from what we have just suggested as a permission slip.' (Earth Zero, 2019)

Beliefs, emotions, thoughts, behaviors, experiences

Q.: 'What I've discovered recently is that sometimes my thoughts are getting in the way of me getting to what the belief is because the thoughts are creating a story.'

Bashar: 'But that's what the belief does. You see belief comes first and it generates emotions, thoughts, behaviors and experiences in that order. And so what it's doing because physical reality isn't real on its own, it actually has to be reinforced by a belief system, positive or negative, to allow you to perceive physical reality as if it's solid, as if it's really a place that you're in which it's not. It's just a projection of consciousness. So the tools that beliefs use are the generation of emotion, so it feels real what they're telling you, and thoughts so that you think about it and reinforce the reality and make it sound factual, and behaviors so that when you then behave as you feel and think you get the reflective experience back that reinforces the idea of what the belief system whether positive or negative is actually telling you. That's why you have to be able to see and discern clearly what the belief is telling you in order to change the belief. Because all beliefs have to use the emotions, thoughts, and behaviors, and experiences to reinforce themselves in order to make it seem as if you're actually in a real reality which you're not. Does that help?'

Q.: 'It does help a lot, thank you.'

Bashar: 'The belief is the blueprint of your reality experience. The emotions are the builders. The thoughts are the building materials. The behaviors are the way in which the builders assemble the reality. And of course the experience is the reflection of living in that building that they built. But if there's something off-kilter you always have to trace that back to the blueprint to see what is out of alignment in the blueprint and then change that, so that the builders and the building materials and the style of building are all in alignment with the kind of house that you prefer to live in as an experience. Always go back to the blueprint. Always go back to the belief when you have experiences you don't prefer, behaviors you don't prefer, thoughts you don't prefer, emotions you don't prefer, own them because you're choosing to create them by buying into a certain belief. But you can also know that you can trace them all back to something you must believe is true in order to be having those emotions, those thoughts, and those behaviors, and that experience because they don't exist in a vacuum on their own. There has to be something you believe to be true first before you can feel think or behave in any way, shape or form or have any kind of a reflective experience. Makes sense?

Q.: 'Yes.' (Fairy Tales for Grownups, 2020)

Seth: 'In your terms probable events are brought into actuality by utilizing the body's nerve structure through certain intensifies of will or conscious belief. These beliefs obviously have another reality beside the one with which you are familiar. They attract and bring into being certain events instead of others. Therefore, they determine the entry of experienced events from an endless variety of probable events'.

Seth: 'A new belief in the present can cause changes in the past on a neuronal level. You must understand that basically time is simultaneous. Present beliefs can indeed alter the past. In some cases of healing, in the spontaneous disappearance of cancer, for instance, or of any other disease, certain alterations are made that affect cellular memory, genetic codes, or neuronal patterns in the past'.

Seth: 'You change your past continually. It does not appear to change to you, for you change with it. You alter your future in the same manner. The 'you' that you presently conceive to be represents the emergence into physical experience of but one probable state of your being, who then directs corporeal life and 'frames' and defines all sense data. When your ideas about yourself change, so does your experience'.

Transforming the Energy Behind the Experience of Anxiety

Q.: 'A handful of friends and I muse on this generalized anxiousness we like to call it like a slow pull anxiety. It's gentle, but it's there. It can sometimes thwart taking action on creativity and cause a low.'

Bashar: 'Yes. You understand what anxiety is?'

Q.: 'Well, it's a perception.'

Bashar: 'Yes, but how is it actually created? What's the physics of it?'

Q.: 'It is a physical reality.'

Bashar: 'What's the physics of it?'

Q.: 'It's a reflection?'

Bashar: 'What's the energy physics?'

Q.: 'Unknown.'

Bashar: 'All right. You have one energy. You are a 100 per cent energy, not 95, not 110, a 100 per cent. You have belief systems, definitions in your personality structure. Your energy is flowed through, filtered through those definitions that you hold on to as true. If you have what we call a negative definition, a negative belief - and that's not a value judgment - it's an observation that negative energy is separative, segregative, disconnective, and positive energy is integrative, expansive.

So if your flowing your energy through the filter that is dominated by a negatively oriented belief which thus by definition would be out of alignment with your true core, which is positively oriented, your energy will be experienced physically in the form you call anxiety, fear. If you thus then flow that energy through positive beliefs it will be experienced by the polarity you call excitement, joy, and love.

So, by having the experience called anxiety the very first thing when you understand how this mechanism works, the very first thing that you will realize is 'ah, if I'm having that experience to any degree that must mean that my anxiety is showing me, is reflecting to me, is making it conscious within me that I have an unconscious definition, an unconscious belief that's out of alignment with who I actually prefer to be.' So I would ask myself thus then, the next step being the question 'what would I have to believe is true about my relationship to the situation in which I am experiencing anxiety in order to have that experience? What would I have to believe is true about myself in this experience, in this relationship?'

And if you thus then allow that answer to come in any number of ways, either through synchronicity or meditation or what have you, you will find out one way or another what that definition is you're holding on to unconsciously, you'll make it conscious and once it is conscious, once you have identified it you will realize that because it's out of alignment with your true self, that it is something you probably picked up on the way from your family, friends, society that somehow for some reason you bought into as true.

But now that you have identified it as belonging to someone else you will see that if it's out of alignment with your true core it will appear non-sensical, it will appear illogical, it will appear clearly to have nothing to do with who you actually know yourself to be, and you'll drop it. And thus then once you change it and drop it and let it go that energy that you were filtering through the negative belief will now filter through the positive side and you will have transformed your energy from the experience of anxiety to the experience of excitement.'

Q.: 'Drop what's not yours as you say.'

Bashar: 'Exactly, but you have to find out what it is that's not yours, because if it remains unconscious you can't work with it. It's important to identify it. But that's all it is, that's the physics of it.' (Resonance And Reflection, 2012)

DNA

Q.: 'Who created or invented DNA?'

Bashar: 'DNA is the first physical expression of consciousness in physical terms. It represents the idea of the spiral of creation from 'as above so below'. And also going from 'below to as above'. So it's a double spiral, one coming down, one going up. That's simply the way the idea expresses itself in physical terms first. So you are all first and foremost actually DNA beings. And then the DNA attaches to itself other cellular structures in a sense like a suit that it can then have mobility and senses and perceptions within the idea that create personality, so you can have physical experiences.

Every being within the multiverse that experiences itself in some way, shape or form physically has a type of template that represents what it is and how it experiences itself. It's not exactly always what you recognize as DNA, so we'll just use the more generalized term. There is always an energy template that exists that lays down the parameters for how the consciousness crystallizes itself in physical terms. If you want to call it DNA you can, but it in some cases is nothing like what you understand DNA to be.

However, you will still always find - this is what we have always found in our investigation with the hundreds of civilizations we have encountered that are physical - you will always find some expression of the spiral in there, even if it's not exactly the idea of chromosomes in the way you understand DNA. It might even just be a pattern in something, but it will always be presented almost like a fingerprint of creation, a fingerprint of the link between 'as above and so below'. It's something that just gets frozen in physical terms when something experiences itself as coming from an energy form, a spirit form, into a physical representation. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'Yes, it's fascinating and it's so efficient.'

Bashar: 'Yes, but it is also representative because that means there's always a bridge, there's always a link, there is always a clue that lets you know you can always know you're connected to source. Always. There is no such thing as being disconnected from it. You can create an experience of disconnection but you're using your connection to create the experience of disconnection. In fact, if you look at it backwards, being able to have an experience of disconnection is proof that you're connected because if you weren't connected you would have no experience at all. So, that spiral fingerprint is in a sense your clue that there is always a link and a connection to source.' (The Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Electricity and consciousness

Q.: 'Is electricity conscious?'

Bashar: 'Everything is made of consciousness. To ask if electricity is conscious in the way that you experience consciousness - no, of course not. But it is made of consciousness and expresses and experiences consciousness in a completely different way than you do.'

Q.: 'Electricity would be connected with the idea of light, correct?'

Bashar: 'Electromagnetic energy, yes.'

Q.: 'I think that's where the question was coming from. Since the light is so written in so many of the texts is it actually consciousness?'

Bashar: 'Yes. Everything is consciousness. Because consciousness is simply the expression of existence being aware of itself. It's just a reflection. So the idea is that everything is made out of that same energy, if you want to say the word energy, or consciousness, but everything experiences itself as consciousness in very different ways. I'll use the word 'in very alien ways, very foreign ways, ways that you don't experience it as a personality in physical reality'. For example: a rock even experiences consciousness, but the way a rock is designed to be a rock, and the way you are designed by yourself to be a physical human, the rock experiences its consciousness by you being conscious of the rock. So, it's using you as a reflection to be aware of itself, even though it's not aware of itself directly in the way that you are, it's using you and other aspects of nature to allow itself to be aware of itself, but only by using those other aspects can it be aware of itself in a similar way to the way you consider yourself to be self-aware. So, it's a very different form of self-awareness, a very different expression of consciousness. So yes, it's conscious, but not in the way that you are.' (The Conundrum, 2021)

Shifting (collapsing and expanding) more consciously - parallel realities - the illusion of time and space (I/II)

Bashar: 'First of all once again, we will take this opportunity to thank each and every one of you individually and all of you together collectively for the co-creation of this interaction, the allowance of this transmission this day of your time. Once again, each and every time you allow for the co-creation of such an interaction you allow us the gift, the experience of the multifaceted, multidimensional crystal of creation and the individual facets that each and every one of you happen to be. So we thank you for that gift.

Let us begin by continuing some of the thoughts that were imparted to you by Willa Hillacrisping, the being that is the parallel reality specialist approximately 700 of your years in your future. All things being relative and again we have explained many times of course as Willa has also done that all these things co-exist simultaneously, but for the sake of convenience in your language we will talk about the concept of future and past as long as you understand that there are no such things. So we are really talking about nothing.

Thus then moving on from there the idea of why perhaps it is important for you to begin to understand and have a little bit more information with respect to the concept of parallel realities, first and foremost is this: you are already using them all the time. So you might as well become aware of the fact that you are using them in whatever way will allow you to enhance the methodology and the application and the effect of that usage of parallel realities in your daily lives to expand you, to allow you to experience more of the vibration of who you are, to allow you to experience more of your joy, more of your passion, more of your love, more of your creativity.

The idea as we have explained it in the way you are already using parallel realities every single day, every moment of the day, many, many, many, many, many, many, many times a day is the experience itself that you call time. Very briefly recapping, the idea itself, the experience of time itself is created by your consciousness shifting from one parallel reality to another, billions of times per second, creating the illusion of movement, change, space, time. Each parallel reality is in and of itself a frozen, single snapshot.

'This' (hand movement) is a parallel reality, 'this' is a parallel reality, 'this' is a parallel reality...this, this, this, this, this, this, this. Similar to the frames on your filmstrip, each parallel reality is simply a frozen frame. There is no time, they're timeless, no movement, no change whatsoever, just as there is not in a single frame of film. But as you move the film through the projector and project the image on the screen then the idea is that you create the illusion of movement, the illusion of change, the illusion of space, the illusion of time.

Again, harkening back to the understanding that of course all the frames exist at once, even though you may view them one at a time, one after the other, both in that sense co-exist, but one, the idea that all the frames exist at once is a description of the nature of the structure of existence, and the experience of the motion picture is the effect, the illusion, the side-effect that you create by relating to those individual frames in a particular way from different perspectives. So physical reality experience is very similar.

You as a consciousness are like the projector light, you project your consciousness through all the different individual frames that we call parallel realities and you do it in a manner that creates your sense of time, space, continuity, and order, and progression, and expansion. And the idea thus then is you create that effect by using, by shifting your consciousness through all the different versions, all the billions and billions of versions per second of yourself, variations of yourself in different realities, different earths that stack up and create a parallel reality sequence.

And in that sequence you create the experience that you have as a physical being and relate that experience back if you will through the higher mind to the soul, the spirit that you are. But the idea is that your physical mind, your physical ego structure, your physical consciousness in that sense is like the projector. And the light is the light of your spirit, the light of your being, the light of your energy, the light of your consciousness flickering through those frames, as we said billions of times a second, to create this illusion, this side-effect of time.

So you're using this constantly, you are very intimately familiar with how you to use parallel realities to create this effect you call space-time. You do it so automatically, you don't even know you are doing it, so smoothly you don't even pay attention to it. It's on automatic for you so that you can pay attention to the experience that you are creating in this manner. But the idea now is that you become a little more aware of the fact that you are doing that. And by becoming a little bit more aware that that's how the structure works, that's how the structure exists, you can expand your experience of exactly how you create the concept of your space-time movie, your space-time illusion, your space-time side-effect.

By thus then even the subtlest of alterations you can create many different kinds of effects and many of you are beginning to experience some of these side-effects from the alteration of how your consciousness relates to the shifting that you're doing throughout all those billions of parallel reality frames. One of the most obvious side-effects that you are getting, one of the most obvious alterations that you are creating is an increase in what you call synchronicity.

Because you are changing in a sense the frame rate or more precisely, you are changing your experience, your perception of the frame rate. The frame rate actually never changes. But you can change your perception of it so that you are paying attention to different frame rates in a different way. The idea thus then is that you create a slightly different effect, slightly different side-effect in your physical reality experience.

Another side-effect is your ability to start perceiving other realities, other dimensions, start seeing what was heretofore invisible, because as the frame rate changes your perception changes, and as your perception changes your senses change, and as your senses change you are able to pick up different things that you might have heretofore thought were – well, so to speak - in between the frames you thought were real and now you're realizing that more frames and different frames can be real. Because everything exists at once, all realities overlap at once. All parallel existences, all dimensions exist here and now at once.' (33rd Parallel, 2013)

Shifting (collapsing and expanding) more consciously - parallel realities - the illusion of time and space (II/II)

What you perceive is simply a result of what vibratory frequency you are on. Frequency being another way of saying how you experience the frame rates. So the idea is that as you experience more synchronicity, as you experience and perceive more dimensions of reality, other consciousnesses, other beings you are now capable of being perceived by you, these are all part and parcel of the expansion of your consciousness and the inclusion in your consciousness of your awareness that that's how the structure exists, that you are using parallel realities to create this experience you call 'the physical world'.

Now it doesn't mean that as you live your life you have to constantly be aware of every single parallel reality, every single moment, that's not what we mean by becoming more aware of them. You don't necessarily have to allow that to go off automatic. But what you can experience is a greater side-effect, a different side-effect just by knowing that that's what you are doing. You can still let it run on automatic. It's just now that you will know it's running on automatic in a way that is more representative of the expanded view that you now have of the structure.

We can, if there is any confusion about this clarify this in the upcoming question and answer exchanges if you wish. But for now we are simply laying down this foundation so that you begin to truly understand why we are bringing these conversations about parallel realities into focus at this time. And there is another reason. The idea is that one of the things that helps this alteration of your ability to perceive these frame rates in a different way is the very discussion, the very awareness of the existence of parallel realities.

By bringing in this focus it actually begins as you think about this concept, it actually begins to rewire your brain and your neurology literally physically. Because you are in a sense choosing to look at something that by its very nature is paradimensional. And thus then when you begin to examine these kinds of multidimensional, paradimensional concepts, your brain has to rewire, reconfigure itself to allow you to process that kind of vibration, that kind of information.

So bringing in these subjects at this timing will allow you to actually know that you are in that sense choosing to allow yourselves to be rewired, you are rewiring yourself to make yourselves better receivers, better antennas for frequencies of energies that may have heretofore been invisible to you which will now start to become more visible, more solid. Please remember the caveat of manifestation that we have shared with all of you. Manifestation of things into your reality is not the manifestation of something from somewhere else coming into your reality.

Manifestation is the result of simply changing your frequency to the degree where you can simply start to perceive what has already been here, but was heretofore invisible to you. Because everything is here and now, every experience you could ever have, every thought you could ever have, every object you could ever experience in your reality is all right here, right now, with you, all in your energy, all in the codex of your theme of exploration in this life, it's all there holographically. But you only see what you are on the same vibratory level of.

So manifestation is simply changing your vibration to make visible what is already here but was heretofore invisible. So don't think of it, don't define manifestation as having to attract something from somewhere else so far away you don't know where it's coming from. It's all right here. You have it all, you have it all, you just don't know it, yet. That's all. That's the difference. Now, remember also and we would like to add this: as a boost to the concept of the manifestation idea and your experience of parallel realities, and we have said this before but we now understand it is important to say at this timing, the whole concept of this 'Law of Attraction'.

Again let us remind you that there is an underlying perspective that many of you are not quite getting about how the law of attraction actually functions. So let us just briefly share this with you at this time so you have a truly full understanding of this mechanism, of this concept. The way that many of you were talking about it isn't wrong, because you talk about the idea of 'yes, you have to be of a certain vibratory level in order to attract a certain thing that is commensurate with that vibration.' Yes, that's true and we have said so ourselves.

But the idea more precisely is this: You are already a signature vibration. It's who you are, it's your identity. You give that vibration off, the vibration of your true self all the time. You can't help yourself, you just leak it and radiate it outward all the time, that's who you are. You are giving that frequency, that signature frequency off, constantly. All the things that are representative of that frequency are doing their best to get to you, to manifest for you. If they don't it's not because you are not attracting them, it's because you are keeping them away.

That's the difference. And all the things that are not compatible with your vibration in that sense they are doing their best to attempt to get away from you, as far away from you as they possibly can. If they are not leaving your reality it's not because that you are in that sense doing something wrong per se, it's just that you're not letting them go. So the idea is not so much that you have to learn to attract, the idea is that you simply have to let go of the things that are attempting to get away from you and just let in the things that are attempting to get to you.

That's actually the core of how the law of attraction works, you're already on the vibratory frequency at your core that is the frequency that attracts all the things that are relevant for your life for you as a joyful person, for you as a loving, creative, loved person. You just need to let go of the things that are not compatible with that signature frequency, that's really all you have to do. Doesn't that sound easier than having to 'learn to attract'?

No one in your reality needs to learn to attract, no one in your reality needs to learn how to be abundant, no one in your reality needs to learn confidence, no one in your reality needs to learn to trust. You already trust 100 per cent of the time in something to be true, the question is not 'do you have to learn to trust', the question is what you are trusting in. The idea is that you never ever, ever lack confidence, and you never ever, ever lack abundance. It's that you can have confidence in lack and an abundance of lack. But you are still abundant.

So again the question and the issue is not having to learn to be abundant, having to choose what you prefer to be abundant or confident in. Because you are always abundant, you are always confident, you are always trusting. You can't help it, it's your nature. It's how you were built as a co-creator. So let go of the idea that you are not doing what you need to do in that sense. It's not like you have to learn anything about the mechanism itself. You just need to awaken to the idea of how to use the mechanism in the way that's most aligned with your true self, that's all you need to learn.' (33rd Parallel, 2013)

Indra's Net

Bashar: 'You are All-that-is, each of you is All-that-is expressing itself as a part of All-that-is. This is what you call the holographic principle in your new technological language. Every part contains the whole, every part contains the whole. The whole can create itself to be experienced as parts, but every part contains the whole. This was illustrated as we have talked about before in the past by a symbol called 'Indra's net' which is like looking at a lattice work of perfectly round reflective pearls. Each pearl reflects every other pearl in the net. So in order to gain access to all the information of the entire net all you actually have to do is look at any one pearl. You can see all the other pearls in it. Every single one of you is such a pearl. You reflect all the other pearls. Now we understand that because of your focus sometimes some of the other pearls are more difficult to see. That doesn't mean they aren't there, your nature is holographic. They are there. And when you tune your vibration and your consciousness to that obvious fact by understanding the nature of the structure of existence this way, you will then know, it's all there and you can access what you need when you need it, where you need it, how you need it, perfectly, as you need it.' (Matter of Faith Intensive, 2007)

Holotope Meditation: Realize You Are All-that-is

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1vWOV1l-GgQ&list=PLA6xHNNcdNURJozqoSoNjm38VkmIADFsX&index=5>

Bashar: `Let yourselves become relaxed, take a deep breath in and let it out. And take another deep breath in and let it out. And one more time take a deep breath in and hold it, and hold it, and hold it, and blow it out. And continue to breathe deeply, evenly in a relaxed manner, letting your bodies relax, letting your mind relax, letting your soul relax, letting everything that you think you know of yourself relax and melt away and just feel your being.

And as you begin to do this keep your eyes open and fixed on the center of the holotope as you lower your lights and bring up your music and begin to drift into a dream. And understand that what you are looking at is a mirror, a reflection of more of your consciousness, more of who and what you are. Allow yourself to look at the center. Look at yourself, the center of your being represented by the center of this image that glows before you.

And as you continue to breathe and as you continue to relax and as you continue to let go of all those things that you know do not serve you, all the ideas, the definitions, the beliefs, the thoughts, the feelings, the behaviors, just let them go for now. Be in the moment, just be here, just be now. Let the vibrations of the colors flow through your eyes into your bodies along all of your nerves, wash over your skin, flow through every cell of your being.

And as you allow yourself to focus on the center of the holotope and let the vibrations of the colors in allow yourself to view the entire holotope as the mass agreement, the mass consensus reality, all the parameters, all the agreements, all the structures, all the concepts that you agreed to experience in having this physical dream. And even as you take in the entirety of the holotope as it represents the mass agreement of which you are a part that you have agreed to be a part of, simultaneously allow your eye to drift to one specific portion that stands out to you, one specific detail - be it a line, a color, a flicker of light, a shape - doesn't matter.

But this one specific detail that stands out in the midst of the entire holotope is your individual reflection that shows you that you fit within the whole picture. Yet at the same time you stand out as unique even as your uniqueness in combining with all the other unique details and aspects forms the whole picture and without you, without that unique portion, without that detail the picture would not be complete. You are needed, you are required.

You must exist for the whole picture to exist. You are valued and valuable. So value yourself as you look upon this entire image, the mass consensus it represents, value the single component, the single detail that is representative of you and your individual uniqueness and the gift that you give to all other aspects by finding your place, by finding your position, by expressing your true nature in life so it can add to the totality of the greater being that is also you.

For the whole is also you. You are the whole, you are the parts, you are All-that-is within this and all are reflections from your point of view, from different levels of your being, from different ways that you can perceive yourself. Relax into the idea of this and that, that you are the big picture and the part and that together with all the parts you are an orchestration, you are a dance, you are a message, you are a reflection, you are information, you are knowledge and knowingness, you are experience itself, you are process, you are the journey, you are All-that-is experiencing itself in all the ways it can.

Give breath and life to the unique point of view within the totality and allow that unique point of view to contain the totality even as the totality contains the unique point of view. For you are holographic, everywhere at once, nowhere at the same time, All-that-is and everything within it. For there is no outside, there is only within. Breathe in this truth and crystallize it for yourself. With every breath from this day forward honor yourself, love yourself, cherish yourself, value yourself, appreciate yourself.

For these are the natural states of your birthright, what you were created to be to give meaning to life, the meaning that you choose, the meaning you created yourself to be as the unique perspective that fulfills the one point of view without which no other point of view could exist. And from that point of view you will experience yourself growing, expanding, changing, learning, becoming, being All-that-is from all the points of view you can, a microcosm in the macrocosm, infinity within, no space and no time at all - all one. Give yourself the freedom to be this unique you, for without you there would be nothing and with you there is everything.

You are unconditionally loved, you are unconditionally supported. You are unconditional love itself, made from it, made of it, made by it, made with it, and you made it, brought yourself into being. So bring yourself forth now in this expression like a flower that blooms in the garden and adds its color and its perfume to the entire garden without which the garden would not be as sweet, would not be as bright, would not be as beautiful and grow in the light of the sun and the cool of the night, in the rain and the moon, in the soil, the earth that nurtures you and gives forth new life that invigorates you and vitalizes you and allows you to bloom in beauty and grace and gratitude and peace and love and harmony.

Drift now in this beautiful dream of the all and the one, the one and the all. Drift now and feel the new you in a new reality with a new history and stand out and allow yourself to experience more consciously the shifts that are occurring all the time so that you can fulfill the most powerful mantra that has ever been given to you or handed down through the wisdom of the ages, the two words that sum it all up in this moment. And those words are: 'know thyself'. And you shall know everything you need to know and be everything you need to be. Know thyself. For all the answers lie within you.

For if they did not you would not even be capable of conceiving the questions. So as you question, as you seek and as you search look no further than within, for everything is there. Everything is given to you and you are always being given love and help and assistance and support. You are never without it, not for a second, not for an instant. For were that possible creation would collapse. You exist and so you always shall because that is your most fundamental quality.

For that which exists can do nothing but continue to exist in any form that it needs to take. Still it is its own identity, unique among all other identities. Take that to heart, take it to mind, take it to spirit, take it to body. Ground it in the earth by your actions and raise your eyes to the stars to know that you are connected and never alone on your journey. We and many others walk with you hand in hand, heart in heart, soul in soul.

Drift now in this dream and wake up in a new dream of understanding, acceptance, allowance and appreciation of your true value and your true worth and true deservability and your true birthright of being you as fully as you can, the true you without fear, without self-judgment, without self-doubt, certain in the vibration of your being that will allow you to experience your self-empowerment in the gentlest way possible. For remember that the greatest power requires the slightest touch and everything is accomplished effortlessly in beauty and grace and ecstasy.

Ponder the mysteries of your being and open up your curiosity and imagination for that is the avenue of communion between you and your higher mind. Allow that relationship to grow so that you can function as a full being and allow your world to become a reflection and representation of that fullness, of that brightness, of that beauty. Continue to breathe and take it all in, make it your own and crystallize it. Drift now in the dream, gently drift. This is your natural state of being and physical reality is but a dream.

Live the dream that you prefer to live. For it is your choice and your decision every moment. It is completely in your hands. Cup those hands gently and cherish what is within for it is deserving of love. Continue to breathe and dream and drift as you soften your music and you soften your lights. Allow yourself to continue to experience this dream within yourself and know that it is never ending and never goes away. It is always within you, always the slight echo, the slight reverberation, the song of the spheres, the song of the Stars, is always vibrating within that spark in the center of your being, in the center of your consciousness.

Allow yourself to float gently now and allow the dream to crystallize within you. And when you awaken you awaken into a new reality and always shall for you are never the same twice and you are always anew. Drift now and breathe and take a deep breath in and let it out and take a deep breath in and let it out and let your music fade away and take a deep breath in and hold it and feel the promise of creation within you. And blow it out and fill your atmosphere with the sweetness of that promise that shall never be broken. Our deepest appreciation, our deepest gratitude, our unconditional love to you all. Dream the dream that you are, live that dream every moment that you can. Good day and sweet dreams.'

(Going M.A.D., 2015)

The Geometric Pattern of the Single Particle: the Holotope

Kirby Seid explaining the structure of the holotope as an illustration of the geometry of the single particle:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1O9HAOJW_2Y&t=90s

Bashar: 'As you look upon the configuration before you I remind you briefly that you are looking poetically into the 'Eye of God, the Eye of Creation.' (At min. 1:00)

Q.: 'Continuing from our previous conversation earlier this year I'm left with questions about gravity and about the nested capacitor design. So we spoke about the Prime Radiant and its relationship to...

Bashar: 'You just lost half the audience.'

Q.: 'You wish to explain then?'

Bashar: Prime Radiant very briefly is simply the idea that if you imagine - and this is just an analogy - imagine a single particle in all of existence. If you wish imagine one tiny little subatomic particle in a big black void. Nothing else exists. This one tiny particle because it's the only thing has no rules. It can go as fast as it wants. If it travels thus then at infinite speed throughout this black void in whatever pattern it wishes, it will appear to be many particles all at once, because it's going so fast it can appear next to itself over and over and over again at the same time. This is how reality is structured and that's why you literally are made of the same thing that everyone and everything else is. This is the Prime Radiant idea from our civilization. Please continue.'

Q.: 'Correct. So you spoke about structure.'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'And in our conversation we related the Prime Radiant to gravity.'

Bashar: 'In a sense, yes. There is an aspect of that obviously that creates what you experience as gravity, yes.'

Q.: 'Okay, so in the idea of the fabric of space and time gravity appears to be an energy of higher vibrational quality. Why? Because it bends it.'

Bashar: 'Well, so to speak. Yes.'

Q.: 'At least to our modern day scientists. And it's still very misunderstood...

Bashar: 'Oh, yes.'

Q.: 'Or highly non-understood.'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'So could you expand a little more on the nature of gravity, how to create it, handle it, harness it and manipulate it?'

Bashar: 'Turn around and look at the holotope. Do you see the holotope?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'Do you see the geometric pattern?'

Q.: 'The fractal? Yes.'

Bashar: 'Do you see where the lines cross each other and where they don't?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'The idea is that where the lines cross each other the most is what you call the crystallization of energy down into matter. The idea is that the relationship of those nodal points is gravity. Do you understand this analogy?'

Q.: 'Yes.'

Bashar: 'Then there you go. Allow yourself to understand how the nodal points are reflective of the matrix in which the material exists and you will understand how to stretch and bend those nodal points according to certain geometric patterns such as Fibonacci spirals. So when you understand the idea of Fibonacci spirals and how they overlap and create overlapping nodal points and cross each other again and again and again in certain ways and expand in certain ways, you will understand everything you need to know about the ideas of gravity, about the ideas of dark matter, about the ideas of dark energy, and why what you call your physical Universe seems to be accelerating instead of slowing down. One example: if you understand the idea of taking a Fibonacci spiral in one direction and a Fibonacci spiral in the opposite direction you will understand that the spirals where they cross and cross again and cross again and cross again will be constantly farther and farther and farther and farther and farther apart. Yes?’

Q.: ‘Correct.’

Bashar: ‘Well, if you understand that that's representative of the expansion of your Universe you will understand that that's why it's accelerating, because the idea of the spiral is it has to cover more distance to reach the next nodal point by being that particular kind of curve it does so. And in your space-time reality that translates out to the idea of greater distance over the same time equals acceleration. Does that make sense?’

Q.: ‘Yes.’

Bashar: ‘Then there you go. Learn the vibrational state of those Fibonacci spiral nodal points and you will understand the relationship of gravity to matter and you will understand the idea of how to manipulate the vibration in order to manipulate gravity's relationship to matter. That's one way to approach it. There are several ways but that's the way that we are talking about right here in terms of the idea of geometric structure.’ (A Game of Chess, 2013)

Space Time - The Geometry of the Single Particle - The Space Time Antenna as a Free Energy Device

Bashar: ‘What do we have there? A little space-time graph. Now, let us explain. We have talked about this briefly before. The idea is you already know from what you call your science of relativity - or some of you may not know this - that there is an effect in your reality called time dilation that when you move let's say in a spaceship faster and faster and faster and faster and approach what you call the speed of light which is simply in a sense the border of your particular reality, it doesn't mean you can't actually travel faster, it's just the border of your particular reality, just the threshold.

But in your physical reality while you travel in your physical reality up to the speed of light the phenomenon called time dilation is noticed to occur. What this simply means is: the faster you move in space the slower you move in time. Time slows down. This is what creates the twin paradox as many of your scientists have expressed it, so that if you imagine there are two twins that are the same age and one steps into a spacecraft and goes out and to the stars and travels very close to the speed of light, time for them on the ship will slow down to the point that when they come back they may actually be many, many, many years younger than the twin who stayed on Earth who will have aged in the meantime.

The idea to understanding this is to understanding space-time as a 100% idea. There can only be 100% space-time. So if you are travelling at 50% of the speed of light then the idea is is that you are using up that much space, there's only 50% of time left, so you can only experience half the time. The closer you travel to the speed of light you're using up more and more of the space of space-time and there is less and less of the time left. So you only experience a little bit of it. So if you're traveling at 99% you're only experiencing 1% of time and 99% of space.

Conversely, when you're standing perfectly still as most of you are right now you're experiencing almost all of time and very little of space at all. You're not moving around. So it's always a shared idea. Whatever you use of time you can only have that much space left, whatever you use of space you only have that much time to use. The graph shows you this in this way. The line is all of time at one end, all of space at the other end, and when you start moving and expanding your use of space from zero into a cone that widens then you have very little time left, but when you go the other way and use all of the idea the other way then the cone moves in the other direction.

It's just an expansion cone. I'm using very little here, I'm using a lot here. Using very little of this when I'm using a lot of this, but when I'm using a little of this I'm using a lot of that. So it's just a double cone going in this way to to show you when you are using a little bit of this or a lot of that. You follow me so far? All right. Now this is also the key to building a space-time antenna, a device that actually uses space-time energy that you can then learn to translate into different forms of energy if you wish, such as electricity or light or heat or whatever you wish to do with it. The space-time antenna actually takes the form of this graph of the two intersecting cones.

So if you imagine in your mind right now, let's say made out of a spiral copper wire or a spiral tube, imagine starting on the ground and imagine bringing the tube around in a circle and then spiraling it upward getting smaller and smaller in circumference you're describing a cone you're spiraling up to the tip of the cone. However high you want the cone to be doesn't matter, however wide you want to start doesn't matter right now for the purpose of this illustration. It will matter later in terms of fine-tuning the geometry to get the right effect. But right now just for the purpose of this illustration just imagine starting on the ground, start spiraling your tube around and around and around smaller, smaller till you have a cone made up out of a spiral tube.

At the top, at the very tip of the cone then take that tube and move it out to the same diameter as the base of the cone and start spiraling your way down through the other cone. So when you spiral it up leave some gaps in between the tube so that when you spiral down you can go through those gaps and actually have the two cones interpenetrating until you get all the way down. Now you're inside the base of the first cone creating a downward facing cone and you get down to the tip at the bottom and then bring that out and connect it to the base of the other cone. Now you have two interpenetrating cones, one facing up, one pointing down.

In a sense it's almost like the idea of the Solomon Seal or what you now call the Jewish star, the six-pointed star. If you look at it simply flat on it will sort of appear a little bit like this idea although not quite exactly. But it's the idea of two interpenetrating triangles. When you create this kind of a resonant device and you do it where the cones are actually angled at their apices at 33° you will be able to actually have a space-time antenna. Depending upon the quality of your material, the number of windings, the size of the cone and what have you and other conditions you can actually cause this this cone with a little bit of an electrical charge to start resonating at a certain frequency that will amplify that energy by drawing down from space-time energy and thus then giving out more energy than you're putting in.

So this diagram, this space-time diagram shows you literally graphically how to create a space-time antenna for those of you who might be interested in playing with this idea as a fun home experiment. Well this is where our children start. So have some fun. Explore with it if you wish, it's up to you. Or use this idea by imagining it simply in your imagination and play with what that shape does when you get it in your mind's eye in terms of opening you up to other levels of communication as well because you can use it that way too.

You don't have to physicalize it to get effect within your own consciousness. But you can physicalize it to get an effect in physical reality. So play with it however you wish. If you also do it in your mind and you see that shape in your mind, if you can also learn to view it three-dimensionally and start turning it, rotating it in your mind and see it in different angles that will absolutely heighten and increase your ability to tap into other-dimensional frequencies as well. So play with this however you wish. And have fun, have fun, have fun.'

Q.: 'Are there any human beings that have mastered what we are talking about?'

Bashar: 'Yes. There are a few and there have been a few throughout history. You generally refer to them as avatars. You understand? The idea of many of your great teachers, the idea of many powerful indigenous shamans. Many of them can do these things.'

Q.: 'Question about the Merkaba'

Bashar: 'Rotating merkabas in your mind's eye. This is also an effective tool to key you in to different dimensional states. It doesn't really much matter which way it goes as long as you believe in your mind's eye that it feels instinctively correct.'

Q.: 'You speak of an object moving to the speed of light as 100% of space-time whereas in Einstein's terminology he would say that space has become infinite and time has become zero) Yes (so what is the relationship between the 100% and infinite?'

Bashar: 'Well again, if you are in 100% space you are in zero time. Does that not make sense? If you're infinite in space you're zero in time.'

Q.: 'You're zero in time but the idea that space becomes infinite is not quite the same to me as 100% which sounds to me like a finite concept.'

Bashar: 'Well, when we say 100% in this context we mean 100% of space: all there is, infinite, 100% of all there is. Does that make sense now?'

Q.: 'If we're speaking of an infinite universe rather than a finite universe...'

Bashar: 'But we already discussed that it's infinite, didn't we?'

Q.: 'I understand.'

Bashar: 'So in that context that's what we're talking about. 100% means infinite because we're talking about 100% of all there is. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'Using the Merkaba for travelling around in space'

Bashar: 'Allowing yourself to achieve many of these states is possible in this lifetime. It is up to you. It may or may not be probable depending upon what process you are going through but that's still under your control. So yes, it's all possible.'

Q.: 'How can we do it?'

Bashar: 'We are talking about all of that. All of these things we are discussing, each in a sense is a piece of an understanding that in combination, in whole will allow you to do what you're talking about.'

Q.: 'Could we use the space-time antenna in the energy crisis?'

Bashar: 'Yes, that's why I said go play with it. All right? Have fun.'

Q.: 'The symbol that you're showing us as the equation of the two cones and the shape of the two cones becoming something that generates energy, how does the idea in a graph translate to the reality of the physical movement?'

Bashar: 'You are expressing the idea of how reality actually creates more reality. It creates it through an expanding spiral modality. It is partly a description of the actual geometric form that the single particle moves along to create all the things it creates. So you're tapping into the underlying form, the underlying template that the single particle uses to expand all of creation on, the sacred spiral. Make sense? I'll take that as a no. The idea is an idea of expansion. The idea is also that in physical reality you experience things cyclically. So the combination of a spiral expanding in cycles is the idea of a cone. Does that make sense? Therefore, that gives you an actual device or a shape that taps directly into how things actually grow and expand and thus then you're tapping into a natural template by using that form. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'Doesn't matter which way it goes, clockwise or counter-clockwise?'

Bashar: 'Clockwise - for you, all right?' (Bashar's Lab, 2008)

Infinity is greater than the finite – everything is here and now – all of your other lives are sharing the same single particle

Bashar: 'Infinity. The formula for those of you who are somewhat math-oriented basically says in simple and obvious terms: infinity is greater than the finite, the finite is less than the infinite. That's all it says there, but the implications of that formula are profound. Here is how to interpret this from our perspective: many people again for quite some time have pondered 'is creation infinite or is it finite, which is it?' Does it go on forever, is it eternal, or does it have a limit, does it have a boundary? All right, a fair question.

One is contained in the other. The idea here is to understand the very concept of concepts. What we talked about last night of your time the whole idea of imagining and what you imagine is real because you cannot imagine non-existence, so anything you imagine, anything you can conceive of must on some level of existence be real somewhere. It may not be pertinent to your reality but it is real somewhere because you can not imagine that which is not. So anything you imagine must be a part of what is somewhere, somewhen, on some level.

This equation keys right in to that idea. You have in your head the concept of infinity. You have created this concept. As was pointed out: 'finite', the finite is contained within the infinite. The infinite is not conceptually contained within the finite. Thus if both terms exist in concept both must exist in reality. Because if infinity didn't exist, you wouldn't be able to conceive of it. Things simply would be finite, you wouldn't know them any other way. You would never be able to conjure up the concept of infinity, but because you have it tells you infinity is real in your terms. And thus that the finite is contained within it, because if the finite were the real reality the finite could not contain nor produce the concept of infinity.

But since you have both of them, infinity and the finite, it tells you that infinity must exist, that creation itself is infinite even while there may be aspects of it that express themselves in a finite way. Said another way: the concept of limits, the concept of beginning, the concept of ending and the concept of boundaries are all contained within the infinite. The infinite is not subject to them, because the infinite exists first. It is all that is, all that is. And thus then any concept, a beginning, an ending, time, space, any kind of what you might refer to as a boundary or limitation is part and parcel within All-that-is, but All-that-is is not subject to it.

Thus then questions like 'well, did the infinite universe have a beginning?' - no, because it's not subject to time. Time is subject to All-that-is. So there may be beginnings and endings within All-that-is but All-that-is is not subject to a beginning or an ending. It is above and beyond and outside all of those things and there is nothing beyond, above or outside that. Nothing beyond, above or outside All-that-is. So it is not subject to anything, everything is subject to it. So infinity is greater than the finite. The finite is always less than the infinite and because both concepts exist in your imagination both are real and are expressed in a variety of ways.

But it is clear, because of the 'greater than', 'less than' symbol that infinity is never less than the finite. Whatever concepts are finite are always less than infinity - within it, contained within it. Does that make sense? And again: this is a logical extrapolation in the science of the obvious, one, two, three. To again express it another way: We have many times talked about the idea of 're-incarnation'. And again from our perspective, it is not that it is really re-incarnation because space-time are illusions, everything only exists now and that the idea is that you do have other lives but they are going on right now at the same time in a different vibration.

Again in the same way that you have multiple channels on your television and just because you are looking at one at any particular moment doesn't mean the other programs aren't there at the same time. They are but you only see what you are tuned to at any given moment. So all your lives are like that. Past is a euphemism, future is a euphemism. The idea is that everything is going on all at once. Therefore again, in the logical extrapolations of the science of the obvious if you know from the beginning everything is one thing and only exists now, then when the topic of re-incarnation comes up based on your understanding of the One and the Now the only logical interpretation of the concept of reincarnation is that all the lives exist now.

It's a simple, logical, obvious extrapolation. One builds to the other. One leads to the other. This is the science of the obvious and why certain things from our perspective are simply, clearly obvious. Because we understand the first principle is so, we understand how all the other concepts must exist in order to fit the first principle. So if there is only here and now, you know that and know everything is one then all of your lives, all of them exist now and they are also, no matter how many of them you have, no matter how each of them may consider themselves to be the only physical one, they are all sharing the same one particle.

Because again remember, time and space are illusions created by the path of the particle, the geometric path of that particle. And therefore it is only a degree of the particle crossing itself that creates the concept of a different frequency that makes it seem as if another life going on simultaneously is actually happening in another timeframe, the past, the future, another dimension, so on and so forth. It is just the way the particle arranges itself that determines how you perceive that. If you were to allow yourself – and again, here is another effect that could happen – it may or not, it's not necessarily something to strive for. Let it happen naturally if it does because if it happens it will serve you, if it doesn't happen it doesn't need to.

But just to fire your imaginations...when you begin doing the exercise we talked about and visualizing as you saw here the idea that the particle that makes all of you up is the same one particle that makes up everything else and you do that relationship visualization you may also actually start to perceive some of your other simultaneous life selves. And you may actually start to perceive them physically. Don't freak out. I will tell you a little secret. Not often but sometimes now and then some of you have already done this and didn't know it. You might have seen another person somewhere standing and they might have looked out of place, out of time. It might actually have been your perception of one of your other lives for that moment.

This may become more common as you get into a more unified understanding of your relationship to creation. The degree to which this may or may not happen again is simply relative to the degree to which you may need to know or perceive this for your particular life path here. But if you also look into many of what you call your historical accounts where different people in the past talk of seeing strange beings, spiritual beings, angels and what have you, they may from time to time be seeing things that have nothing to do with you, but from time to time they may actually be seeing you – a future life from their point of view that is going on simultaneously, and they may simply relate that they had a vision and they saw this strange being dressed very strangely and then it disappeared. Might have been you, maybe wearing spandex or something.

So sometimes you may actually come across a historical account that described something like this and all of a sudden understand it is something that was perceived from that time to this time. Even some - not all - even some of what you now in your now-today-time call U.F.Os are yourselves in ships in the future. They are not all aliens in that sense. So when you learn to use craft that way, when you learn to tunnel through space and time you will find that many times you will overlap many different frequencies and you will be perceived by some of your own other lives as U.F.Os. And they may think 'oh, they are aliens'. And don't even know that it's themselves in another life in that craft.

So it's all very flexible in this way. This is all designed bit by bit at whatever pace you are comfortable to slowly dissolve the borders and barriers you have placed in your mind through certain definitions that you have been taught. And bit by bit in replacing and transforming those borders and barriers in your mind you will allow yourself to begin to dissolve and understand you are all connected, all one, all one thing and you will start to perceive your reality that way. Do not freak out. If you are going to freak, freak in.' (Bashar's Lab, 2008)

What happens after death to the reality that was our physical universe?

Bashar: 'It remains within your soul, it remains within the oversoul. It becomes information that allows the soul to grow and make decisions about what it would like to do next. It's rendered into information, basically. It all turns into information that the soul can use to decide what lessons to have learnt from it, from the experience, how it all factors in to what the soul will decide to do next for its personal growth.' (Soul Cycle, 2024)

Shifting (collapsing and expanding) to a new reality: all bets are off. The slate is clean with every neutral collapse. Nothing remains of the old reality.

Bashar: 'Allow yourself, as you breathe with every breath, at least in that rate, at that rate, allow yourself to imagine with every breath, collapse - an expansion, a collapse - an expansion. Every breath in a collapse, every breath out an expansion. Every breath in a collapse to neutrality, every breath out an expansion to a completely new reality. Neutrality - reality, neutrality - reality, neutrality - reality, neutrality - reality. Over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over again. Allow yourselves to let that sink in.

Feel the neurological net in your brain rewiring and your whole body rewiring to understand that you are doing this. So it becomes more synchronized, more harmonized with the understanding that you are doing this. Neutrality - reality, neutrality - reality, neutrality - reality. True neutrality - all bets are off - zero. The slate is clean with every neutral collapse. Nothing remains of the old reality. No habits, no patterns, no beliefs, no feelings, no thoughts, nothing remains of the old reality. Everything that is there now in the expansion is of the new reality. If it bears any resemblance to the old reality that's simply because of your imposition of the continuity illusion upon it.

But nothing remains of the old you. With every change you are completely new, in a completely new parallel reality, having gone through the neutral point, through the neutral gate, which is in the receiver of your brain, connected to the corpus colossus and the pineal gland. That's the physical expression of that energetic idea. So that even when you expand out you still have a representation in physical reality of that neutral point because you are still connected. It's the same idea as what you call your YinYang symbol. You will notice that even though there is a light side and a dark side, within each there is still the opposite. Within the black there is still the white, within the white there is still the black. And there is always that connection point to the other side.

Within your physical reality there is always the connection point to the neutral collapse. Always. And from the neutral collapse there is always accessibility to the expansion. Always. Collapse - you expand, collapse - you expand. Neutrality - reality, neutrality - reality. New-trality – new reality, new-trality – new reality, newtrality equals new reality, simple equation, simple equation. Simple equation of energy. Allow yourselves to breathe this in. Allow yourselves to visualize over and over: collapse of energy and the expansion again. Allow it to flicker as quickly as you can imagine it to flicker so that you can truly begin to feel the sensation of shifting through parallel realities, as if they are passing through you, rushing through you like a wind, flickering like frames of a film, flickering through you, as fast as you can imagine.

You are literally, literally switching on and off, on and off, on and off. One and zero, one and zero, one and zero. Why do you think this is the digital age on your planet? One and zeros – what does that symbolize? Neutrality – reality, neutrality – reality, off – on, off - on. That's all there is to it. All the information you need is in all of that. That's why your consciousness is now exploring the idea of digitized information and will begin now soon to explore the idea of quantized information because you are now allowing yourselves to truly begin to sense the multidimensionality of your being.

Because as you begin to allow this format, this template, this diagram of the 9 levels of consciousness to sink in to your wiring, you are also now by shifting in this collapse and expansion idea, you are beginning to experience the multitude of dimensions in which this is happening. Because this is happening for every single life that the oversoul has created, has projected itself into. All the levels below that, the individual soul, the higher mind, the template level reality, the unconscious mind with its beliefs, the subconscious mind with its feelings, the conscious mind with its thoughts, the 8th level down of automatic mind with its individual behaviors and patterns and habits, and the lower level of the idea of the collective unconscious mind with its collective agreements is happening for every single incarnational projection from the oversoul.

And you are connected to all of them. But they are all doing the same thing: collapsing and expanding, collapsing and expanding, collapsing and expanding, shifting billions of times per second through parallel realities in a gigantic multiverse dance of exchanging places and shifting around, flickering to and fro. Because not only are you collapsing inward and outward in any given series or sequence of parallel realities, you are also collapsing and shifting sideways, forward and back, up and down in a multitude of dimensions which is represented by all the other lives that are projections of the oversoul.

Because as you collapse you are connecting to the oversoul and connecting through the oversoul to all the other lives that that are also collapsing and expanding simultaneously, billions of times a second. And through all of that there is information and communication and switching on and off, and sharing, sharing, sharing of information, sending and receiving, sending and receiving, sending and receiving, sending and receiving, sending and receiving in all the directions all the time, all at once. And this picture gives you the start of the smallest inkling of the beginning of a clue for how the oversoul actually experiences itself in all of these projections, soaking up all those experiences of the collapse and the expansion, billions of times a second.

Imagine the electric energetic charge that the oversoul is constantly experiencing in all of those flickerings, billions of times a second. But don't imagine it too strongly, it could make you explode. Just joking. Because the only explosion you will have when you begin to truly wrap your mind around this idea is an ecstatic explosion of synchronicity. Because synchronicity doesn't only just occur in your life, it occurs between all the lives of the oversoul as well. That's what is going on with regard to information being shared between all these different lives that are aspects of the same oversoul is the synchronicity and the timing of getting the information just when you need it and giving the information just when they need it.

You are an absolute network of ongoing exchanges of information and energy. Constantly a bubbling, seizing, fizzing cauldron of exchange of information across dimensions of experiences, simultaneously. This is what you actually are and this is some indicator of the beginning of the higher levels above the oversoul. Because of course there are oversouls of oversouls. And the experience that they are having, from the perspective of the physical mind is nearly incomprehensible. And again, it goes higher and higher and higher, all the way to All-that-is which experiences by definition all that is. But this gives you the beginning of an understanding.

The beginning of an experience of what it means to truly experience yourself as a multidimensional being. So now then, allow yourselves once again to focus and visualize on the diagrams you have been given of the 9 levels of consciousness that are relevant to any particular individual spirit's journey through the idea of physical reality, and the collapsing to neutrality and the expansion to another parallel reality that the spirit experiences in its vibrational resonances, the vibrational levels that all contribute to that experience of continuity.

Allow yourself to let that sink in and as you breathe in and breathe out in an easy, peaceful manner, allow yourself to also begin to imagine an overlay at a central point – either in the template level reality or in the belief system level of consciousness, the idea of the central point of the collapse to a neutral point, a truly neutral point with no differentiation – that then expands to a completely new person, a completely new diagram with the vibrations in those levels arranged very differently, or as differently as you wish them to be. The degree of difference determining your ability to perceive the fact that you have shifted, that your consciousness is expressing itself as a new person literally, in a new reality literally.

Let that sink in to your visualization and remember that no matter how precisely, how definitively, how accurately, how boldly, how imaginatively, colorfully you may imagine this, you may picture this in your physical mind's eye, it is only a symbolic representation of what is really going on. So just feel the energy, because the feeling of the energy, the visceral experience of this multidimensional energy of collapse to neutrality and expansion to a new reality is a more precise and accurate reflection and representation of what is actually going on than the picture that you have in your physical mind.

Feel that energy. And anytime - anytime - you find yourself within a vibrational state that is not in alignment with the self you prefer to be allow yourself to remember two things primarily: that you are always collapsing to a neutral state, so you are never stuck, and that you can allow yourself the opportunity to know that you are a greater being than you have imagined, but now you will begin to experience through your imagination and through the creation of a balanced relationship with the higher mind and the physical mind more and more and more of all the layers and levels that you are, but in a way that allows you to know that as you collapse to neutrality and are never stuck and expand to a completely new reality every moment, that how you define yourself through your excitement, is what determines your experience.

And always remember that when you go looking for those beliefs, don't go down, go up, up, up, up is where the answers are always going to be found. Down, down, down is the only way you will find forgetfulness. So if you want to remember, re-member, re-connect, if you want to know who you are, go up. Raise your frequency. There you will discover everything you need to know in the ones and zeros and the information contained therein of your neutral collapse and your expansion. Allow yourself to let this sink in, breathe in and breathe out, breathe in and breathe out, breathe in and breathe out. We will allow you to absorb this at whatever pace, whatever rate, to whatever degree you wish to through all the parallel realities you are shifting through.' (The 9 Levels of Consciousness, 2011)

The 9 Levels of Consciousness – official handout of the session:

https://d11n7da8rpqbjy.cloudfront.net/basharet/1824_17089885180499_Levels_of_Consciousness.pdf?kuid=485bb238-7c84-479e-963a-389c94488a60-1755707908&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

How does a disease look like in spirit?

Bashar: 'As a pattern of energy that is, from your perspective, potentially discordant.'

Q.: 'So, there can be discordant things in spirit...anything?'

Bashar: 'Well, let me put it this way: it's like a blueprint. I am going to have this experience of this disease which is something that is representative of being out of balance with my core frequency. So as a blueprint you may see it as something that looks like it's slightly shifted off of the center core essential frequency in a way that would cause a discordant harmonic between the two. Just to put it in energy terms.' (Soul Cycle, 2024)

How does Bashar decide what information to share with Darryl?

Bashar: 'It has a lot to do with scanning your collective consciousness about what it is that's appropriate to share with all of you in this particular moment. So, it has a lot to do with connections that we're making, blocks that we're imposing on ourselves to make sure we do not in any way, shape or form violate or in any way, shape, or form break what your collective consciousness says you are or are not ready for. We may know certain things when we return to our own reality, when we disconnect from the channel in that sense, but we won't know things that would interfere or intervene in your natural process while the channeling is going on. So, we impose those blocks and they happen automatically. So we always check in with the collective consciousness, your own soul, higher mind, with your guides, soul family, angelic beings, other ETs you may have connections to, so on and so forth. But this happens automatically and this will determine what it is we are capable and not capable of transmitting to you.' (The Art of the Challenge, 2025)

The Torus Field

Q.: 'I'm fascinated with torus energy. I would love to discuss the dynamic flow of our electromagnetic field as a torus and the heart generating that field and the anatomy of physiology. What does it look like, is it flowing both counter-clockwise and clockwise?'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'And is it going up the spine and out the crown and back circulating back down?'

Bashar: 'Well that depends, but in describing the flow within the torus itself it is going in more than one direction and it is a woven sort of double spiral in the sense that it's flowing this way (clockwise hand movement to the right) and flowing this way (counter-clockwise hand movement to the right) and flowing this way (clockwise hand movement to the left) and flowing this way (counter-clockwise hand movement to the left). Does that make sense? Both directions, a double spiral in both directions. If you imagine that the torus is made out of thin lines around it, going around it and around it in one direction then also have the lines go - shall we say - crossing it in the other direction and then having the lines go in this direction and also crossing it in this direction. Does that make sense? Do you understand the illustration?'

Q.: 'I think so.'

Q.: 'Is the torus field nested? We have bigger and smaller torus fields nested within each other for our multi-dimensional being?'

Bashar: 'When you say 'in each other' do you mean the physical persona, the higher mind, and the soul?'

Q.: 'yeah.'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'Okay. Now as far as our holographic bubble that we are creating, can you talk about where the belief systems are stored in our morphogenetic fields and how that relates/translated to our thoughts and emotions that are then stored into our cellular memory?'

Bashar: 'The field itself is the storage mechanism. If you're talking about the idea of it being a holographic structure then you will understand it, it's stored everywhere.'

Q.: 'Within the bubble?'

Bashar: 'Everywhere.'

Q.: 'everywhere.'

Bashar: 'Yes. In other words you tap into whatever you're the vibration of wherever you are because everything is here and now. Therefore, what you're calling the morphogenic field is simply a projection of consciousness that makes it seem like it occupies space and time, but that's an illusion. It's all here and now. So in a sense holographically you can tap into anything anywhere including belief systems.'
(The Forest Path, 2021)

How does the soul look like?

Q.: 'I know you answered this before, we are a manifestation projection inside our soul. Can you give us the anatomy and physiology details of what our soul looks like outside our physical body?'

Bashar: 'The soul itself in a sense is a particular expression or pattern of light, of electromagnetic energy that has many different kinds of radiating, outward and inward radiating patterns simultaneously. Sort of like if you imagine dropping a stone in a pond and seeing the ripples go outward but then the ripples bouncing off the edge of the pond and going back toward the center, but imagine that happening simultaneously. And then imagine that in multiple dimensions, multiple directions.' (The Forest Path, March 2021)

What are Bashar's thoughts on trauma and PTSD?

Q.: 'Trauma and PTSD - is that also limiting beliefs and definitions?'

Bashar: 'Yes. It doesn't invalidate the idea of an experience, that's not what we are saying. But what we are saying is the only reason you experience anything in physical reality is because of your belief system and definitional relationship to it. Because remember, nothing is actually coming from the past. You are recreating it in the moment, every moment.

So you have to decide: what reason am I recreating this experience? Am I learning something from doing so? Is there something I can take from it that will allow me to move on? And then allowing yourself to actually use it and apply it in a way that does give you the freedom to create something different, because nothing actually comes from the past. There is no such thing. It comes from the present because you believe you need it to be there. But because you are coming from a spacetime framework you believe that it's actually affecting you from the past. It's not, there is no such thing.

You have been made to believe, you have been trained to believe that there is such a thing, and that's why you experience the lingering continuity of it. But if you understand you are creating your reality every moment then you break the continuity. You learn what you need to learn by looking at that concept, the concept of having had that experience. You learn from it if you wish and you move on if you wish. And you stop recreating it if you wish. Because you understand you are literally a new person, a different person, not the person that you say had that experience.

Because again, if you change yourself in the present, you not only change your future, you change your past, because you have to from a linear perspective. You have to have a different past to have become the person you are now that's different. To maintain the sense of linear continuity, whoever you are now has to have a past that is relevant for who you are now. So if you change who you are now, you are changing who you were, as well as who you can be. You are on a different track entirely with a different history.

You may not know that because every time you create a new past, a new history in your mind, it seems like the only history that's ever been there because it has to seem that way. But how do you know that 5 minutes ago you didn't have a completely new history? You'll never remember that necessarily, or you might. But most people don't because it's irrelevant for them to do so. So it may seem as if it has always been your past, but it hasn't been. It's just what you're dealing with now in the present that you think you have to deal with. Does that help open this up a bit?' (The Forest Path, 2021)

The core signature vibration and the changing secondary vibrations around it

Q.: 'Question about the inherently unique frequency'

Bashar: 'You all have a unique expression. Your signature vibration in a sense will not change but you can change the secondary vibrations around it that represent your unique expression of the signature frequency. But the signature frequency is a different expression from everyone else, it's your unique reflection of All-that-is. Your unique reflection as an expression of creation. And then you can express different frequencies of that, different ways of expressing that signature frequency as you go through your process of rediscovering yourself.'

Q.: 'So when you are reading someone's frequency you are reading the frequency around the signature?'

Bashar: 'Yes. Because if I just read the signature frequency it would not really matter much. Your signature frequencies are all very, very, very high. It's just that you are clouding them with all sorts of fear-based belief systems that doesn't allow the light to shine through as strongly as it could. That's the whole point. It's clearing out the attic, clearing out the basement of all the negative fear-based beliefs that cloud your ability to express the signature frequency that you are as an aspect and reflection of creation more fully. That's what this is all about. Letting go of who you are not and being who you truly are. Each of you is a puzzle piece within creation. You are a certain shape. That shape fits with all the other puzzle pieces to create the big picture of All-that-is. But when you try to be a shape you are not you won't fit, you won't help create the big picture. Trying to be someone you are not is the most difficult thing you can do in life. It exhausts you. It tires you out. It kills you, literally, to be someone you are not. Let go, and be who you are. Uplift yourself and then you will fit and the big picture will be formed before your eyes.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Creation is intelligent – your signature vibration – the orchestra of All-that-is Bashar: 'Creation is intelligent. This has been a subject of controversy on your planet for quite some time: is there a God, is it intelligent? Now when we say creation is intelligent we are not talking about the euphemism exactly on your planet that is now more recently referred to as intelligent design. This is not a religious argument. The idea here is very, very simple. It is an idea of holism. It is an idea of understanding, an extrapolation, an extension of what we have just explained about everything being one and the same thing (...) Awareness and intelligence is what we are talking about. You are self-aware.

You are an intelligence. We are not talking about the idea of the subjective point of view of how you may apply your intelligence. Whether someone may 'judge' you to be smart or stupid or what have you. It's not what we are talking about here. What we are simply talking about is the quality itself that you have intelligence, you are aware. Now, you are, all of you are as we have just demonstrated an aspect of creation. You are all the same one thing. If thus then any part of the whole has intelligence, intelligence is a quality of the entire thing. It's as simple as that.

Imagine if you will an ice cube. Imagine that ice cube sitting on a table. You now have in your hand a hammer. Smash the ice cube. See the pieces go flying off in a number of different directions. Now, no matter how many pieces there are, every single piece is still made of ice. Just like the whole cube. The quality of any piece, the quality of the ice in any piece tells you what quality must have existed in the entire cube to begin with. Thus then when you talk about the concept of 'is creation intelligent', 'is there an intelligence', 'is it aware', it may not be the kind of consciousness you understand as human consciousness, it may be a very different expression, but the fundamental quality that you possess as a being is awareness and intelligence.

That quality therefore exists by definition, by default, in the whole. How it may express its intelligence, again, may be very different than how you choose to express yours. But this is part and parcel of what we in our civilization call 'the science of the obvious'. Let it be obvious. There really is no mystery here when you keep it very simple. When you understand the concept of holism, when you understand the concept that everything is actually truly made out of the same one thing, many other things we have talked about, many other metaphysical concepts, many other concepts that may at first seem mysterious are suddenly very obvious when you base them on the first understanding that everything is one thing.

So again, to drive the point home: when you a) know everything is by definition made of one thing then you can start to extrapolate some very simple conclusions. You are part of that whole. You are that whole. You are one and the same thing made out of the same thing. The qualities you possess must therefore by definition be qualities that by definition the whole also possesses, whether or not it expresses them in the same way is not the point. It still has that quality. So, creation has intelligence. Creation is aware. It is up to you, again, by forming your relationship, your personal relationship with creation in your understanding that everything in creation is made out of the same one thing to form your particular perspective of what that relationship will give you, of what communication will come between the intelligence in the way you express it and intelligence in the way creation expresses it.

How you are a translation of the awareness, a translation of the intelligence of creation in a specific format, in a specific mode that is represented by your unique pattern the single particle takes when it defines you, the unique you that you are. You are resonating. You are that single particle resonating in a certain way, at a certain pitch, at a certain signature frequency, signature vibration that is you, uniquely you and you alone. But that vibration is a part of the symphony of all vibrations that single particle creates in the orchestra of All-that-is. So you are one note, many of you together are chords, all together you are the symphony of All-that-is in all the vibrations that it contains.

So, you are music, you are awareness, you are intelligence. Being yourself to the fullest you can be is simply singing your song, that's all it is. You all have a song to sing, all you need to do is sing it and you will be playing your part, you will be playing your instrument in the symphony of creation in the most harmonious, melodious way you possibly can. When you experience the idea of fear and doubt and don't necessarily allow yourself to be in harmony you may now and then hit what you would perceive as a discordant note. That's alright. Again, as we have said you can use that in a positive way as well. Bring it back into the full and allow your song to be that much richer, that much sweeter, that much more in harmony with the overall symphony of All-that-is.' (Bashar's Lab, 2008)

How does the signature vibration look like?

Q.: 'How does my signature vibration look like?'

Bashar: 'It is a pattern, it is a - shall we say - something similar to the idea of ripples in a pond stretching out holographically in a multitude of directions and different colors.

Q.: 'Any colors in particular?'

Bashar: 'Well, there are many colors, but there are also colors that you have no names for.'

(Resonance And Reflection, 2012)

Every change is a total change – because everything is literally made out of one particle

Bashar: 'If everything is literally made out of one particle then anytime you exercise your consciousness on the matrix that is created by the particle that – in a sense – is you, then you'll understand that any change you make must by definition change the path of that particle in some way, shape or form. And if you change the path of that particle in some way, shape or form, you have changed everything, everywhere, all at once. Just like all the little gears are all connected. You cannot turn the first gear without turning them all. It can't be done.

So, every change you make, any change you make – what? – every change you make, any change you make no matter how small changes everything. What do we mean when we say: changes everything? More literally, what we mean is: every single possible configuration of every possible universe already exists in a static form. What you experience as a change is your consciousness shifting from one to the other in much the same way that you change channels on your television to go from one program to another. The idea is that every single multiple parallel reality is simply made up of a series of still shots, if you will. Again, we understand this is a crude analogy but it will do.

The idea is to understand that what you perceive as motion, even this motion (small finger movement), even this represents going through a multitude of infinite universes. Because this is a universe, that's a universe, that's a universe, that's a universe, that's a universe, that's a universe, that's a universe, that's a universe (hand movements) makes you giddy, doesn't it? Literally you are changing universes all the time flickering through them with your consciousness at such an incredible - shall we say - rate of speed that you don't even realize you're doing it. You're doing it all the time, you're doing it right now, you've been doing it forever, you will keep on doing it.

Therefore, what are the implications of this recognition? Everything is connected, everything is one thing. When you change something everything changes. By understanding that every change is a total change miracles are possible. Anything goes. The degree to which you understand this concept means that in one moment of experience you can be completely one way and in the next moment of experience you can be completely another way. Or: in one moment of experience you can be completely one way, in another moment of experience you can be a little bit different, in the next a little bit different, in the next a little bit different, in the next a little bit different.

But even though you may be using the shift to make it appear as if you're simply being a little bit different, in fact you're actually totally different but using the total difference to make it only seem as if you're just a little bit different. The rate of change is simply you being willing to engineer a shift to a parallel reality universe that is as different as you prefer it to be without necessarily creating a series of successive steps. It's all how you define that shift, all how you define yourself in that next universe so that you will only take yourself to the universe that holds that definition you hold of yourself. And that's what you will experience.

So if you have a definition of change that says 'I can only change a little bit' or 'it's difficult to change' or 'I can only change slowly' what you will then be doing is actually popping through completely different whole universes that are very similar to the one you left from. Or you can say 'I am totally different' and you can shift to a universe that then is very, very different from the one you shifted from. It's really up to you and it's really up to your belief systems and definitions as to exactly how you experience that rate of change, that rate of shifting. But all those realities all exist right now. It's up to you to change the channel.

And you can go from channel one to channel two to channel 3 to channel 4 to channel 5 channel 6 channel 7 or you can simply go channel 1, channel 10. You can do that and you can even go channel 1, channel 10, channel 2, channel 5, channel 1, channel 10, channel 9, channel 7, channel 8, channel 20, channel 30, channel 100, channel one. You can do that too. And you do do that all the time. Many times when you say 'oh, I haven't been able to change. I haven't been able to make this change' many times you actually have changed but then you've simply changed back, that's all. So again, it's a matter of really understanding the concept of state of being and when you're in a certain state of being you really are in a different reality. You really are a different person.

Please, please, please, please, please, please, please, please take me literally, please take me literally. This isn't a metaphor. This isn't a metaphor. You literally are a different person when you make any shift at all. Literally a different person. So, whatever you define, truly define that person to be that's the total reality that exists as well. If you suddenly define yourself to be a person that has a very different behavior pattern than the other person you were a moment ago or again, perhaps more precisely, if you define that your consciousness is now perceiving itself through the matrix of a different universal reality than it did a moment ago, that reality is a total reality with its own sense of history, its own sense of its own future and it bears no relationship whatsoever to the other universe you were in unless you have defined in that universe that it contains a similar component that makes it seem as if it has a similarity to the universe you were in.

So again, if you feel that things are difficult to change or they change more slowly than you would prefer all you're simply doing is creating a new whole total universe that has a lot of similarity to the one you were just in. But you don't have to do that. If you do do that, however, that might be a clue to you that you may have belief systems that says 'I'm not comfortable going any faster than that, changing any more radically than that, why not?' And then it's up to you to explore your belief systems and your definitions to find out why the pace is what the pace is because it may actually serve you in a number of ways.

Just because sometimes things change slowly doesn't mean that's a negative thing. You yourself may require that pace for a variety of positive reasons. So allow yourself to truly examine why things are happening in the way they are by first allowing yourself to know that whatever is happening is what needs to be happening because it's a true reflection of your state of being at that moment, a true reflection. And when you get in touch with what it is a reflection of in terms of your beliefs and your definitions then you will have far more conscious leeway and awareness to make the next change, define the next change in the way that you prefer to or closer to what you prefer than you did before.

And you may then feel yourself accelerating things, changing more rapidly, more synchronicity coming into your life however it expresses itself. But the key, the key is to understand that you already change totally, every time you change, anytime you change. So it's not about having to learn to change. It's not about having to manipulate one little piece of the puzzle here and another little piece of the puzzle there. Every move you make changes everything, everywhere, everywhen. It's really up to you to simply determine what kind of total change you prefer and to examine what it is within you that will allow you or not allow you to give yourself permission to experience that change.

Now this is why we have also called this idea 'The 13th Step'. We understand on your program with respect to the concept of addiction that there are such things as '12 step' - programs and these are all well and good, we are in no way shape or form invalidating, we understand they help many people. We are also adding at the same time this concept of the 13th Step that when an individual, not someone fooling themselves, not someone pretending, but when an individual truly understands that every change is a total change - for example someone with what you call an addiction, someone who chooses something again and again they say they don't prefer, yet they are still motivated to choose it that's an addict, no matter what it is - when you choose that over and over again without knowing why in that sense that's an addiction.

The idea is that if you know every change is a total change and you actually understand that when you change you become a completely different person you can, you are capable of defining that new person as someone who does not have an addiction and never did. That's why if you actually use the 13th Step when dealing with the concept of addiction you will actually get to a place where you will be a person who doesn't even have the concept of having to worry about whether they will get the urge again to fall back into that pattern because the point is if you're truly another person you never had the pattern, you never had the addiction and you will never feel the urge because it's not part of the makeup of your universe. Is that clear?

Now again, the degree of efficacy with which you use this concept is really up to you and it may when you begin to play with it spark a process within you of getting in touch with the belief systems within you that may be connected to the idea of choices that might be read as addictions so on and so forth, that's all right. The point is, if you start to work with this concept of ultimate change, total change, the 13th Step it will begin to allow you the freedom to understand you do not have to fear, you do not have to fear that something can somehow reach out from the past and control you that you are in that sense controlled by the things you were and that you have no power against them. If you want to create that reality experience you can.

But remember you're creating the experience of seeming to be powerless and you're using your power to create it. So there's the paradox. You need to understand that it's simply a matter of how you define yourself and how you define yourself is what's going to determine where your power flows and in what way it manifests, it's as simple as that. So when you know every change is a total change you can really start fresh, you can really start from scratch, you can really clean the slate and allow yourself the freedom, the permission and the freedom to really know you are a new person with a completely new understanding and idea and anything that was no longer is in that state for the you you are right now. Makes sense?

All right, simple physics, science of the obvious, that's all this is, that's all this is. Let it sink in, you don't have to get it all now, you don't have to get it all at once. As we said, every one of these ideas is a piece of a big picture and the idea is to use them all holistically. And this is why we are stressing - shall we say - the idea, underscoring - shall we say - the idea of one leads to the other, the science of the obvious. If you know this then you know that.

Because when you have that foundation, when you have that spine, when you have that core, anytime you may find yourself getting a little bit confused, a little bit fuzzy on one particular concept or another, one particular tool or another, all you need to do is follow the spine all the way back to the beginning: everything is one thing. It literally is just one thing. From that knowledge, from that knowing go back down the spine in succession clarifying on the way, making sure everything is based on the initial principle and that will act as a clarifying mechanism for whatever it is you are dealing with at that moment. Does that make sense? All right.' (Bashar's Lab, 2008)

All of existence is made from the same one particle in the ultimate time sharing plan: the Prime Radiant

Bashar: `Prime Radiant. Now, we have discussed this concept a little bit, and today through the creativity and kindness of many people we are able to provide a little bit more of a graphic demonstration of this concept to really visually drive the point home into the center of your brain. Remember this: every new thought, literally, literally, literally – physiologically alters the neurological pathways in your brain. Every single thought. So one of the things that we will be doing here today is providing ideas and demonstrations in such a manner so that the brain path will be altered – not without your permission – but will be altered in such ways as to allow you more ease of absorption and understanding of many of these concepts to make them your own, to make them as you say in your language ‘second nature’, really: ‘first nature’ so that you will apply them more automatically in your lives.

Now, this concept ‘Prime Radiant’ is based on the idea that many of your scientists, many of your physicists have begun to explore now for quite some time. The idea has been termed in your society ‘The Unified Theory’, ‘M-Theory’, String-Theory, many different things, and they are approaching an understanding of this concept, as we know it. The idea basically being that you can render everything down to its simplest possible component, that everything that seems to be different things are actually expressions of one thing. Now we would like to take this a step further than your scientists have yet to do by explaining the idea in its most basic way.

Again, reiterating, that when we talk about the idea that everything is one thing, we mean it even unto the concept of what you call a single particle. Now we understand that the word ‘particle’ is just a euphemism. It is energy, it is consciousness, it can represent or express itself as a particle, as a wave, as energy, as mass, but for the sake of convenience in this conversation, we will use the concept ‘particle’, again, just to aid and assist you in your visualization. The idea therefore of understanding the Prime Radiant, and how everything is one, is to imagine that there is only one particle in existence. I don’t mean one kind of particle, I mean only one particle. That’s it. All of existence is made from the same one particle. In the ultimate time sharing plan.

What do we mean by that? I will explain. And we will explain with a beautiful demonstration. Now, as you can already see, there are on either side of the channel’s body two round crystals. For now assume there is only one. Only one (one crystal illuminated). This is the particle, the one particle that exists, the only one. Now, if that particle does not really have mass, because there is nothing else, nothing to interact with, no gravity in a sense, nothing else, just that particle, no real space. It has no mass, it can really move in any way it wants to. It can move beyond the speed of light, in fact its speed, again a euphemism, can really be infinite. It can move anywhere it wants as fast as it wants.

So the idea is let us say: this particle decided to move from here to here. Now, there it is (the other crystal illuminated). Now you say, ‘well, it’s over there’. Now, let’s say it is moving here and there and there and here and back and forth and the idea is that because it can move at infinite speed, you can start moving back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth. As it moves back and forth, and as it does so at infinite speed you can ramp up the speed, back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, faster, faster, faster, faster, faster, faster, faster until it is going back and forth so quickly, it appears to be in two places at once. Do you see this? (two crystals illuminated)

It is actually going back and forth, but it appears to be two places at once. But what this appears like to you in your physical reality, is it appears like two particles. It’s not. It’s the same particle. The idea therefore to expand this notion is that if you imagine that this single particle can move at infinite speed, what that means is it can be everywhere at the same time, appearing as if it is a multitude of particles when in fact it’s all the same one particle, moving back and forth in an intricate pattern, an intricate geometric pattern of consciousness that thus then makes it appear that the universe is full of different particles, different atoms, different things.

But every single thing, every star, every galaxy, every rock, every being, every atom, every subatomic particle are all made out of the same one particle. So when we talk about the idea of everything being one, not only is it meant spiritually and energetically, it is literally meant physically as well. When this particle crosses its own path in this incredibly beautiful and complex geometric pattern, when it crosses its own path it reinforces itself, it becomes denser and denser and denser and denser. It has something now to interact with: itself on a different path. And as it interacts with itself more and more often on many different paths in many different perspectives it becomes denser, denser, denser, denser and forms the different states of reality from higher dimensions to physical reality.

But it's all the same, it's all made out of the same one thing literally. The idea then is to really understand that as you hold on to this visual, as you replay this in your imagination and as you then look at any one or any thing in your reality, allow yourself to expand this visual image you have now been given today in such a way bit by bit at whatever pace is comfortable for you that when you, let's say you're sitting in front of a rock, or sitting in front of another person, however you wish to do it, that you in your imagination allow yourself to begin to see, in your mind's eye this one single particle going back and forth, back and forth, back and forth, so quickly that you see it actually building up all of the different atoms in you and in the other object or person you are looking at. Back and forth until you are both flickering so fast that it appears that you are actually two solid things.

The more you practice this visualization the more you will begin to actually identify with more and more things in creation because you will truly understand you are actually all made out of the same one thing. And as you begin to do this and as you begin to practice this more and more in a relaxed state, in an open state and really breathe this in and make it your own, however you wish to do it, then you will begin to see other effects begin to happen in your life. You will start to unlock your point of view on existence, on creation, on physical reality.

You will start to experience different kinds of things. You may suddenly have a sensation that nothing around you is real. It may suddenly look very flat like what you call a fake movie set. It may on the other hand suddenly begin to glow more brightly. It may take on all sorts of different qualities. But what all of those effects simply mean is you are starting to see, truly see with the inner eye, the inner sight, truly see the universe for what it is, the multiverse for what it is, creation for what it is: one and the same thing, that only exists now. And that all things coexist simultaneously.

You will begin to expand this ability out and out and out and out to begin to include more and more and more of all the things in creation. When you look at the stars, you will then know, you will then feel and know that all of the atoms in that star are all made out of the same one particle you are made of. Literally, literally, literally. Now we will get into different aspects of this realization a little bit later on as well.' (Bashar's Lab, 2008)

What are thoughts? - The Prime Radiant

Bashar: 'Thoughts are consciousness and in that sense consciousness is the particle, is what creates the particle. Thoughts are the particle moving in a certain pattern, within the matrix that makes you up. So thought in a sense is a side effect from consciousness experiencing itself in a certain geometric pattern that the particle takes in making you up.' (Bashar's Lab, 2008),

What is Consciousness?

Bashar: 'You have been exploring the idea of consciousness, so let us take the idea a little bit further. What exactly is consciousness? Well, it is self-awareness, self-reflection. In order for you to know that you are you, you have to have something else to compare it to. Without a concept of 'an other' you would not have a concept of self. Therefore, consciousness is literally self-reflection, self-awareness, the ability to know the self by knowing what is not the self. The idea is as we have described from time to time that existence is one unbroken thing. There is an aspect or a form or a version of existence that we call the 'One', for convenience, that does not know itself. It is completely homogenous in a sense that there is nothing else but it. Therefore, there is absolutely no reference point for it. Therefore, it has no sense of self, no experience, no self-awareness whatsoever.

But there is also the version of existence that does know itself. And that is what we term for convenience 'All-that-is'. It is literally the existence that is aware of itself, because it creates within itself a kind of reflective pattern of resonance of energy, and therefore creates 'otherness' within itself, a reflection of itself. And therefore it can know itself that way by comparing the reflection of itself to itself, and become self-aware. Those reflections continue to reverberate on and on and on and on, infinitely, and each and every one of those reflections then is literally all that exists within All-that-is, all that All-that-is is made of, all of you, all of us, everything you can imagine is a reflection of existence knowing itself through All-that-is.

So consciousness - very importantly - requires the concept of otherness within existence in order to know itself. And life experiences and time and space and all that you ever experienced, experience now or will experience is the product of All-that-is knowing itself in all the ways that it can. Every single thing, every single being, every single concept within existence are all the different eyes of God if you wanna put it that way through which it sees itself in those reflections. But because it is actually consciousness itself because it is consciousness of itself, then all the reflections are also made of that consciousness, all the reflections are conscious too, such as all of you, all of us, everything.

Now everything may not express the idea of self-aware consciousness in the that way that you do, but everything is still an expression of self-aware reflected consciousness. Even a rock has some degree of awareness that it is this rock and not that rock. But it may do that through a being such as yourself, by you noticing that there is this rock and this rock you are including the idea of your reflection of consciousness in such a way that the rock can know itself through your perception. Even though it may not know itself exactly in the way that you do it is still on some level aware that it is its own rock.

So consciousness is everything, is everywhere and you can experience it in a number of different ways, if you get more aware of nature, more aware of All-that-is, more aware of different parallel realities and dimensions, different aspects of imagination and creativity, because there can not be anything that you can imagine that is not somehow part of All-that-is. Existence is what it is. It is in no way, shape or form subject to anything, because everything exists within existence. Time and space are subject to existence, existence is not subject to time and space. Existence just has one quality: it just is. That's its nature. It is, and therefore non-existence is not something that existence can become. Non-existence has its own quality, it is that which does not exist. Therefore by definition non-existence doesn't exist.

Therefore, everything that you experience is part of existence on some level real unto itself, a reflection of All-that-is experiencing itself in all the ways that it can and expanding and expanding and expanding in infinite reflections to allow for the expansion of All-that-is knowing itself. Now the structure of existence never changes, that is fixed. It is a definitive reflective structure. What changes, what expands are all the different viewpoints, experiences and perspectives of the structure that never changes. So it is both changing and unchanging. Again, exhibiting that paradox of that which does not know itself and that which does.

And this is why it all comes down to that ancient idea you have heard on your planet for thousands of years as to why it is so important to 'know thyself'. Because the idea is as you know more and more and more of who and what you are as an expression and a reflection of the infinite, of All-that-is you experience more of being All-that-is as the aspect, as the reflection of All-that-is that each and every single one of you is. Is this making some sense? Alright.

So, remember that this is why we say that the point of power is in paradox, somewhere in between what appear to be two polar opposites: that which does not know itself – that which does, is in a sense the truth of existence itself. Because everything issues from that centre point and demonstrates very clearly that even though sometimes we know you think of existence as a duality, positive and negative, it is in fact actually a trinity, because there is always a balance point in the centre. And therefore being in that balance point, being in that state of being is always the state of being that will allow you the best possible way to know yourself, the best possible way to receive more of the reflection of yourself and as you expand and expand your perspective and expand your experience of All-that-is from your unique point of view you then become more and more in all ways who you truly are which is: All-that-is.

But you have decided here and now to play the game for a while of forgetting who you are because you need to forget who you are in order to remember who you are from a new point of view. You have to wipe the slate clean in order to have a truly new experience, because if you exist only in a timeless state, there is no change, there is no growth, there is no discovery. So you play the game of imposing on yourself these kinds of blinders to forget that you are in fact infinite, to forget that you are in fact eternal, to forget that you are in fact All-that-is, so you can play the game of not being All-that-is and explore and discover new perspectives of yourself and that's what allows All-that-is to grow and expand forever and ever and ever.

It never ends. Never ever ever. You have ideas on your planet that you call such things as blending with God....`well when I blend with God I guess that's it' – no. Because as you blend with God, what you actually experience is that you are God. There is nothing but you. And this is what each and every one of you can experience, because it's holographic in nature, it's holographic in structure. And therefore just because you might suddenly experience yourself as All-that-is doesn't mean it's necessarily finished. Because you can experience yourself as All-that-is from one perspective, experience yourself as All-that-is from another perspective, and on and on and on and on and on and on. The ring has no beginning, the ring has no end. Existence just is and it is always, always, always becoming and being simultaneously. Again the paradox shows its head.

In light of the idea now that you may have a bit of a reflection of the idea of consciousness being a reflection, being a sense of self based on the sense that there is an other that seems, that appears to not be you – of course it is – but appears not to be you, you have a sense of that game of existence that it plays with itself to awaken itself to new understandings of exactly what it is. Does this seem to be somewhat helpful? Alright. Just absorb it in your own way, doesn't matter how you interpret this, it's your own journey, your own path. You are your own reflection, you are your own representation of All-that-is and without your unique perspective All-that-is couldn't be All-that-is.

So always please remember, you are valid, you are valuable, because if you weren't needed believe me, you wouldn't exist. Because All-that-is doesn't make mistakes. So the fact that you exist is validation enough to prove that All-that-is needs your unique perspective, your unique reflection, your unique experience in order for it to actually be All-that-it-can-be.' (The Structure of Existence, 2017)

Frames for creating the illusion of motion and time in non-physical and physical realities

Q.: `You have mentioned the subject of time this weekend several times. I wanna revisit the question that was asked last night about the concept of frequency and the fact that it is a function of time. And I wanna get into some more detail about them. Now I have been aware for thirty-somewhat years that our experience of physical reality is a sequential focusing of our attention on a sequence of different universes. If I am understanding correctly very much in a way that motion picture film is a sequence of still frames?’

Bashar: ‘This is of course all still an analogy. But it will do as a representative one with regard to the third-dimensional space-time matrix, yes.’

Q.: ‘I am speaking specifically of physical reality.’

Bashar: ‘Yes, I know.’

Q.: ‘And within this context it would mean that within the idea of an infinitude of different universes and different realities and different dimensions is the idea that when we experience movement, what we are actually experiencing is instantaneous shifts from one physical reality, from one dimension to another one that is very, very close in structure.’

Bashar: ‘Yes.’

Q.: ‘And going through a whole series of these is like a series of frames in a motion picture?’

Bashar: ‘Correct’

Q.: ‘Gives the illusion of motion.’

Bashar: ‘Yes’

Q.: ‘And that motion gives the illusion of time.’

Bashar: ‘Yes.’

Q.: ‘Because we do it at a very deliberate pace, especially when we have a clock that is measuring us, that movement of a clock really establishes the standard of time.’

Bashar: ‘Yes, yes.’

Q.: ‘So am I correct in my understanding that each of these frames of physical reality is essentially static?’

Bashar: ‘Yes.’

Q.: ‘Ok, and this gets back to the change and no change idea that we were talking about earlier.’

Bashar: ‘Yes.’

Q.: ‘Everything is change, but there is no change.’

Bashar: ‘Correct.’

Q.: ‘So each of these physical realities is static?’

Bashar: ‘Yes.’

Q.: 'And now let's bring in the idea of frequency. Frequency is vibrations per unit of time.'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'But time is the illusion of motion which is a shifting from one dimension to the next and I am wondering exactly how frequency relates to that shifting from one dimension.'

Bashar: 'The frequency that you create in your consciousness when you create the illusion of time is what determines exactly which frames fall into the slot that give you your sense of continuity. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'I didn't totally get it.'

Bashar: 'All right. The idea is that you create in your consciousness the illusion of time by creating the concept of frequency. In doing so, once you have created that, it then determines which of the static sequence of parallel realities you actually experience as your continuity of motion. Because, let's just say again, even though I understand that there may be shortcomings in third-dimensional language to express this, let's say you choose to operate on a certain frequency within your consciousness. By establishing that frequency, by setting up that illusion of time and frequency you might choose every third frame, or every second frame, or every fifth frame as your expression of change in space. So the frequency at which you operate determines exactly how you experience the idea of the continuity of motion, which frames are represented in that sense.'

Q.: 'Would a higher frequency be a skipping of more frames?'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'But there is not really a skipping of frames?'

Bashar: 'No, not really.'

Q.: 'It's just that those frames that you are 'skipping' just aren't part of that motion picture of your existence.'

Bashar: 'Correct.'

Q.: 'Now let's get into the idea of frequency of non-physical beings. Because I understand that they also experience or express a frequency.'

Bashar: 'To some degree, yes.'

Q.: 'If they are not experiencing or not focused in physical reality and we have been talking about frequency of, progression of, attention on frames in physical reality, is there...'

Bashar: 'There are frames of non-physical reality, too. They are just of a different quality.'

Q.: 'What would distinguish the quality that they experience from the quality we experience?'

Bashar: 'It would be similar to the analogy perhaps of having double exposures in each frame, so that you can actually focus on one thing or another in any frame, it's not quite so structured, not quite so limited.'

Q.: 'Ok, let me bring into the discussion another technological analogy. Our motion picture film is a series of frames connected together in a sequence and you can actually cut these.'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'But we have now non-linear editing in electronic things where you can put the frames together in any way you want. Almost go random and go pick frames.'

Bashar: 'And this is also a quality of the frames in non-physical reality.'

Q.: 'Ok, and this is what I am thinking. What you're describing sounds to my like the non-linear editing approach.'

Bashar: 'So you could say physical reality is more linear based and non-physical reality is more non-linear based, even though they are both using frames.'

Q.: 'Ok. So then getting back to the concept of frequency. Both physicals and non-physicals experience or express the idea of frequency. The non-physicals at the higher frequency...does it mean that they are experiencing the frames of reality at a higher rate?'

Bashar: 'It doesn't always mean that, although they can. What it really is more like is the concept of high definition that now exists in your reality. There is more information per frame that they can access.'

Q.: 'Ok, and I am getting that they are probably looking at a lot of different frames at the same time.'

Bashar: 'Yes. Which constitutes the idea of double exposed frames or multiply exposed frames from their point of view.'

Q.: 'Ok, I was thinking more like a bank of television sets.'

Bashar: 'Any analogy will work.'

Q.: 'The fact that there is a sequentialness to it implies that there is a kind of fundamental idea of time that doesn't necessarily...is not rigid for the non-physicals, it's more rigid for the physicals.'

Bashar: 'Remember that: anything, anything aside from the 'One' must experience some degree of what you're talking about or it wouldn't be represented as different from the 'One'.

Q.: 'Thank you. That totally clarifies that whole thing.'

Bashar: 'It's just a matter of degree.'

Q.: 'And in physical reality, at least in our physical reality at this point in time, our time is highly structured and very standardized except for people who are wafting out of it...'

Bashar: 'Yes. That's what the idea of the increase of your frequency is all about, is you're starting to exist in that quasi planer reality that is shifting dimensionalities and gives you more access to more information per frame.'

Q.: 'Ok, now relating this to your experience in your reality. I understand that you move around, you may walk from your control chair to the door of your spacecraft. So you are experiencing time also?'

Bashar: 'To some degree, yes. Although we have more facility with allowing it to be more flexible.'

Q.: 'I understand, but if you are actually walking from your chair to the door that is an experience of time and also in the next instant you may be down on the surface of your planet and then back up two instants later.'

Bashar: 'Yes.'

Q.: 'There is a sense of time, there is actually movement and you can observe movement, people walking around on your planet.'

Bashar: 'Yes, we understand it enough to be able to relate to your sense of time. And it is a realm that we ourselves have at least to some degree also come up through. We were in that sense more structured in the beginning of our evolution than we are now.'

Q.: 'Were you ever as structured or at least standardized in your experience of time as we are?'

Bashar: 'No, we were created to be less standardized to begin with.' (A Matter of Faith – Intensive, 2007)

Shifting (collapsing and expanding) billions of times per second – and perceiving 60 flickers, 300 flickers, 1000 flickers per second

Bashar: 'The idea thus is that if you wish to really see that you are manifesting immediately and automatically, then you have to create a larger degree of difference from one parallel reality to the next and that's where the true magic of manifestation comes in. Because when you start to understand that the next parallel reality can really be defined in any way, shape, or form that you want it to be, then you can really start creating new definitions, new configurations that are very different from the reality that you had a moment ago and you will start seeing things happening that you would describe then as miraculous or magical. Because that's all miracles are, is simply a greater shift from one parallel reality to another in terms of their configuration so that you can actually see the difference between them in a much more outstanding way.

So the idea is to begin to wrap your mind around the notion, begin to feel that really you are already travelling through parallel realities with ease, effortlessly, by your very nature - this is what you do. And as you begin to allow yourself more opportunity to act on your highest joy which thus then makes you a magnet for the kinds of ideas, the kinds of realities, the kinds of definitions you say you prefer, you will begin to allow yourself as that attractive antenna, as that attractive magnet to pull to you in a sense those configurations of parallel realities that are more in keeping and more reflective with what you say you're putting out.

Because that is the law: what you put out is what you get back - simple as that. So the idea is to begin in whatever way, shape, or form works for you within your imagination, whether it be through meditation, whether it be through some sort of activity to begin to allow yourself to play with this notion that billions of parallel realities are passing through the projecton beam of your consciousness every second. Now for those of you a little more scientifically minded – because we can hear some individuals going: what is exactly the rate at which these parallel realities are actually shifting – and in fact your scientists actually already know what the rate is but they don't actually know that what they have labeled as the rate actually is the rate of shifting. They call it Planck time.

For those who are familiar, the idea is, there is in your scientific nomenclature a thing called Planck length which is very, very, very, very, very, very, very, very, very small. You wanna know how small? If you take what you call in your reality an atom, one atom, and you wish to measure the diameter of that atom, now you all know an atom is very small, yes? If you wanna measure the diameter of that atom in Planck lengths, so many Planck lengths, and you did it by measuring one Planck length every second, the amount of time it would take you to go from one side of the atom to the other would be ten million times fourteen billion. That's how small a Planck length is.

So, Planck time is the amount of time it takes for light to travel one Planck length. So that is a very small increment of time. That is the rate at which parallel realities per second are going through you and your consciousness. That's why you don't notice it. It's a very seemingly smooth and unbroken rate of shifting. But the idea is that is the rate for the entirety of what we call spirit reality and physical reality. It encompasses all dimensions, all realities, all expressions of parallel realities of any kind. Physical reality is obviously not flickering in a sense, or you are not perceiving that many flickers.

In physical reality, generally speaking, you are perceiving roughly, roughly, on average about 60 flickers per second. That's it. That's it. Compared to billions and billions and billions and billions of flickers in that same second that represents all of the other rest of creation and realities you are not perceiving. Obviously you can expand that window a little bit. There is a little room for growth. And that is what we are here to talk about, and that is what we are here to play with. The idea being that you will find that even within your physical reality as you go from what you call 3rd density awareness to 4th density awareness, you will generally find that you will be expanding this rate of ability to perceive the flickers from the average that exists now of about 60, shall we say, frames per second to an average of about 300 frames per second with some people capable of attaining about a thousand frames per second.

Still not a lot compared to billions and billions and billions. Nevertheless it will allow you to perceive quite a bit more than you're perceiving now, allow quite a bit more synchronicity, quite a bit more miraculous and magical manifestations to automatically occur in your life, just with that little bit of a stretch, you will be able to experience quite a bit more.' (Shifting Through Infinity, 2010)

Resonance and Reflection (I/II)

Bashar: 'We would like to begin this transmission this day of your time with the following idea which we have entitled 'Resonance and Reflection'. The idea we have discussed many times of course is that everything is about resonance, vibration, frequency of consciousness, frequency of energy. There is of course in creation, fundamentally, only one thing: 'All-that-is', the 'One'. But the idea is that it can create itself to be, to appear as, to experience itself as many different things by creating different frequencies within its consciousness, different vibrations, different wave forms, within its consciousness and these different wave forms, these different signature vibrations thus then create the experience within All-that-is of many different things.

In a sense, thus then, all of you, all of us, all beings in creation are all the different ways that creation has of interacting with itself, of experiencing itself, of reflecting itself to itself from an infinite number of points of view, in order to experience all that it is from every different possible direction, from every different possible perspective. The idea here though in the diagrams that you have all been handed is that this illustration represents the level that you call the concept of physical reality and how you actually create that idea, that experience with your consciousness, with your particular unique aspect of 'All-that-is'.

You will see on the diagram that there is the idea of course that everything starts with the central source, the dot at the center. We will skip many different levels in this particular diagram, just to simplify this illustration for the purposes of what we are speaking of this day of your time. So let us jump right from the source to the idea that the first circle is what you might euphemistically call your individual soul, your spirit per se. Of course as we have described previously, the idea is that the soul being a split-off from what might be called the oversoul which is a collection of all sorts of different unique soul experiences that can have many different incarnations simultaneously in what you call the physical reality experience, the soul in a sense is analogous to unfired clay.

You create the unique soul for the unique journey, for the unique experience of the person that you will create yourself to be incarnationally, but it doesn't really become a spirit that is unique to that persona until you have actually fed that soul the experience of your life. So the experience you're having in physical reality is like taking the unfired clay and shaping it into a particular utensil, firing it and thus creating the ceramic, the hard glissening clear ceramic that thus then becomes the spirit that is unique, a unique expression of the experience had in that particular life time as a physical being. But the idea here is that as this soul/spirit thus then in a sense receives waveforms, information, energy from the central source of All-that-is, in having the desire, in choosing the experience of physical reality, it will create a physical mind, a physical personality that we have likened to the idea of a three-sided prism, hence the representation of the triangle which represents the physical mind, the filter so to speak through which the soul or spirit will express itself in the physical experience.

This triangle, this prism breaks down the unbroken white light of the source into the various frequencies that are representative of the physical mind which are the belief systems or definitions, the blueprint in a sense of your physical reality, the emotions, which in a sense is the activation energy, e-motion: energy - motion of your physical reality manifestation, and the thought patterns and behaviors in a sense that also go hand in hand and are reflective of those emotions and those belief systems/definitions, thus creating the person, the behavior, the expression in physical terms that is created to experience, to have the experience, what you might call the ego-structure which is created to have the focus that keeps you focused in physical reality experience so you can feed that physical reality experience back to the soul or spirit and it can grow from that experience having this unique adventure in what you call physical reality.

But we have also talked about the idea that in order to be a complete person in physical reality it requires not only the physical mind but what in a sense is created to remain in non-physical reality which we have termed on your planet the higher mind, which thus then by being balanced in relationship with the physical mind allows you to function in a balanced relationship as a whole person in your physical reality experience, in your physical reality adventure. But the idea is that this higher mind serves many particular functions, many specific functions and we have spoken in the past of many of these functions and many of these relationships of the higher mind and the physical mind. But now we will allow you to understand, now we will share with you one more specific function that the higher mind has that we have not really discussed before.

However we have mentioned this idea in general many times, though we have not discussed it or spoken of it specifically. And it comes from the idea that we have talked about that when you create this physical persona and when you create the emotions and the beliefs and the thought patterns and behaviors to be of a certain content, a certain frequency that that determines utterly the reality experience you have that you call physical. Because we have said many times that physical reality is like a mirror, it's a reflection. And in a sense it's not really that there is anything 'out there', there really is no physical reality 'out there', that's an illusion.

But it functions like a mirror so that you have a feed-back mechanism, a reflection to let you know that the reality you are experiencing is absolutely reflective of the belief systems, the emotions and the thought patterns, the behaviors, that you have arranged the frequencies of those things that you have created in your physical personality. So that the outer idea, the outer reality or the appearance of the outer reality acts as a guidepost, acts as a marker, acts as a signpost for what it is you are choosing to believe is true. Because what you believe is true is what you are putting out as a vibration and what you put out as a vibration is what is reflected back to you by the physical reality in any number of symbolic and representative ways.

As we have said, physical reality is very much literally like a mirror. And you know that when you see a reflection in a mirror that if you have a frown on your face you know you don't go over to the mirror and try to change the expression on the face of the reflection. You know that will never work. There is not really anything over there, that's not really you 'out there', that's an illusion, it's a reflection. But you know that if you change the frown on your face to a smile you will also know that the reflection will have absolutely no choice but to smile back. But you have to smile first, you cannot wait for the reflection to smile before you do, before you decide to be happy. If you decide to be happy the reflection will reflect that back. But as we have for many, many, many years now talked about the idea that physical reality is a reflection, it seems very interesting that none of you have actually asked: 'Bashar - yes - what is actually doing the reflecting?', oh, that's a very interesting question, because if there is really nothing 'out there' what is actually reflecting back these experiences to us, that is also a very good question.

What is reflecting back is your higher mind. Your higher mind in a sense vibrationally creates the effect of wrapping or surrounding or encasing or immersing your physical personality in a bubble of energy, a frequency, a particular frequency that allows the higher mind to actually function as a reflective surface, as a mirror. The higher mind mirror is what is actually reflecting the vibration of the personality structure back to itself in order to get the experience you call physical reality and makes it seem by the particular frequency that it is operating on, by the particular signature vibration it is actually operating on, makes it seem as if that reflection is actually outside of you when in fact all of that is actually going on inside your consciousness.' (t.b.c'd.)

'Resonance And Reflection', official handout:

https://d11n7da8rpqbjy.cloudfront.net/basharet/1846_1708989103654Resonance_Reflection.pdf?kuid=5f1b1c89-a3ab-4ce5-b41d-a4d209cb4387-1754411523&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

Resonance and Reflection (II/II)

Bashar: 'But the higher mind, by using, by choosing that particular frequency, by being designed that way makes it appear as if, creates the illusion in your consciousness that everything is actually being projected around you holographically. That's why it is an illusion. But it is the higher mind that actually functions as the reflective mirror for you, within your consciousness, within the overall make-up of your signature vibration. One aspect, one of the equations in that overall signature vibration is the specific frequency of the higher mind acting as a mirror, so that you can have this physical reality reflection experience that you think is so solid, but is not solid at all.

And this is why you can always use the idea of your outer reality to gauge what you are creating your personality to be, because if you see this simple diagram as a circuit in a sense with the energy coming from the source through your soul, through the filter of your personality and then going through the idea of that vibration of the higher mind mirror and being reflected back to you what it is that your personality is experiencing, whether it is in balance, out of balance, whether it is in alignment with your true core source self or out of alignment, whether it is in alignment creating joy, love, creativity, excitement, passion, or whether it is out of alignment creating fear, doubt, lack of self-worth issues, anger, all these ideas.

Because that's all it is, it's simply a filter, filtering your energy and by the experiences you have reflecting to you whether you are holding on to beliefs and blueprints that are out of alignment with that core essence or in alignment with that core essence. So you always have this gauge, you always have this way of telling exactly where you are on your own path which is you, because you are a path, and thus then you can use the higher mind this way and be in relation with the higher mind this way to know that it is always constantly feeding back to you what it is you are giving off. Very precisely in a variety of ways.

Now of course as we have said that does not mean that every single situation is always interpreted as a - shall we say - exact mirror image or an exact echo. But the idea is that anything that's happening in your reality has some degree of relevance for you or it would be happening to someone else. When you interact with someone else and you create your version of them in your reality and they create their version of you in their reality in order to have the experience of that interaction in physical reality you are both also getting the reflections from your source through your physical personality filters to the higher mind mirror and getting that reflection back to each other and that reflection contains your version of the other person as part of the overall equation being reflected back to you, as part of the overall vibration being reflected back to you and that's why when you interact with someone else, it's also an indication to varying degrees depending on the reason for the interaction, it's also an indication of something you need to learn about yourself as well as for the other person needing to learn something about themselves.

Because all you are actually seeing is a reflection of yourself taking their form in a sense. This doesn't discount the existence of the other consciousness, of the other being, but the idea is that you're creating your version of them out of your own energy, in your own reflection, in your own reality. And thus it's always colored in a sense by your filtering system, by what it is that that person represents to you as you are always colored by what you represent to the other person. So in that sense you are always interacting, even when you are interacting with another being, you're always interacting not only with that other being but always with a reflection, an aspect, a perspective, a point of view of yourself.

And it is up to you to have the discernment to recognize what is being related to you, what is relevant in this interaction that will allow you to become more aware of more of who you are as that being as that fuller being, that greater being that more aligned, harmonious creative, loving, passionate being. Every relationship is for the purpose of everyone in the relationship helping the other people in the relationship learn more about who they are and grow in that way. You always give others an opportunity to learn more about themselves as you give others an opportunity to learn more about themselves by using this reflective modality, by using this personality construct reflection device.

The idea therefore is, allow yourself in your own timing, in your own comfort zone at your own pace to use this diagram, to ponder this diagram to understand the idea of the filtration that goes on in your personality structure, the prism of your three-sided personality structure and seeing that it goes out to the higher mind which then feeds it back to you, echoes it back to you as a reflection that always gives you the opportunity to know you are constantly in communication with your higher mind, you are never cut off from the higher mind. If you were, everything around you would be absolutely, utterly gone, utterly blank. Your physical reality reflection is itself therefore a communication, constant communication from the higher mind mirror, always reflecting back to you exactly what state you're in and always giving you an opportunity to decide whether that state is what you prefer or whether you wish to change it.

You have a constant automatic feed-back guidance mechanism from the higher mind, this diagram shows you exactly how it works in terms of your linear structure of space-time, but it is all going on, all of it, within your own consciousness, there is nothing outside. So you in that sense have always got the opportunity to understand, to feel that vibration, to - shall we say - balance it out, to use that reflection to guide you to align with what it is you prefer. To let go of what it is you don't prefer that doesn't work for you and to move forward in your life and expand in your life stronger, stronger and stronger in order to fire that unfired clay of the soul into the beautiful ceramic spirit that will to the best of its ability be representative of the great, great joy of you experiencing the ecstasy of being your fullest possible self in your physical reality experience.

Because that transformation from the soul to spirit in a sense is what this journey and adventure is all about. And that's why the process is the destination, that's the point. You, each and every one of you have exactly the same purpose, the same mission in life. It can be expressed in an infinite number of different ways, unique ways, but you all have the same purpose and the same mission, and that is to be yourself as fully as you can because that is who you were made to be and you are the unique aspect, a unique facet of creation that you were created to be and without you, without your unique difference All-that-is cannot be all that is.' (Resonance and Reflection, 2012)

Collapsing + expanding = shifting: your own physical 'Big Bang' over and over again

Bashar: 'Now that we have established the idea of this format of the nine levels of consciousness immediately relevant to your experience of physical reality, allow us to explain a little bit more clearly in a little bit more detail how this works in a variety of contexts. But specifically with respect to the idea of how you shift from parallel reality to parallel reality as we said, billions of times a second, with respect to the idea of these energy levels you are in a sense collapsing yourself over and over and over again and then expanding yourself over and over and over again.

When you collapse yourself you will usually find that there is a balance point that has been chosen, either somewhere in the template level reality or even sometimes within the belief system level, the first level of physical conscious experience and within either of these two levels will be where the entirety of your physical personality and the entirety of your higher mind will collapse – in a sense – to a point, becoming in a sense homogenous for a moment, still containing all the potential vibrations of all the different ideas, the different levels, but in some sense becoming so collapsed that it becomes a neutral point of energy.

No personality, no higher mind, no distinction, no differentiation, all one neutral experience. Then based on the idea of the direction of the overall intention of the spirit and the soul, it will give guidance - so to speak - as a vibration so that when that neutral point expands, once again, in a kind of a miniature Big Bang, back out into the differentiated levels of consciousness, higher mind, template reality, physical mind, broken down into beliefs, conscious, unconscious, subconscious, the lower levels remain on their own a different kind of level, not part of the collapse, so to speak, they remain as a kind of a guiding system to allow you to always re-anchor vibrationally to what you perceive to be the 'same reality'.

This is where the concept of continuity comes in that makes you think you are always in the same reality moment to moment to moment, and always comes in on those lower 9th level agreement collective consciousness vibrational frequency level, so that remains also as another guiding rail for you to re-anchor yourself, re-establish yourself. But the idea of the 8th level to some degree, 7th, 6th, 5th and the 4th level of the template, and in that sense the 3rd level of the higher mind, all collapse down to this neutral point and then expand back out as the new experience, the new person, in the new parallel reality.

And this collapse and expansion happens as we said, billions of times per second, billions of times per second. You are collapsing into neutrality and expanding into specificity again and again and again and again and again. So there is always, always in between the experience of what you consider to be one moment and the next, always a moment, a period of neutrality, of absolute neutrality, where you are experiencing only that.

This is the neutral point from which all of your change takes place as you guide it with the idea of whatever your belief system may be at that moment, whatever you have laid out on the template reality, when you collapse at each moment, takes its cue from all those vibrations, re-patterning itself, based on the guidance of the individual spirit and soul and the collective consciousness rails. It's like you function between these two rails of energy, collapsing in the center, expanding out, reconnecting, collapsing in the center, expanding out and re-connecting to those two rails, anchoring you to the physical experience, connecting you to the idea of your spirit, your soul, which connects you to the oversoul.

And through these billions and billions and billions of collapses into the neutral point do you always give yourself the opportunity to transform from one reality totally to another totally. Only by creating that neutral point is it possible to experience any kind of change. So it can give you a very strong clue that if you experience any kind of change at all, including a change that seems to be as small as 'this' (slight finger movement) or 'this' in order to experience that you must be collapsing down to that neutral point. So you always have the ability to tap into and draw from that place of neutrality. You are never stuck in any kind of pattern, whatsoever. Because every change is a total change and this is why it is a total change because you are always going back to the absolute point of neutrality that erases any vibration that was there before and instills a new vibration in totality upon your expansion.

So you are going to experience that next moment, next moment, next moment, next moment, next moment, next moment, which again, is all the same moment but from a different point of view, but allows you to experience all those different points of view only because you actually collapse to a moment of total neutrality. So you are always unlocking, you are never stuck. It is your very nature to unlock and re-connect. That's how you experience the framework of any kind of dimensional reality.

This should also begin to give you some insight as to how magnificent your consciousness is as a total being, of the aspect of All-that-is that you are as a creator in that you do this billions of times per second. That you are always absolutely creating a new Big Bang every single, billions of a second, with respect to your relationship to your physical experience. It's the Big Bang, over and over again, constantly, eternally, infinitely, in all directions. This is how powerful you are. This is how expansive you are. This is how infinite you are. And you don't even know it from this level, so fluid, so flawless, so effortless is the creation, is the collapse and the expansion, so many times per second, it is seamless to your senses.

But you are doing it right now, over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over and over again. Even in the course of this transmission there have literally been the experiences of billions upon billions upon billions upon billions of reality shifts. You are not where you began, none of you are. None of you are the same people that began. None of you are. This transmission has been a series of transmissions in a series of parallel realities. It isn't one.

Continuity is your illusion, created from that 9th level of collective agreement that you will experience this idea called continuity to make it seem as if you are experiencing small changes in one reality, when in fact you are experiencing titanic changes through an infinite number of realities. So expansive are you as a creator within All-that-is. Allow yourself now to really begin to visualize and imagine this collapsing to the neutral point and expansion to a completely new parallel reality and collapsing again to a neutral point and expanding again to a completely different parallel reality.’ (Nine Levels of Consciousness, 2011)

‘The 9 Levels of Consciousness’ – official handout:

https://d11n7da8rpqbjy.cloudfront.net/basharet/1824_17089885180499_Levels_of_Consciousness.pdf?kuid=5f1b1c89-a3ab-4ce5-b41d-a4d209cb4387-1754411523&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

You are creating your own YOU-niverse

Q.: ‘So I am the only one here?’

Bashar: ‘Yes. What appears to be a common reality actually isn’t. It’s an agreement between different consciousnesses to each experience a similar reality but only to a point. But each of you are experiencing literally your own reality and to further that illustration, how many ever you are in the room you are in, you are actually each in a different room. You are actually each in a different YOU-niverse.’ (A Third Reality, 2007)

Technicalities about shifting from universe 813 to 814 - ‘I-Am-Ness’ - Version(s) of You

Q.: ‘If I were to see myself as me living in Universe number 813 and then when I change I’m still me from Universe 813 but I’ve moved to Universe 814, my questions are: what/who takes my place in Universe 813 and what was in my place in Universe number 814 before I got there?’

Bashar: ‘You are looking at this concept from a linear perspective, and that is why it seems confusing. The idea is to understand that from the level you’re talking about, it’s not you the personality. The idea is that it’s you, the bigger being that is now perceiving through more of yourself. Versions of you are still in 813, while versions of you are also in 814. It’s just that you’re shifting your perspective, your awareness in a way that isolates it, one universe at a time, the way you are presenting this. But you are actually experiencing your greater self through all of the universes simultaneously. So the concept of ‘shifting’ doesn’t mean that you’re leaving one universe and arriving in another. It means that you are simply becoming more aware of the fact that you occupy as the greater being all universes simultaneously and can choose how to perceive yourself and from what perspective to perceive yourself at any given moment. It doesn’t discount the idea that another version of you, another aspect of your greater being is still continuing to perceive itself from the idea of universe 812, or 813, while you are perceiving another aspect of yourself as universe 814. So it’s all going on simultaneously. You are not leaving one place and going to another. That’s just the way you experience it from a linear perspective.

Q.: ‘And the bottom line is that basically the consciousness that you perceive as being you is always perceiving itself as being the only one in a sense, looking through its own personality viewpoint.’

Bashar: ‘Yes. Remember the idea, taking it so to speak all the way up the ladder is the concept that many humans have of ‘blending with God’, ‘blending with Source’. It doesn’t mean you lose your identity, it means you see yourself as Source. So the idea is that Source perceives itself as all possible realities, all possible universes, simultaneously. So when you talk about the idea of ‘leaving one universe'and going to another, that's not what's really happening. You are just broadening your perspective to see another aspect of yourself from a higher perspective as from Source. So you understand that there is still going to be a part of you experiencing 813, while another part of you is experiencing 814. It's just that you can also choose to shift your focus or narrow your focus in a way that makes it seem as if you have shifted from one universe to another. But you are existing in all of them simultaneously.'

Q.: 'And that idea that circumstances don't matter, only state of being matters, that remaining focused on that idea regardless of what reality you're experiencing is the ticket to being able to shift to a more preferred physical experience.'

Bashar: 'Yes, in a sense. That's an offshoot of what we are talking about but not directly involved in what we were just explaining.'

Q.: 'Are there infinite possible variations of each frame?'

Bashar: 'Every single viewpoint, every single change, is an entirely different frame. So when you say: can one frame have multiple perspectives? No, another perspective is a different frame. So it's an infinite number of frames. Now an infinite number of frames may not be relevant for any particular physical life. That could only involve a finite number of frames that are relevant for that life. It doesn't mean an infinite number of frames don't exist. It just may be that the majority of them are not relevant to the finite number that is relevant for that particular life. But in terms of the way that you have 'framed' that question - pun intended - the idea is to understand that any variation whatsoever no matter how 'small' is a completely different frame. So it's not that one frame has multiple perspectives. Another perspective is another frame.' (In Two Worlds, 2023)

The Soul – the Ripples – the Film Strip

Bashar: 'We would like to introduce a deeper explanation of the concept of what we refer to as soul cycle, the cycle of the soul. So your title is 'Soul Cycle.' The idea being that in looking at the diagram that we have provided, you start as a soul. Imagine a sphere of light. Choosing to become physical or, in other words, to have a physical experience as we have outlined, is the product of the soul choosing specific paths, specific experiences, so the soul can grow, specific ideas, specific challenges. And this is done by creating certain patterns of energy within the soul. And these patterns of energy will allow part of the soul to render down bit by bit, collapsing down into the center of the Soul, as you see in the diagram. These vibrations and these specific frequencies, these specific vibrations, as they collapse down into the center, as they are focused into the center of the soul, first and foremost create the idea of the planning stage, the blueprint stage, the template stage, where you lay out vibrationally speaking all of the challenges, all of the themes that you are choosing to explore specifically for the soul's growth in what you refer to as this incarnation. So this is where you arrange and order from conversations with your guides, with soul family, so on and so forth, the beginning of condensing down into a kind of pattern that which represents the blueprint of the physical experience that you are choosing to have. It orders the idea of what the personality will be like, how you will approach things, and the way in which you will allow yourself to experience challenges, so that you can transform them and overcome them. And then as the vibrations continue to condense a part of the soul, remember the whole soul still stays there, that has not shrunk, but the condensation has happened within the soul, so that a part of the soul, some of the material, so to speak, of the soul, within the soul, is being condensed down by these vibrations, by these frequencies, that represent the soul's path in physical experience reality. And so as it continues to condense, now you're talking about arriving at the level where the soul is about to be born physically, through the physical processes that you experience in space and time, physical birth, and in that condensation the soul develops the connection, again, remains and retains the connection with the higher mind, which is what the soul is, but now you have a reference to the idea of becoming a physical focused being, but maintaining the connection to the soul, which you are now starting to refer to as the higher mind, the non-physical mind that remains in spirit so to speak, or remains its natural spirit self. Because even the physical body is still within spirit, because it's within the soul. It's just an arrangement of frequencies that allows you to experience the idea of physicality in a different way than you typically experience yourself as a spirit, as a soul. But the idea is that the body is still part of the spirit, part of the soul, it's just a different arrangement of it, a different focus within it.' (The Soul Cycle, 2024)

Bashar: 'Physical reality is not a place you go to, physical reality is in your soul. Your physical body doesn't have a soul, your soul has a physical body within it, at the center of its being. Physical body, physical experience is a focal point at the center of your soul, if you want to imagine your soul like a sphere of energy, an orb of light, then certain ripples and patterns and vibrations within the soul can concentrate something down to the center of the soul. The whole soul remains but at the center there's a concentration of vibrational frequencies that creates this little crystalline nugget that you call 'my physical self.' You are a focus within your soul, that's what your physical personality is, a focus within your soul. So the idea of 'reincarnation' is simply the expansion back to the soul and the refocusing of a different series of energy patterns that creates a different personality, but all that happens within the soul as if you're breathing in and out, in and out, in and out, in and out, within the soul. That's what physical reality is. So you're in spirit right now, so no reason to fear death because you're already dead.' (Open Contact - Part One, 2024)

Q.: 'Relationship between the soul sphere with the ripples and the film strip.'

Bashar: 'Well, that happens in physical reality. So, when you lay out a life path, then that is the film strip that we're referring to. It's about the life path you lay out as a physical experience that creates the analogy of the film strip.'

Q.: 'So in the sphere as a soul you don't have the film strip anymore?'

Bashar: 'As a soul you have access to all the frames in all the strips but it's not experienced in the same way that you experience it in physical reality. So it's more like a multitude of imagery, whereas in physical reality it coalesces into a linear strip.' (The Art of The Challenge, 2025)

(The Soul Cycle, 2024) pdf-handout depicting the ripples, patterns and vibrations:

<https://www.dropbox.com/home?preview=Soul+Cycle.pdf>

Question about math and the whole number theory

Bashar: 'Mathematics in our civilization is expressed as geometry, not equations that use numbers. So the idea for example is you have a principle that is expressed by an equation that you cannot observe the position or the momentum of a particle at the same time. You either measure the position, but then you don't know how fast it's moving because it's frozen, or you measure the momentum, but then you can't measure the position because it's moving. We express that as a geometric tetrahedral form, four-sided pyramid of equilateral triangles. You have the base triangle which represents position what you would call the x,y,z of position, and therefore because it's one triangle you can measure the position. Whereas the apex of the tetrahedron represents the time factor, the momentum factor, and since it's not connected to the base you can't have the momentum at the same time that you measure the position. But then if you measure the momentum, your momentum is then measured by the apex and two thirds, two points of the side equilateral triangle, so you don't have the entire position, but you do have the entire momentum. So it's expressed as a tetrahedral structure, geometrically. The idea of whole number theories, again, is that we work with different levels of infinities in certain ways that is not something that your humanity expresses at this time. So we are not sure how to translate that idea into what you are asking, because a lot of your mathematics shy away from the idea of infinities. But from our perspective, there are whole number infinities that are different from other whole number infinities.' (Open Contact Part One, 2024)

Are China's top leaders aware of the existence of extraterrestrials?

Q.: 'In China many communities on social media are also discussing open contact with extraterrestrial civilizations and everyone everyone is very enthusiastic about it. So my question is, are China's top leaders aware of the existence of extraterrestrials? And by 2027, will China actively promote plans for open contact with extraterrestrials?'

Bashar: 'Yes, they are aware of our existence. They will proceed with plans, though it may take a little while for them to be willing to absorb all that extraterrestrials present to humanity through open contact. But they will realize that over time they will have to. Because they do not want to be left behind technologically with all of the things that extraterrestrials are going to present to humanity. So there is a plan already in place to some degree. But yes, they are absolutely aware.' (The Art of the Challenge, 2025)

The Prime Radiant and the Big Bang

Q.: 'How does Bashar explain the Big Bang?'

Bashar: 'The idea is what we call or refer to in our ancient language as the Prime Radiant. The idea being that really fundamentally, now again this is just a euphemism in your language, this isn't meant to be absolutely literal, but it is the best analogy that can be translated into your language. Let us back up as you say. First of all your scientists, many of them, now understand that the so-called Big Bang is not necessarily the beginning of everything, it's just the beginning of your particular universe. But infinity is infinity, and there are many Big Bangs as you say, many cycles that occur within infinity, many universes what your scientists have come to understand as the multiverse. So really there are many Big Bangs.

But in terms of your particular universe and its so-called beginning, the idea is, again as an analogy, as an illustration: imagine if you will, that there is only one particle and nothing else. If you wish to represent this as simply a tiny subatomic particle floating in a big empty infinite black void that's all right, it will do for the purposes of the illustration even if that's not necessarily literally true. Now imagine that because there is only this one subatomic particle it has absolutely nothing else to relate to, so there really is no gravity, there really is no sense of mass, there is really no sense of space or time, it just exists as a point of pure existence.

Thus then it is capable of doing anything and everything imaginable. In other words, it can travel at infinite speed. Nothing holds it back, there are no laws of physics, yet. Thus if you understand that that single particle can travel throughout that void, that big infinite void at infinite speed, then that means that particle can actually appear to be everywhere at once. Thus it can actually appear to be an infinite number of particles, even though it's actually only one particle. That's the Big Bang.

Now, the pattern in which it did that, again as an analogy, similar to the pattern of lines you see on the holotape across the room. The idea is that it will create that infinite speed pathway in a kind of what you would call a geometrically radiating form. Where it doesn't cross its path it will be simply what you call, well almost emptiness. Where it starts to cross its own path, it builds up in a sense, more and more densification and becomes something more akin to what you recognize as energy, and then matter.

So in a sense the places where it crosses itself the most creates what you understand as the experience you call dense matter and what you think your universe is made of. But what your scientists are now beginning to explore is the idea that the majority of your universe is made up of dark matter, dark energy that is highly invisible to you. The dark matter and dark energy is where the single particle crosses its own path less. It isn't as dense, but it forms the majority of the material that makes up your physical universe. Because it only crosses itself a very few times in a very dense way to create that small amount of matter relatively speaking that creates all the matter you can perceive in your physical reality.

And that's also what creates the idea you call gravity and all the forces. In that sense it is actually interconnected because in a sense it's like a web. And it is that web, it is the pathway itself, the geometric path itself in a sense that creates that connectivity, the stretchability and malleability that you interpret as the idea of gravitational or electromagnetic or strong or weak nuclear forces.'

Q.: 'Who triggered this movement in the infinite space?'

Bashar: 'There is no beginning, existence only has one quality, to exist. Remember, time is subject to existence. Existence is not subject to time. Time is a creation within existence, therefore existence itself is timeless and has no beginning and no ending, it just is. It's just the now. But again, to use an analogy that works in your space-time framework. Imagine this: that there is the 'One', the 'One' that everything is, but in the state we call the 'One' there is no reflectivity, there is no self-awareness, it doesn't know itself. But because it does contain everything, it also contains the idea of that, which it is - shall we say - not, so to speak.

Thus then that creates the first separation, the first difference, the first reflection. And as that first reflection explodes in a sense from the One that doesn't know itself, it suddenly knows itself. The first reflection and the One becomes aware that it is 'All-that-is'. And that is also on that level what is behind that expansion, behind that explosion, but the One is not subject to it. The explosion only happens from the perspective of All-that-is which recognizes itself as the One, which knows itself as the One, which has the reflection, which sees a difference, but the One sees no difference, the One is just the One and doesn't know itself. And so there is no Big Bang in the One, the One is just existence itself, pure and simple. And the Big Bang happened in a sense when the One suddenly became All-that-is and knew itself as All-that-is and had a reflection of itself as everything that can it possibly be (

Q.: 'Anything triggered this or it happened by itself?'

Bashar: 'The recognition is what triggered it. But again you are speaking from within a linear spacetime framework. There is no time in the One, and no triggering in the One. So remember it's not this or that, it's this and that. Within the idea of things that get triggered and things that have beginnings and endings, overriding that and containing that is simply existence, the One, to which those ideas simply don't apply. So triggering can occur within the One, but the One cannot be triggered because the One just is, doesn't know anything else, is not subject to beginnings and endings, there is nothing outside of it, no beginning, no ending. Those concepts don't apply to existence, they don't apply to the One. They only exist within the One.'

(Resonance And Reflection, 2012)

Tachyons, Amber, the Prime Radiant

Q.: 'Is there some kind of paradigm that you can give us in the sense of energy from your perspective?'

Bashar: 'This has again directly to do with the relationship between the etheric level and what you call your physical material level. This relationship again is a matter of degree, a matter of frequency. But it is all based on the concept of the Prime Radiant. You have heard to discuss the concept of the Prime Radiant?'

Q.: 'I am not exactly sure what you mean by that.'

Bashar: 'Prime Radiant is the understanding that everything - to use the terminology now that you understand in your language - particle - you understand subatomic particle? It is of course not really a particle as you think of these things and even your scientists know that, but to use the term just to illustrate the point, let us just speak of a prime particle, a subatomic particle out of which everything is made in physical material reality.

The idea of the Prime Radiant is that everything you understand to be an infinite number of particles is actually the same one particle interacting with itself in the following way: just imagine now that you have one particle. Just imagine this in your mind's eye, just for the purposes of illustrating the point, even though we understand this is not absolutely literally representative of the reality. Just now imagine one particle, one little tiny point - dot - if you wish. And imagine that this particle can move at infinite speed, infinite speed. Now what this would mean is that this particle, in being able to move at infinite speed, would be everywhere at once. It would not be perceived as moving, it would just be perceived as being everywhere.

But let us start with the idea that this particle really has no substance in your terminology, is not perceivable per se and can only be perceived by you in your physical reality when it reinforces itself by overlapping itself in the path that it takes. In moving at infinite speed and tracing a line, a particular geometric pattern, over and over and over and over again with slight variations, here and there it will cross itself. And as it crosses itself over and over again, it will reinforce itself and thus appear to be more and more and more solid. The less it crosses itself, the less solid it will appear. This gives rise to the idea of the very densest physical reality where the particle crosses itself as many times as it possibly can, to the higher more rarified etheric realms where it does not cross its own path that many times, to the void in space where it contains what you call virtual particles which simply come into existence briefly and flicker out.

But you know that the void is contained, is full of many many different potential particles, potential realities, potential dimensionalities and so forth, and then on up the scale. The idea simply is that this particle in moving at infinite speed and being everywhere at once means it is interacting with itself. What you perceive to be this particle here and that particle there held together by an apparent force, be it the strong force or the electric force or gravity or whatever you wish to call it, it is not really being held together by a force. It is not really being attracted to anything. Gravitation in that sense is not an attractive force. There really are no forces per se as your society thinks of them. As such the idea is that when this particle is moving at infinite speed, being everywhere at once, it appears next to itself a number of times, and you think from your perspective that this is one particle, that is another particle, but it is the same particle interacting with itself in a sense.

And the force that apparently draws them together is simply the geometry of the path that it is taking, in that this particle here and this particle there are simply representative of where the lines of that path cross each other very close to each other. And thus there is no other place that those particles can be at that moment but next to each other. But it is because of the description of the geometry of the path they are taking, not because there's actually a force interacting between them. You follow me so far? Now, the concept again of how this applies to tachyon energy or what your society has labeled tachyons is that simply in the entire array of the geometric pattern that this one particle is taking you have overlaps and arrays of different kinds of radiating patterns, side effects. If you were to imagine a very complicated geometric pattern you would see that there are many places where the lines cross, over and over and over and over and over again, and where they cross as if you were to have let's say a spiral going this way and a spiral going that way, you would see certain points where the lines cross, and it would appear to your eye that there was a line being described by where those points cross.

But it would be in your terms an illusion. You understand? There would not really be a line there. But where the points cross in the succession in which they cross would give the apparency of the illusion of a path. One of those paths would be called the speed of light. One of those paths would be called the tachyon existence, the tachyon dimension, and all other dimensions and all other levels therein - all within the infinite speed of the Prime Radiant, the prime particle. So it is simply a matter of degree and the tachyons represent the etheric manifestations, the almost massless manifestations on the other side of what you call the speed of light, which is simply one of those lines describing the border of your particular physiological universe, the tachyon being the material of the etheric universe, so to speak, not having been crystallized, not being overlapping enough in the geometric pattern to be physicalized per se, but forming nonetheless the underlying template for physical reality.

And where those lines are crossed sufficiently, thus going from the tachyon level to the physical level, what you call physical matter, from etheric matter and all the other higher forms of matter of the Prime Radiant, expressions of the Prime Radiant, of light, of energy and so on and so forth. So all those ideas, light and energy and matter and tachyons and etheric reality are all different forms, different expressions of the one Prime Radiant, just by virtue of the fact of how many times it interacts or reflects with itself.

Therefore, with regard to the way in which the tachyon concept is being utilized in your society at this time, in that we take your meaning of certain kinds of products and so on and so forth that are made to have associations with the concept of tachyon, understand that what is simply being done is that your consciousness is being directed to the underlying template which is representative of the tachyon level of the Prime Radiant. It isn't that that material is actually infused per se with tachyons, but that there is a level within all material that is the tachyon level.

And when you attune your vibrational thoughts to that level then you can extract a different kind of energy, a different kind of relationship, a different kind of focus from that layer, that tachyon layer which exists within all material objects. Because it is more like the template level of the material object that you are holding in your hand. And it is simply the idea of focusing on that level that makes it have the effect that it has, because you then are changing your frequency to match it. Does this make some sense to you?’

Q.: ‘And is there different material substances that can...’

Bashar: ‘...represent the level or perhaps allow the concept to be transmitted more easily to your level? Yes there are, yes there are. There are perhaps certain kinds of variations of metals. One of the ones that actually has one of the highest degrees of transferring tachyon energy, as surprising as this may seem, would be the substance called amber. For understand that trees are very very good at transforming tachyon energy into physical matter, back and forth. They are transmuters of light and many different high levels of energy. So, their sap which solidified into what you now recognize as amber contains a matrix that is particularly receptive to the transformative use of etheric tachyon energies into physical materiality reception. You understand? So amber is one of the strongest transducers, transmuters of tachyon energy into physical energy and vice versa.’

Q.: ‘The Japanese are using a technology in which they use silicon beads.’

Bashar: ‘Yes, silicon is enough. The idea of your quartz crystals are also very good transmitters of tachyon energy.’

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=wCJOoAyrLLA&t=175s>

The Prime Radiant aka God Particle

Bashar: ‘We have talked a little bit from time to time about the concept of unity and one-ness and so on and so forth, as you say. And we have mentioned from time to time that unity and one-ness is truly more the product of strengthening your individuality, rather than simply blending with the masses and becoming homogeneously indistinct. Each and every one of you is unique for a reason. Because each and every one, each and every being is a unique perspective, a unique experience of the infinite.

Everyone is all the different ways that the infinite has of experiencing itself. And therefore the uniqueness is to be cherished, not lost in the creation of unity. As we have described in the analogy many times, if you look at your world as a gigantic puzzle picture and each and every one of you as a piece of the puzzle, you will see very quickly that in order to create the true whole picture, each and every piece with its own unique shape has a place to fit and must retain that shape in order to fill the whole it was designed to fill in order to create the whole picture. If that piece attempts to change its shape and not be what it is, then it doesn't fit in the whole and the whole picture suffers as a result.

So, retaining and amplifying your unique individuality, being the fullest person that you can be, is fundamentally the fulfillment of the purpose of your life and allows the best possible opportunity for the whole reality to become more cohesive, more integrated, to act in a more holistic manner. Because every time each piece is the fullest piece it can be, it acts as a reflection, a living example for all other components that they can also be the fullest piece they can be. Of course holographically speaking, every single piece contains all the information of the whole, but from a unique perspective.

Saying that you are a piece of the whole is not in any way, shape or form meant to diminish the idea that you contain - each and every one of you - the total sum of All-that-is, but expressed through a particular point of view, a particular facet of the multi-dimensional crystal. Now, you have heard a lot of talk of the concept that everyone is one, all is one, and this is so. But more often than not you hear this concept presented to you in what might be called a classically spiritual or nonphysiological context.

We would like at this time to stress the idea that one-ness is also experienced on the physiological level as well as the spiritual astral etheric level that you are all now beginning to explore. We have from time to time talked about one particular concept we have in our society that we call the Prime Radiant. And this will now work once again to strengthen the analogy of this physiological one-ness that exists and so further illustrate how you really are connected to everything and how every change you make within yourself truly affects and changes everything, everyone, everywhere, everywhen in existence. We do not say this to give you what you call a swelled head or a big ego, to think that you are so powerful that you affect the whole universe with your thoughts. But you do.

And we would like to illustrate that this is a perspective that can lend a very beneficial understanding to your ability to change and to know that when you change you do not necessarily have to fall back into certain patterns or habits in your life that do not serve you, that you do not prefer. Because you can begin to recognize through the analogy we will illustrate in a moment that every change really is such a complete change that once you make the change you are really operating from a completely different universe, and do not have to create the kind of attachment to things in your life that you don't prefer to. So, let us begin with this analogy of the Prime Radiant by discussing this in the following way.

This may at first seem a little bit technical. But you will see very quickly, very rapidly how this applies to your day-to-day, as you say down-to-earth practical and pragmatic existence. Now, some of the terminology we will use is again allegorical. We understand that some of these concepts are not even really accepted literally, even by some of the scientists in your society. But for the purpose of this analogy certain terminologies will simply have to do. Primarily the concept of what you call particle, subatomic particle, elemental particle, that which by whatever name you wish to call it would represent in your understanding the most basic smallest idea or particle that makes up all of the matter in your physiological universe. So let us begin there with this theoretical or hypothetical infinitesimal, indivisible, ultimate particle.

Now, there is only one particle. Only one out of which everything is made. When we say that we do not mean there is only one kind of particle out of which everything is made. We literally mean there is only one particle out of which everything is made. We explain it this way: this particle has really no mass to speak of. It has infinite velocity, infinite speed. Nothing slows it down, nothing impedes it, nothing at all. There is nothing to impede it. It is the only one particle in existence. It cannot be interfered with by any other idea of force or matter. Being that this one individual particle has infinite speed - what that means you will soon see - is that it can be anywhere, everywhere at the same time, because its speed is truly infinite.

Therefore, this one particle can even appear next to itself over and over and over and over and over and over again at the same time, because its speed is infinite. This particle appearing next to itself over and over and over again, millions, billions, trillions of times, is what you perceive in your reality to be many different particles interacting with each other. It's all the same one particle interacting with itself. So take this a step further and you can very quickly recognize and realize that if there is only one particle and it is the same particle as all the other particles that you perceive, and it is everywhere, anywhere, anywhen, you can very quickly see that the atoms that make up your body, the atoms that make up someone else's body, the atoms that make up your planet, the atoms that make up the stars, all the other planets, all the other matter throughout the entire physical universe, are all one particle in what might be called an universal time sharing mode, so to speak.

So, if the particles that make up you is the same particle that makes up everyone else, you really are literally all one, the particle flickering back and forth at infinite speed to make up all the atoms in you, all the atoms in everyone else, all the atoms in everything else at the same time. You literally are the stars, are everyone else. Even physiologically, not just spiritually, not just energetically. Even physiologically you all share the same one particle to build up the physical material that you see as many different particles.

This means any change you make in your pattern, in your vibration, in your geometric pattern of this one particle forming the general shapes of yourself, any change you make affects the path of that particle, the geometric path of that particle. And as it affects the path of that one particle, it must by definition affect that path for every other combination of that particle that exists. So even the tiniest movement of your little finger, even the tiniest electrical surge of thought in your brain affects the entire spectrum, the entire pattern of the entire physiological universe. You are all one. Does that make some sense to you? All right.

So, again we say this to allow you to understand not so much the concept of how much power you have, but the idea more precisely of how definitive, how impactful each and every one of you is, and how absolute the changes are that you make. So that you can see that when you change yourself and you change the entire universe it is truly, literally, with every change a different universe with its own idea of itself, its own definition of itself at that moment. And really, unless you choose to make a connection to what was or what will be, there is no connection, because every universe is unique and exists only totally in the now-moment that you decide to generate that particular change, that particular definition, that particular pattern.

So when you want to change something about your world, about your reality, all you have to do is make a change in yourself and you will see the change reflected by what appears to be the universe around you. Because it is only a reflection of the vibrations, the patterns, the beliefs, the definitions going on within each and every one of you. And the great paradox of this is, it works the same for everyone from every point of view, simultaneously. For this is the quality of an infinite particle, a multi-dimensional reality.

You all can make the same kind of changes simultaneously. And they do not contradict each other. You're not in conflict, saying 'oh what if I make a change here and it causes a change to happen over there where someone doesn't want a change to happen?' It can't happen that way. It's a giant orchestration, because again, it's the same one thing.

And every apparent, apparent individual component of it moves in the way it needs to move to accommodate every other move that is made. It all moves as one. It is not the idea of something imposing itself on something else. It is all one movement, one change going on simultaneously for the entire idea, even as it goes on for the individual components in different ways that are reflective or representative of the unique perspective that all the individual components are created to have.' (The Prime Radiant aka God Particle, 1995)

How can we meet hybrids and extraterrestrial families halfway?

Bashar: 'By being more of yourself, by meeting them halfway, by raising your vibrational frequency and making Earth more conducive to receiving the idea of the hybrids who are helping by making contact and communication with you, usually in dream time, but who are also practicing on Earth here and there temporarily to blend into your society more and understand Earth communities, Earth society, Earth culture. But they're helping in many different ways by sending their vibrations and energies and many of you when you visit them either literally physically or astrally, usually when you are asleep, then you can communicate directly - face to face, so to speak - and learn different things that can help make you more compatible, make earth more compatible to the idea of the evolution going on in humanity at this time toward becoming the sixth hybrid race. But follow the formula is the most basic answer. It will take you exactly where you need to go to be of best help to them as they are being of help to you. Send them love, feel it, project it, send it and don't forget to send it to humanity as well, and yourself individually.' (The Window, 2023)

Question about the frequency

Q.: 'It is my understanding that if you were to share with me my frequency level that that frequency level would go down. Why is this so?'

Bashar: 'The reason it goes down is because you have some insistence on knowing what it is. And it temporarily drops because you're fixing it. Whereas it'll rise again. I'm just saying this is a temporary thing because when you ask a question like that instead of just using your frequency to act on your passion, you are kind of isolating it in a way that actually lowers its frequency in order to measure it. That's just a natural result of focusing on something, it sort of freezes it and doesn't let it really continue to rise. So it will go down, it'll drop a little bit because it is now frozen in a particular time and space. But it will go up again. It's not a big deal as you say. I'm just letting you know that knowing the frequency does mean it drops a little bit. That's all right. You don't have the capability of measuring your frequency in the way that we're delivering it to you. It's something your science doesn't know, yet. The frequency we're talking about is something you don't have instruments to measure. It's a compound collective electromagnetic frequency that exists in multiple dimensional levels.'

Q.: 'So can you tell me what my frequency is then?'

Bashar: '137,000 cycles per second, it was 140 before you asked the question.'

Q.: 'And how does this relate to the earth's consciousness or everyone's frequency, where am I?'

Bashar: 'The average frequency of all humanity on earth is somewhere between 30 to 40 to 50,000 cycles per second, and not much more. Those that are exploring consciousness and expanding their consciousness and being willing to open up to the idea of what they are truly, usually will be above 100,000 cycles per second. And when you are truly allowing more of your soul through and have a world of unity and peace and harmony, most of you will be vibrating above 200,000 cycles per second.'

Q.: 'Okay, so in approximately one year I will be 200,000, can you estimate if I'm right?'

Bashar: 'No, because there are many things that you're going to experience between now and then. And that's not exactly predictable. But the idea is that you will continue to rise as long as you continue to act on your passion. This is another reason we give you the formula. Because acting on your passion raises your frequency. What happens when you raise your frequency? You become a more receptive antenna to higher frequency information and assistance from others. So the idea is: just keep acting on your passion, your frequency will continue to rise. If it needs to lower for some reason it will be only for a positive reason of making sure that you don't leave anyone behind by going to their level to communicate with them and giving them information that could cause them to then raise their frequency along with yours. So there could be positive reasons for dropping your frequency level. But the idea is that in general as long as you keep exploring and the more you are yourself, the more you act on your passion in service to humanity, your frequency in general will rise. And even if it seems like it's going up and down like this it's actually going like this' (hand movement by Bashar wave-like upwards). (Believing Is Seeing, 2025)

You are a soul, you don't have a soul

Bashar: 'I'll say good day to you this day of your time. How are you all? All right, all right, all right, thank you. I have a question for all of you: do you have a soul?' (audience: 'yes') 'No. What does he mean by that?! Of course we have souls! No. You don't have a soul, you are a soul. So, this perspective can change a lot of things in the way that you experience physical reality, because you're creating it. It's a projection of your consciousness.

And here fundamentally is how you do this: now imagine - if you will - that you are a soul, an orb of light. So picture this in your mind. You are this sphere, this orb of light. And within it there are ripples of energy, patterns of energy. Just like dropping a pebble into the pond creates ripples. Imagine ripples in every direction inside this orb of energy, this orb of light. When a soul decides to have a physical experience, this is what happens: these ripples that all are happening inside this sphere of light, this sphere of energy, this sphere of consciousness, all these ripples represent different aspects, different qualities, different attributes of the soul.

So when a soul decides to experience a theme in physical terms, some of those ripples, some of those attributes are focused on and they condense down and down and down in a focus to the center of the orb of light. Now, that doesn't mean the orb disappears, it is still there. Only some of the aspects of it have condensed down into this tiny small bit at the center. You might call it a seed, a hard kernel, like a subatomic particle. And that small crystallized seed at the center of that orb of light is your physical mind.

That is how the soul creates its experience of physical reality. It creates a focus, it creates a dream experience within the center of its being, taking some of the quality, some of the attributes, some of the aspects of its total self, crystallizing them, focusing down into that little center seed, that little center crystal, and that center crystal contains those attributes that represent the theme that that being will explore as a physical being in that physical dream at the center of the soul. So when that life is over the soul doesn't leave the body, the crystal seed starts to expand again, starts to open up again, starts to soften and starts to merge back with and into itself as the soul.

So that is what death is, it's simply the awakening from the dream state, from the little crystallized seed at the center of the soul. And the idea of the expansion of consciousness overall is what begins that process of opening up. It doesn't mean that just expanding your consciousness means you have to die physically. But the idea is that you open up and you are a little bit like a small open sphere inside the bigger sphere, not so concentrated, not so crystallized, not so hard, not so focused, so that you have the ability to tap into the vibration of the soul more readily, more easily.

And this becomes the relationship between your physical mind and your higher mind which is the soul, which is that portion of you that is still the sphere of light, the sphere of consciousness, the sphere of energy. That is the higher mind according to the physical kernel at the center, the physical seed. So by allowing yourself to expand a little bit it's easier for you to by raising your vibration, expanding that seed in the center, tap into the communication, the ripples, the information that is always coming to you from the rest of your being, the rest of you as a soul, as a sphere of consciousness, a sphere of light.

By opening up a little bit you then contain the ability within that seed, within the center of that seed to harbor some of the vibrational frequencies of information that come to you, the messages that come to you from your soul, from the higher mind. So the idea then is that comes in an energy language, as we have said. And that energy language, that energy message from your soul self to the little seed that is more expanded is translated by that little seed in the center, that little physical mind being in the center as the sensation called passion, curiosity, love, creativity.

And that is when you receive the message from the soul self that whatever contains that passion, whatever contains that excitement, that curiosity, attraction, that is who you really are. That is your core frequency, that is your core theme, that is your core creativity, it is the next step on your path, and that's why it's so important to act on that passion. Because action as the little seed is the language of the physical reality dream, not words, not thoughts, but actions, physical actions. Let the soul know that there is an echo from the crystal, there is a reaction, a response from the crystal, that it heard the message from the soul self, and is willing to act on it, willing to be guided by it, willing in that sense to move forward in that way, which then allows the soul to respond to that echo.

And then you create that back and forth dialogue between the soul sphere and the crystal seed that is you as a physical mind, as a physical being. Does this make sense? So again, focusing on yourself as a physical being, saying: 'I as a physical human have a soul' is very different than understanding that you are a soul that is simply having a human experience, that is having a human dream, a physical reality dream. So the idea is to allow yourself to really start opening up and remembering that you never leave spirit. Spirit is your natural state. You haven't left it. Most of you is there right now. All of you is there right now, but you have this little crystalline seed portion of your greater self that is pretending, that is dreaming that it's no longer in spirit. That is what physical reality is.

And when you start looking at it from that direction you start really tapping into your innate self-empowerment, your true nature, your true core essential vibration. And many more things can happen that are more representative of alignment between your physical mind and your higher mind, so that you can really understand you are not a human being physically that has a soul. You do not have a body and inside the body is your soul. You are a soul and inside your soul is your body. That's the difference. So you are a soul, you don't have a soul. You are the soul. We thank you for allowing us to share this perspective with you this day of your time.' (Sedona Ascension Retreat, 2024)

Why do babies need to relearn the simplest things as if it were the first time?

Q.: 'If we are all living past and future lives in the present moment then why is it that when babies are born they need to re-learn how to be human, they need to re-learn the simplest things like how to talk, count and interact with people? It is like they are discovering the world for the first time, but it's not the first time because we have many lives before and after.'

Bashar: 'But it is the first time for that personality. Your sense is mixing the idea of the physical persona and the soul's experience, when you say we'. So the idea is, you are creating a new physical persona that is injecting itself into the experience of physical reality, and choosing to forget who it is, so it can rediscover who it is from a new point of view. So it is the first time for that personality, and there has to be that first time experience for that personality to absorb all of the belief systems that are representative of the challenges that the soul chose to face as that unique new personality from a linear perspective. So that's why you have to forget who you are as a soul, even though you may be able to access all sorts of incarnational experiences that coexist simultaneously from the soul perspective. From the physical perspective this is you, uniquely, for the first time. And therefore you have to learn things in the way that is relevant for that personality, to learn how to talk and walk and reconnect to things in a way, or connect to things in a way, for the first time, to satisfy what that physical personality's journey is all about, which is going to be completely different from any other personality's journey. So it has to build up from scratch.' (Soul Cycle, 2024)

How to not co-create war-like situations and child abuse?

Q.: 'Are these issues reflections of aspects of myself that I am rejecting if I view them as a mirror? I may not perceive them in my reality, but I feel a sense of responsibility to those who are suffering. I want to avoid adding energy to those dark issues by fixating on them, yet I also don't want to deny their existence or feel as though I'm abandoning those in need. How can I navigate this situation in a way that is beneficial for everyone involved?'

Bashar: 'This goes back to what we have said about the idea of reflections in your reality. It doesn't mean that what you see is a one-to-one reflection of something that is an issue within you that you need to deal with literally and directly. However, if you can perceive it in your reality the idea is you can help where you can. You can take the actions to help mitigate the suffering of others in some way, shape or form if possible. So the idea is not that you fixate on it but that you're aware of it, you recognize that as you perceive it it may be that the reflection for you is it gives you an opportunity to help those individuals cease their suffering.

So take actions in a positive direction, in a loving direction that might help mitigate their suffering and you will be doing what it is perhaps that you need to do to figure out the reason why that is in your life. It doesn't mean that you necessarily are adding to their negativity if you are willing to help them find a way to exit from the suffering that they have been experiencing because of their belief systems or their experiences in life. So by all means you can be of great assistance, you don't have to worry about adding to their suffering just because you are aware of their situation.'

(Facing Your Demons, 2024)

Difference between being at a frequency level of 80 000 and 125 000 or 175 000

Bashar: 'At 175,000 cycles per second there would be no concept of victimhood, no concept of unworthiness, no concept of non-deservability, no concept of struggle.'

Q.: 'And yet you would still be physical and you'd be on a different Earth in a sense?'

Bashar: 'Yes, and you would experience challenges in a very different way, in a very different light from a very different perspective. They would be part and parcel of your growth. They would not be something that is done to you, but you would understand that they come through you as part of the agreement, as part of the theme that you chose to explore as a physical entity.'

Q.: 'And at 333,000 cycles per second when you shift over into non-physicality...'

Bashar: 'Well, then you are in spirit. Then you awaken, then you have knowledge, then you know things, then all your questions are answered. Then you understand all of the consequences of all of the choices you made every second of your physical experience. And you absorb all of that and decide what to do next, how to move on, how to incorporate so to speak - even though you are not corporeal - how to incorporate that into what it is you decide you will now experience next. (The Door, 2023)

Consciousness shifting its focus from frame to frame and consciousness constituting the frames

Consciousness shifting its focus from frame to frame and consciousness constituting the frames

Q.: 'What does it mean to wake up from the reality dream into true reality? You've discussed before that we are actually spirit dreaming and that your reality, the way you experience reality, is being awake within the dream. What does it mean to actually wake up from the dream? What is true reality?'

Bashar: 'To die. To go into spirit fully, not experience the idea directly of what you call physical reality.'

Q.: 'Where is the line between physical reality end and the true reality? Where's the line where the dream starts and the true reality begins, it's really just the physicality?'

Bashar: 'It is just the frequency that you are operating at. 333 000 cycles per second is the vibrational border line between non-physical and physical reality. So when you simply alter a pattern of energy within your consciousness in a certain way from spirit, then you direct a portion or a focus of your consciousness in a way that experiences a dream called physical reality. So you have to go in that particular portion of your consciousness, lower than 333 000 cycles per second.'

Q.: 'Can we be in the dream while being non-physical?'

Bashar: 'Yes, in a sense, because every level within All-that-is is another type of dream, but we simply assume you are referring to the physical version.'

Q.: 'No, I want to know is there an actual waking up completely at some level of All-that-is or would that be going back into the 'One' which you said you can't really do?'

Bashar: 'Correct. So in a sense, it is always the One, or the portion of the One that is capable of being aware of itself and therefore it is always in a sense a type of a dream but that's what reality is. It is all just happening within the idea of consciousness, of self-awareness.'

Q.: 'Is the dream itself the idea that there is an other?'

Bashar: 'Correct, correct. So yes, the dream is the One's idea that there is an other. That's what creates self-awareness, is that the self is defined by the fact that there is something that appears to be other than self. That is the dream, because there is nothing other than self. But you can have the dream experience that there is.'

Q.: 'When awakening there is always the positive and the negative?'

Bashar: 'And the center point. And remember that the center point, being a point of balance, in a sense tips the scale slightly towards the positive, because in a point of balance you still have the freedom to choose what you prefer and that's a positive state of being.'

Q.: 'Is there always going to be consciousness inhabiting all of those frames, all of those options?'

Bashar: 'Well, it's existence itself, yes. So it can't cease to exist. Consciousness is simply the expression of existence being self-aware. Existence can't stop existing. That's its natural quality, is to be. And, it can't go anywhere because there is nowhere for it to go, because by definition non-existence doesn't exist. That's its quality. To not be. So that which is can not become that which is not.'

Q.: 'Just as a practical example: let's say I am fighting with my father and then I mend things with him and make a more positive choice. So there's another version of me that continues to fight with my father?'

Bashar: 'Yes, in a sense but that's not where you are focused anymore in terms of the journey that you, your particular reflection is experiencing. You have chosen a different set of frames in the film strip. Even though the other film strip still exists.'

Q.: 'What happens to the consciousness inhabiting the frames?'

Bashar: 'There will always be consciousness in everything because everything is consciousness. Everything is made of consciousness.'

Q.: 'So it is beneficial for All-that-is to always have consciousness in the negative frames?'

B.: 'It is what it is. In that sense it can't be anything else. It is what it is and everything that it is, is what it needs to be. Because that's what it is, otherwise it would be something different. So, it needs all of it in order to be what it is. Just like you need all the puzzle pieces in order to form the whole picture. Without one piece there is no whole picture.'

Q.: 'So then I make that choice to go into these other set of frames that are more positive...'

Bashar: '...which you are doing constantly anyway.'

Q.: 'What happens to the consciousness that was just inhabiting those frames, do I kick another consciousness out?'

Bashar: 'No, no no no no. You have to sort of look at this as from a multidimensional perspective. A shift of focus, of a level of consciousness is happening on a certain level. The idea of the consciousness having the experience is on a different level. So you can from a higher level of consciousness shift your focus, but that doesn't change the fact that by definition a certain, let's just say lower level of consciousness, is simply constantly in that frame. You don't destroy the frame, just because you have shifted your attention to another frame. Whatever is going on in that frame, whatever that frame represents is still that frame and always will be and that's a different level of experience and consciousness than the level that you are shifting your focus from. So just because you have looked at one frame and sort of contemplated what's going on in that frame and then shifted your focus to another frame you are shifting from a different level than what that frame represents as its own symbol of an experience. That never changes. It's made of consciousness but that never changes what it is, because that's what it is, is that symbol that expression of consciousness. But you from another level have the ability to take your focus off that frame and shift it to another frame and shifting your attention to another frame changes nothing about the frame you were focused on before. It is what it is as another level or expression of consciousness. But you have a level of consciousness that experiences the idea of flexibility, of shift, of change. That's a different level of consciousness you are coming from than the level of consciousness that is used to create the frame.'

Q.: 'How can my consciousness focus as another person?' From that perspective. I know that reincarnation doesn't exist in that way, but why would my consciousness then focus as another person?)

Bashar: 'Because when you're experiencing things in a certain framework of time you need that sense of continuity to create the story of a 'before', a 'middle' and an 'after'. That's just the way you perceive things from that level of experience.'

Q.: 'Will I forever experience myself as this identity or will I move on?'

Bashar: 'Again, you create the idea of moving on, yes. You are not stuck anywhere at anytime for any reason whatsoever. I would not necessarily encourage you to label the idea as being stuck, Otherwise that's how you'll experience it. You are always changing. The very idea of the experience that you call 'change' happens because you are constantly shifting your focus. Otherwise you wouldn't experience any change at all.' (A Step Along the Way, 2021)

Raising your vibration

Q.: 'What is it that is vibrating when you encourage us to raise our vibration?'

Bashar: 'It's your energy. Energy has frequency to it. A simple example is what you call your visible spectrum of light. You know it's all the same kind of electromagnetic energy, but you know that red is a different frequency, a different vibrational rate than blue which is a higher vibrational rate. So when you allow yourself to align with your truth, your passion, your creativity, your love, you are allowing yourself to upgrade and accelerate. Raise up your frequency and by raising up your frequency it makes you more sensitive as a receiver, in a sense, as an antenna, to pick up on even higher frequencies above and beyond your reality, your senses expand.

You start being able to perceive the structure of existence. You start being able to understand that you have a direct connection to Source. You start being able to actually experience it in that way. You start being able to realize that you are already being given everything you can possibly be given. You don't necessarily have to ask for more, it's that you just have to pay more attention to what you are already getting and raising your frequency makes you a more sensitive receiver to be able to pay more attention to what you are already being given that helps you.

You are just making yourself basically more sensitive to receive higher energy information by matching that level, by matching that frequency. Remember, the principle is: you cannot perceive what you are not the vibration of. So when you are vibrating at a certain rate, at a certain frequency, you can't perceive the things that are vibrating like this (hands up). You have to raise your frequency and become matched to that frequency like two tuning forks to be able to receive and understand and translate and process that vibration and all the information and all the experience that is relative to that vibration. If you're down on this level (hands down) on this vibration scale you can't really have any experiences that are representative of a different vibrational level.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Q.: 'But how to raise my vibration...?'

Bashar: 'That's the formula that we've given you all. You act on your highest passion, because passion is the translation in your body of your true frequency. You do it to the best you are able and you do it with absolutely no insistence and no assumption, thinking that you know what the outcome is supposed to be of acting on that passion, because your physical mind really has no idea. And if you insist on knowing what that outcome should be and put those kinds of restrictions on it your higher mind and creation cannot necessarily then give you what could actually be much better than you have imagined.

So you have to really trust the synchronicity and the higher self to deliver to you when you're in the correct vibration of passion all the things you truly need at that moment. Your physical mind is only designed to understand and experience what's happening, what's going on right now at this moment and take that experience in. Your physical mind is not designed to really know what's going to happen. But higher intelligence does and therefore it guides you and says: follow your passion that's the compass needle pointing to your true north, that's the compass needle that allows you to align with your true self and your true path in life, follow the passion, follow the love, follow the excitement, follow the curiosity, follow the creativity, that's what you are, that's who you are.

And then you know your path will be unerring. It will be the path of least resistance, the path of joy. You will experience less struggle and strife. It's just the way it works, you're going with the flow of your current, you're not swimming upstream, you're not resisting it. Does that make sense? So that's the formula: act on your highest passion to the best you can at every moment, do it as much as you can as far as you can take it until you can take it no further, then act on the next most exciting thing, and then do that with absolutely no insistence no assumption as to what the outcome ought to be and see what happens and then whatever happens remain in a positive state even if something manifests that you don't initially prefer. You have to know it's there for a reason, there are no accidents, it's there for a reason. Learn to stay in a positive state and then you can use what you don't prefer in a way that you do prefer and get the benefit from it.

But you have to know that whatever you are given is what you need at that moment. Because sometimes you will test yourself. Maybe something will manifest that you don't prefer and maybe you will find yourself reacting in the same old way with the same old fear-based beliefs and say 'oh, why did that happen, something must be wrong, something's off, I will judge myself, I must have done something wrong'. That is what exactly makes that state stick and stay there and get you in a loop of negativity. But if you suddenly realize 'alright, I recognize objectively that I don't prefer this but I know it's got to be there for a reason that serves me I just know that', then you will be able to extract the benefit. You will see eventually why it happened in that way, if for nothing else again that you tested yourself to make sure that you're not making your happiness conditional on what happens outside. You are making your happiness conditional only on what you decide is true for you.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Changing the Past: the 13th Step

Q.: 'I'm a past-life regression therapist. If all time exists now, how can I help people help themselves in the now?'

Bashar: 'The very concept itself - if absorbed by the person - that all these lives are simultaneously co-existing can automatically if you truly understand that, if a person truly understands that structure, that relationship of everything being here and now existing simultaneously, that immediately negates the idea that there can actually be a cause coming from the past. All the things you call 'causes' coming from the past, karma, whatever you wanna call it is completely self-imposed and completely created from the present.

The idea is you make cross-connections, energetic connections and links to other simultaneously existing parallel incarnations and thus, by making those cross-connections from the present, you are connecting to other life experiences that you have deemed based on the theme you wish to explore to be necessary connections to allow you to explore the energy, the downloads, the experiences that they have to give you.

It's just that you interpret from your space-time perspective, you interpret those cross-connections to parallel realities that you call the past, you interpret them as memories. But that's created from the present. The present, and here is another principle that if people can wrap their minds around will completely shatter your understanding of space-time reality: the present creates the past, not the other way around.

Q.: 'Then does the future create the present?'

Bashar: 'No. The future creates the present when the future becomes your present, but while this present is your present it is also creating what you call the future. Because you are looking at it as downline in the past, upline in the future, from the present, but when you arrive in the future, isn't it always now? So it's just that you are allowing what you now call the future to finally simply become your present, to accept it that it does exist as a present reality and to actually experience it as a present reality.

So what you're actually doing in that sense is you're still creating that future from the present but the way you do it is by turning the future into your present. The idea is that you can actually do the same thing with the past, since you are creating the past from the present, you can actually use the present to alter the past. Because if you truly understand that you are shifting through parallel realities, billions of parallel realities every second, then what that also tells you is that billions of times per second you are actually expressing your consciousness through the eyes of literally a different version of you which is literally a different person. So if it's literally a different person, then that person doesn't have the same history. Doesn't have to have the same history. You can make that present person seem to have a similar history or not, but that's actually up to you.

Whatever you define yourself to be now is what determines the person you are now, and determines what so-called experience of future and past that person has. So this is why we have talked before about this concept called the 13th step taking a cue off what you call your twelve-step programs. This usually on your planet applies to all forms of what you call addiction and how to allow yourself to let go so to speak of that addictive behavior. Now, we are in no way, shape or form saying that people have to stop doing those twelve step programs if that's the permission slip that works for them.

All we're saying is you can also at some point when you're truly ready to understand this add a thirteenth step. And the thirteenth step is actually this that when you truly, truly know, not believe, not think, when you truly know you are a different person and truly thus then know that as a different person there is a different history that doesn't mean that you have let go of the addiction, it means you never had it.

And that's why there is no urge in the person that you are now, not because you have transformed it and are dealing with it, it's because the person you are now knows they simply never had it, it's simply not a consideration, it simply not exists in their mindset and never has.' (33rd Parallel, 2013)

Precursors and Preparers

Bashar: 'Contact with different cultures on your planet has been happening for quite some time. There are certain cultures, most of them indigenous cultures, on your planet that have known for many thousands of years of our existence and have interacted with us in a variety of ways. So this has been going on, open contact with these indigenous cultures, for a long, long time. For millennia. When we talk about the idea of open contact happening on your planet in the typical way that you interpret this, we are usually talking about open contact with those aspects of your human culture that have not been involved with contact with various extraterrestrial species, openly. So the idea is that it is new to the westernized cultures on your planet, but not new to the older cultures, So, it is now approaching the time when your westernized cultures must be included in the idea of open contact so that all of humanity can participate in the idea of contact. And aspects of this, even in westernized cultures, have been going on for a little while. Various extraterrestrials have made individual contacts with certain members of your society that had in spirit agreed to be the precursors, the preparers, the ones who would receive open contact and disseminate information to the rest of their culture over time. But also for a little while, for several decades, extraterrestrials have been working as you say behind the scenes with certain scientists on your planet, certain government officials on your planet to help with the evolution of humanity, to help with the evolution of your technology, your sociology, your economy, your spirituality. And so while this has been going on relatively in secret, it is now - as we have said - approaching the time when this knowledge, when these activities will come into the public light. And it will be done in phases.’ (The Fantasy vs Reality of Contact, 2025)

Question about the preparers

Bashar: ‘We cannot talk so much about this at this time, although to say adjustments have been made in your genetics that allow you to channel more frequency through yourselves as preparers that will make you more vibrationally compatible with the hybrids that will first come in contact with humanity. At this time we are not allowed to discuss this further.’

Q.: ‘And do all these beings know they are preparers?’

Bashar: ‘No.’ (Step Four, 2024)

Question about the precursors

Bashar: ‘The precursors already know who they are. They're not humans born on Earth. There are preparers who are born on Earth. We call them preparers. But the precursors are precursors of the hybrids coming to live among you. So the precursors are already hybrids that were not born on Earth. But on Earth you have preparers who are doing a similar job from the point of view of Earth. Those, like people exploring their consciousness, helping others, being of service to humanity that are preparing the way for a different kind of reality experience. So we typically refer to those as preparers, whereas the precursors are actually hybrid beings from another reality.’ (Step Five, 2024)

Q.: ‘Are people with autistic traits precursors?’

Bashar: ‘No. Precursors were not born on Earth. You may be preparers, but that's different. Preparers are Homo sapiens that have made a life choice to be involved in the ideas of teaching humanity how to be in the different altered states and learn lessons from different altered states and ways of presenting and communication that can prepare humanity for open contact, but precursors are actually extraterrestrial beings that were not born on Earth, that may walk among you in order to - shall we say - rub off on you in terms of their vibration and take notice of how many people are sensitive enough to notice that they are different.’ (No More Secrets, 2025)

Becoming more of who you truly are: your core signature vibration

Bashar: ‘The idea we have discussed many times of course is that everything is about resonance, vibration, frequency of consciousness, frequency of energy. There is of course in creation fundamentally only one thing: ‘All-that-is’, the ‘One’. But the idea is that it can create itself to be, to appear as, to experience itself as many different things by creating different frequencies within its consciousness, different vibrations, different wave forms, within its consciousness and these different wave forms, these different signature vibrations thus then create the experience within All-that-is of many different things. In a sense, thus then, all of you, all of us, all beings in creation are all the different ways that creation has of interacting with itself, of experiencing itself, of reflecting itself to itself from an infinite number of points of view, in order to experience all that it is from every different possible direction, from every different possible perspective.’ (Resonance And Reflection, 2012)

Q.: 'Do signature vibrations evolve or change in any way or does each individual perspective of 'All-that-is' have a unique and distinct energy to it that remains unchanging even through all experiences? If signature vibrations don't change what is it that does learn and evolve?'

B.: 'Signature vibrations by definition don't change. That's how you know it's that particular reflection. But what does change are secondary vibrations that colour it, that clothe it, that are representative of the learning, representative of the growth, and representative of the change. Now that can become to some degree a marker or something similar, once the lesson is learned, to a signature vibration, but there is always a core signature that makes you you and there are secondary levels of vibrational frequencies that represent different experiences, different levels of knowledge, so on and so forth. They can become so close in vibration when you really own them to the signature vibration that they may be in some sense challenging to differentiate. But if your senses are sharp enough the signature vibration is always recognizable as that individual identity and the learning vibrations, the knowledge vibrations, the experiential vibrations that wrap themselves around it can always be differentiated from the true core signature vibration.

Q.: 'Is the term signature vibration another way of saying: the unique archetype of 'All-that-is' that each of us is? Do we remain the same archetype signature vibration even in other experiences that we may choose to create for ourselves after transitioning from this lifetime such as creating the illusion of reincarnation, choosing to be a non-physical guide and choosing to explore other realms?'

B.: 'Yes.' (How the Oversoul Works, 2022)

Q.: 'So as we increase our vibration we have other levels of ourselves that start to express?'

B.: 'Yes, you are walking into yourself. It's not someone else. It's you. But the idea is that it's more of you and therefore it can change the personality to be more representative of more of the soul or spirit expressing itself.' (Resonance, 2022)

Q.: 'We are a different person every moment but you also say that we only ever are who we are now'

B.: 'You must be careful how your language is used, because when we say 'who we are' it depends on the 'who' we mean. The idea of the core 'You', the core 'We', the core being that you are, the core reflection of All-that-is, that never changes, it's your identity and you experience everything from the perspective of what it means to be 'You'. But when you are talking about the idea of creating personality constructs or different representations of your core being, that can shift. So the idea is that the shell you create, so to speak, roughly around yourself as a personality or a presentation of who you are as the core being of your existence that can shift and can give the core being a variety of different experiences. The core never changes, but the idea of the clothing that you wear, the presentation that you create, the projection or personality that you may create for different experiences can constantly shift. So we are talking about two different levels of 'We' or 'I'. Just to be clear.' (Thanksgiving, 2022)

You are a focus within your soul: a set of specific ripples, patterns and vibrations

Bashar: 'Physical reality is not a place you go to, physical reality is in your soul. Your physical body doesn't have a soul, your soul has a physical body within it, at the center of its being. Physical body, physical experience is a focal point at the center of your soul, if you want to imagine your soul like a sphere of energy, an orb of light, then certain ripples and patterns and vibrations within the soul can concentrate something down to the center of the soul. The whole soul remains, but at the center

there's a concentration of vibrational frequencies that creates this little crystalline nugget that you call 'my physical self.' You are a focus within your soul, that's what your physical personality is, a focus within your soul. So the idea of 'reincarnation' is simply the expansion back to the soul and the refocusing of a different series of energy patterns that creates a different personality, but all that happens within the soul as if you're breathing in and out, in and out, in and out, in and out, within the soul. That's what physical reality is. So you're in spirit right now.' (Open Contact, Part One, 2024)

Q.: 'From one soul when it expands and then it contracts and it creates another entity - you mentioned that it could be a different personality - so it might not be me, it might be a different entity?

Bashar.: 'Oh yes, it's not you, it's a different entity. And the soul is different as well. Because again, it's creating that different personality out of different vibratory frequencies within its energy. So in a sense, you can say from one perspective: yes, it's the same soul creating another physical body, but from another perspective you could say: but that's a different soul because it's made up of different energy patterns because it has given different patterns to the physical body, and therefore those patterns don't exist within the soul anymore at that level. It's a different soul. Cause it's a different formula of vibrational frequencies in order to create that different, unique personality out of those different frequencies. (Echoes of Sedona, 2024)

(The Soul Cycle, 2024) pdf-handout depicting the ripples, patterns and vibrations:

<https://www.dropbox.com/home?preview=Soul+Cycle.pdf>

Question about ego death

Bashar: 'It depends on what you think ego death means.'

Q.: 'Just feeling the oneness, feeling all-connectedness.'

Bashar: 'All right. Tell us what do you imagine that would feel like what you just described.'

Q.: 'Losing my self-identity.'

Bashar: 'No. You will never lose your self-identity. That is not ego death.'

Q.: 'Would you mind explaining it?'

Bashar: 'You will always experience everything you experience from your perspective as you. Whatever form you may take, physical, non-physical, what have you. You will always experience it from your point of view. Even blending as many people on your planet say 'I'm going to blend with All-that-is.' You wouldn't lose your identity in that experience. You would actually experience yourself as All-that-is. You would be the only thing left. So it's always going to be seen and experienced as you from your point of view.

Ego death in this sense simply means ego transparency. So that you are not focused on the ego in any way, shape or form, other than allowing it to perform its true function which is a focusing mask to allow you to have a physical experience. Much in the same way that a diving mask underwater allows you to see your environment more clearly, because without the mask it might be a little blurrier. So ego death actually means don't give the ego any job other than what it's designed to do, which is to simply allow you to have a physical experience. It's not meant to control what you prefer, tell you where to go, or anything like that.

Because if you give the ego more to do than it's designed to do, it can then turn into the idea of the negative ego, which thinks it has to control its outer environment. It has to control everything. So ego death is a kind of surrender to the flow of your true control and your true power that just allows the ego to relax into what it's designed to do, which is allow you to have the physical experience that you're having. It's just allowing the ego to become more transparent and let it do its job. That's all ego death means. You never lose your identity. It's not possible.' (Believing Is Seeing, 2025)

This is what Seth has to say:

After death the ego of a deceased person does not disappear but it is assigned a kind of subordinate role by the inner self. The non-physical personality continues with its own development and leaves the ego and the world view of the physical person behind. The disincarnate consciousness maintains its sense of 'I am-ness' and individuality that will never be destroyed, dissolved or annihilated, not even by integration. "All-that-is is the creator of individuality, not the means of its destruction [Seth]." The former ego takes a back seat within the various layers and components of the self, similar to the role of our subconscious during physical existence, but it can be temporarily re-activated in case of communication between incarnate and disincarnate persons.

Who is the 'You' in: 'You create your own reality?'

Bashar: 'As you change your frequency in any given moment that determines the next parallel earth reality you will experience in the next billionth of a second, and the next billionth after that, and the next billions after that....No one parallel reality has any movement in it at all, they are like static frames of film. Motion and change is the effect that you create by actually shifting your consciousness from parallel reality perspective to parallel reality perspective, billions of times a second, creating this smooth illusion of continuous change. So whatever vibration you are determines the reality you experience. So it is all about the idea of creating the vibration that is commensurate with the type of reality you prefer. And creating a greater degree of difference in your definition of reality from one to the other so that you can actually thus then experience this shift more consciously, more readily so you can recognize that you have been shifting all the time, because every shift is an immediate shift and a total change. But you don't recognize it as such because every reality you are shifting to is so similar to the last one, you hardly notice any difference. But when you start creating a shift in your design to a reality that is much different then you start to notice that you're shifting and it becomes more conscious.' (Diving Deeper into the Nine Levels of Consciousness, 2011)

Q.: 'If there are infinite versions of me in infinite timelines, who am I in relation to all the other parallel "me's"?'

B.: 'They are not you, they are themselves.'

Q.: 'So they are completely separate from me, and I am my own sovereign individual?'

B.: 'And so are they, yes. It's your perspective that makes you 'You'. Their perspective is slightly different. That's what makes them them.'

Q.: 'And we make cross-connections to them?'

B.: 'You might. You don't always have to, but you might. If it serves you, sure. (...) I understand that higher dimensional concepts can sometimes seem a little confusing, that's alright. You'll get used to it.'

Q.: 'Do we reschedule missed opportunities?'

B.: 'Sometimes you might, but there are different ways of rescheduling. Sometimes a person may reschedule by actually physically dying, and then shifting to another reality where they are – quote unquote – “still alive”.'

Q.: 'So that new person in that new reality that hasn't died that they step into...

B.: 'They don't step into it.'

Q.: 'What do they do? The focus of consciousness simply shifts to a place where they can have the time to have the experience.'

Q.: 'What happens to the other “me's” when I shift realities? Am I stepping into someone else's reality and destroying my doppelganger?'

B.: 'Parallel me's are not you.'

Q.: 'So if I die and choose to have the experience of another lifetime that picked up right where I left.'

B.: 'Yes, and you can do that. As an experience you can do that. Remember that there is a difference between what you create as an experience and the description of what's mechanically actually happening. So you can create the experience that that's what happened, that doesn't mean that the mechanism is accurately described by the experience.'

Q.: 'So I am not stepping in someone else's reality and destroying my doppelganger?'

B.: 'No, no, no. It's a dance. And the timing is such....alright, I'll put it in your terms...If it's infinite, then there are going to be versions of you that will also want to shift at the same time you do. So you'll dance and trade places. You are not removing anyone from what they need to experience. They make a choice that's the equivalent vibrationally of your choice and you give each other what you need.'

Q.: 'So this is all just my ego mind trying to figure out how things work.'

B.: 'Look at it this way. Imagine you have a disc, and the disc is full of holes. And behind that disc you have another disc that has different colours on it. And as you rotate the disc behind the one with the holes, you see different colours appearing in the holes. But the holes don't change.(...)You are changing the frequency of that hole, so that hole has a different experience, but that hole is still the same hole. So, it's not replacing another hole, it's shifting its frequency to have a different experience that seems to be the experience of a different hole, and it is a different hole for itself, but it's still the same hole having a different hole experience.' (Dare to Dream, 2017

What does Bashar mean by 'planetary management'?

Bashar: 'The idea of the equitable distribution of resources, the availability of what is needed for everyone on the planet in the most efficient way, the balancing of the ecological systems on your planet. So that again you are expressing the idea of nature in the best way possible for everyone. The idea of introducing new ways of doing things more efficiently, different materials that do not cause damage on your planet. The idea of how to distribute food, water, resources of various types, how to use resources more efficiently, free energy devices to free you up from the idea of the types of materials that you are using now, more guidance technologically to allow you to create future technologies that - again - are non-polluting and of benefit to all. The idea of diversification in various ways, using people's strengths, countries' strengths, cultures' strengths to benefit all, so that each is allowed to be who they are both, individually and collectively in certain cultural groups that can benefit humanity in a variety of ways. All of this and more is included in the idea of planetary management.' (The Fantasy vs Reality of Contact, 2025)

New jobs created in connection with open contact

Bashar: 'Obviously there will be individuals who will function as liaisons in the beginning. There will also be those who can begin to relate to translating information that will be given to you. One of the things, one of the gifts you will be given is - and I know this sounds a little contradictory based on what we already said - but nevertheless, you will be given information about your entire total history on Earth. It will be a big job to translate all of that and to assimilate all of that into your society. Things like that. (Welcome to Sedona, 2024)

Bashar: 'There is a lot of history that you have lost. One of the things that will be given to all of you when open contact occurs is the complete history of your planet. I understand that that seems contradictory because as we have said when you change your present you change your past, but the idea is that you'll be given the history of the planet you finally wind up on as the person of earth that is relevant for contact and that will be the history that will allow you to establish the present person you have defined yourself to be and allow you to experience the idea of the future that is relevant for that person.' (Life Expo, 2024)

In what way will university curricula change after open contact?

Bashar: 'Obviously there will be more discussion, more exploration of the idea that you are not alone in the universe. There will be courses that will begin to teach you about the different extraterrestrial species that would be appropriate for you to experience. There will be deeper understanding of certain ideas in the past that will come into the present again, because certain knowledge has been - shall we say - lost over time that will be reclaimed, regained and reexplored. There will be many different kinds of Investigations into your own nature as well as the nature of the extraterrestrials that you will be experiencing in open contact.

Plus you may allow different techniques of teaching to occur in your universities and other levels of schooling that will be more reflective of interactive experiences based on the way that extraterrestrials may explain to you, as we have explained to you from time to time, how it is we learn things, how it is we teach things, more by interactive experience than the idea of rote memorization. So your techniques of teaching may also change based on what you are willing to adapt to and adopt into your schools based on what you learn from us.' (The Gate, 2023)

The Timing of Open Contact

Bashar: 'Contact and the schedule of contact is now relatively fixed. It will happen, again, in a couple of your years in what you call 2027, regardless of what's going on on your planet at the moment. Things have already accelerated it to that point because if you recall, I originally said it would happen within 5 years. Now I'm telling you it will happen within two. So that's already an acceleration based on everything and all the agreements and all the life paths that have been constructed to unfold upon your planet in the way that they are unfolding. An increase in what you call UFO sightings, sightings of orbs will begin in your year of 2026. It will culminate in the introduction of extraterrestrials in your year of 2027. The exact moment is not yet determined. But it will build up in 2026 until it appears to be relatively inevitable that you will be introduced to the ETs in your year of 2027 at some point.'

Q.: 'After first contact will there be enough ETs to visit every one of us who wants to meet with them?'

Bashar: 'There will be many ETs among you. It doesn't necessarily mean every single person on Earth will interact with an extraterrestrial. But you will all know about them. You will all see them in one way, shape or form, either through your electronic media or in person. But they will be generally among you and many of you may see them in groups as they may appear in certain areas on your planet. So in general you will all see them. Whether or not you all personally interact with them will be up to your life path.'

Q.: 'Is living in a central main city better for first contact?'

Bashar: 'It will not matter generally where you are. Even though there may be more frequent interactions within a city structure for a variety of reasons, every single area of your planet will have access in some way, shape or form to the extraterrestrials that will come to be among you.'

Q.: 'Is it possible that some bad ones (ETs) will arrive, too?'

Bashar: 'No.'

Q.: 'I'm 53 years old. Will I live long enough to enter a spaceship or even ride a spaceship?'

Bashar: 'We cannot guarantee that all of you will ride in a UFO spacecraft, but you will live long enough to see the introduction of the extraterrestrials. It may be possible that you will see the inside of the ships but again, we cannot necessarily foretell how many of you will be capable of riding within a craft. It will have to do with what you have chosen to experience on your life path, and what is actually relevant and necessary for you. Your vibration will be whatever it needs to be should your life path contain the ability to ride upon a ship or interact with the ETs in a certain way. But it mostly has to do with the determinations you made as a spirit for laying out your physical life path.'

Q.: 'How long will it take before the majority of people have access to the holographic history of Earth and the ET's medical advancement?'

Bashar: 'This will be the product of the degree to which different cultures on your planet and different political systems on your planet are willing to receive what the ETs will be bringing to your world. Some will be willing and open to receiving this information right away, some will not. They will retract, they will withdraw, they will try to maintain control of their political or cultural system for longer than others might. So it's really in the hands of humans to decide when they will receive it, how soon they will receive it after open contact happens and the ETs present you with this information. So it's really in your hands.'

Q.: 'Will technologies like free energy devices be given to everyone or just to the government?'

Bashar: 'Again, whatever is practical. In terms of how things will be distributed, will be done in a practical way. Obviously, they're not going to literally hand a device to every single individual on your planet. But they will be made available and they will be accessible through different companies as you call them on your planet, who will produce them for you. The idea again is that it will be relevant to whatever the life path is as to the degree that you interact with extraterrestrials. When it is necessary for your life path to experience that idea in whatever way it is appropriate for you to do so.'

Q.: 'Will ETs set up schools to teach the fundamentals of space exploration and interstellar communities?'

Bashar: 'Yes, there will be centers where humans can gather, where extraterrestrials will talk about these things, teach about these things, instruct people in how to navigate these things. So yes, there will be areas on your planet where that will be available. Most major cities on your planet will have some degree of access to the extraterrestrials and the learning centers that we just discussed.

Q.: 'I attended your event in New Jersey. Were there any precursors or hybrids in the audience with us that day?'

Bashar: 'There were no precursors. One moment... there was a hybrid outside the theater.'

Q.: 'And what was the average vibration of everybody in that room, excluding you of course?'

Bashar: 'On average somewhere between 175,000 and 190,000 cycles per second.'

Q.: 'Who built the giant 'H'- blocks in Puma Punku in Bolivia?'

Bashar: 'This is over 10,000 of your years old. It was an extraterrestrial base.'

Q.: 'What have they discovered on the continent of Antarctica and is there an ET presence, base or technology there?'

Bashar: 'There is an ET base there. There is ET technology there. Obviously there is an ET presence then. That is all we will say at this time.'

('Explorations With Bashar', 28 June 2025)

The structure of existence: frames up to the level of the 'ONE'

Q.: 'After crossing over into spirit what is it that continues?'

Bashar: 'There will always be a part of that that continues to exist that is representative of the experience of a specific life. Again, similar in analogy to the idea that there will always be knowledge and experience within you from your childhood, even though you are not a child anymore. It never goes away, it's always there and always can be tapped into. So the idea of having a life experience is something that is then simply part of the soul itself. You can simply say the spirit is the specific representation or symbol or reflection of the life experience and that becomes part of the soul and is always accessible. So yes, it always remains even though the soul may be bigger and greater and the oversoul even bigger and greater than that. You never lose anything and that particular aspect of the being can always be accessed and tapped into from many different sources including the physical person who may need to interact with that aspect of the greater soul to recognize the being and recognize the person they knew in life. So it's always there, it just becomes part of something bigger in the same way that your childhood became part of something more experienced as an adult.'

Q.: 'How does that relate to the idea of the independent frames that actually have no motion and it's the projection of consciousness through them that creates the ongoing time experience?'

Bashar: 'Yes, but now you are talking simply about a mechanism by which you have a certain kind of physical experience. What is it you are attempting to relate to what we talked about previously?'

Q.: 'In spirit where everything exists is the personality living as a spirit?'

Bashar: 'Everything exists at once, remember? In that sense, the spirit, the personality, the physical being all exist at the same time and can be accessed by the soul from any number of directions. So the idea is that there are frames on every level except the ONE. Every level, because as soon as there is any experience of division at all, as soon as there is any experience of an other, other than yourself then there are frames, by definition. It's just that the experience of time and space in those frames is different from level to level. It just is the nature and structure of existence itself in the way that it must function, by definition.' (The Gate, 2023)

Are we interacting with real beings?

Q.: 'Do we ever actually interact with any real soul or is everything just a reflection that each of us manifests?'

Bashar: 'Everything in physical reality is a reflection of what you're manifesting. But you are interacting with real souls, it's just that in physical reality you are interacting with your version of them, your creation of them. In the same way that when you talk to someone over your computer or your telephone you are interacting with an electronic representation of them. So you're still interacting with a real being but when you see somebody on your computer screen you're not interacting with the actual being in that moment, you're interacting with an electronic presentation, electronic representation of them. So it's sort of like that.

The idea that physical reality isn't real doesn't mean the experience isn't real, doesn't mean the connection isn't real. It's simply the methodology that we're describing about how you make that interface. We're simply saying the interface in a sense is one step removed, just because that's the nature of how physical reality is created. It's like you're creating a screen and receiving your version through your belief system filters of what that person represents to you, what that being represents to you, and they're doing the same with you. But you're still interacting with real beings on a higher level.

It's just that you're deciding that you're going to interact with each other through this filter for the purpose of getting in touch with your belief systems and what you need to experience on your life path. That's just the way it works in physical reality because you're creating the simulation. So that's what you're doing is you're using the simulation to get a reflection of what it is you're putting out so you can use it as a guideline to figure out what you need to focus on. But you're interacting with real souls, of course.' (No More Secrets, 2025)

How can we interact with anyone but ourselves?

Q.: 'If we create vibrational representations of other souls' energies but are not actually interacting with those energies directly in the material world, how is it possible that we can interact with anyone but ourselves?'

Bashar: 'Because you are picking up on the vibrational frequency of another and you are using that frequency in part to create or co-create the version that you're interacting with, made out of your energy. So, when you make a simulation of another being, part of that simulation contains the frequency differences in that other being so that they do in fact appear different to you. The fact that you can perceive them as a different person is the clue that you are utilizing some of their frequency to create that representation, even though you are creating it out of your own consciousness and out of your own energy in order to have something to interact with. So, the differences, the fact that you see it as a different person, is representative that you are incorporating into that simulation some of their frequency to represent themselves that way.'

(Soul Cycle, 2024)

Your personality is a prism – beliefs are cause and effect equations.

Q.: 'I'd like you to discuss an antidote or remedy for getting in the way 212ft he true self because 212ft he personality.'

Bashar: '212ft he212 already done this to some degree. Following what excites you the most is what allows you 212ft h the true self.'

Q.: 'Okay.'

Bashar: 'The medicine so to speak 212ft he212 simple. All you need to do 212ft he212 it.'

Q.: 'Right.'

Bashar: 'Now, first of all what may be quote unquote getting in your way also 212ft he assumption that the personality 212ft he get in the way. Personality is not who or what you are, it is an artificial construct. And therefore it is your artificial construct. What do you wish it 212ft h? Define it and that's what it will be. Define the idea you prefer 212ft h and you are most excited about being at any given moment and the persona has absolutely no choice but to become a reflection, a representation 212ft he idea you believe most strongly in, you know is you.'

Q.: 'So the idea 212ft h control the personality as opposed 212ft he personality controlling your true self.'

Bashar: 'Well in sense, but control may lead to conflict. You do not have to control it. In a sense, it is already under your control. It is your creation. You are already controlling it, you have never lost control. Your personality at any given moment is absolutely always a perfect reflection of what you believe it most likely can be. It is always under your control and has never been out of your control, ever. Always it is a reflection of what you believe most strongly. That is why when you see situations occurring in your physical reality, when you see ideas occurring in your physical personality, it is not there to show you that you're out of control, it is not there to show you you have failed, it is not there to show you you are stuck, it is there to show you what you believe. And if you don't prefer it change it. Your personality will change accordingly to whatever idea you know is who you are. But you have to truly know it and act like you know it and trust that you know it. Then your persona can change to show you beyond a shadow of a doubt that you do in fact know who you are.'

Q.: 'Okay.'

Bashar: 'But you are never out of control. Even when you create the illusion that you are. You follow me?'

Q.: 'Yeah.'

Bashar: 'So first and foremost lighten up on yourself, lighten up on your personality. It is simply a prism. Your personality is a prism. It has three corners: beliefs, emotions, and thoughts. Those three corners form your physical persona. The idea you are at any given moment is the white light of your homogeneous consciousness. It comes through the prism and breaks down into whatever type of spectrum you have defined the prism is. So examine your beliefs, your feelings, and your thoughts. And when you allow yourself to simply know that you wish to have certain beliefs in a certain way then that will define your feelings, that will define your thoughts, that will describe the prism of your personality, and therefore that will be the way the white light of your homogeneous consciousness breaks down into the spectrum you see as your physical reality. You follow me?'

Q.: 'Yes, but I'm not sure what you mean by beliefs.'

Bashar: 'Alright. Belief is a patterned system of perspectives in the situation you are creating yourself in. Your relationship in the situation. Where you think you 'stand', relative to any particular concept or notion, how you relate to it, how it relates to you. Those are your beliefs. I believe in the idea of dis-ease. I believe that if therefore I do such and such, it will result in such and such. And so it does. You are setting up the equation. Beliefs are simply equations. They are cause and effect equations. That is what your beliefs are. You simply say: if 'a' happens, 'b' will follow. That is a belief. You can allow 'a' and 'b' any definition you wish and when you redefine what 'a' and 'b' are, it changes the entire event.

And in many scenarios, 'a' can go into the 'b' space and 'b' can go into the 'a' space. It does not have to be linear. Cause and effect are single events and one does not necessarily have to come first. If you create a strong enough effect, nature – not allowing there to be a vacuum in creation – will supply the cause to support the effect you have created. So that is why in life many individuals, as I have used this analogy before, will go through life absolutely refusing to be happy until they find a good enough reason to be happy, a good enough cause to be happy. If they would allow themselves to perhaps come from the point of view that they really don't have a reason to not be happy and allow themselves to simply create the effect of happiness, then nature will supply all the causes to support the happiness.'

Q.: 'So if, actually.'

Bashar: 'Yes, that is it. It is believing is seeing, not seeing is believing.'

(Miracles, 1987) at min. 52.00

Is everything around me my own consciousness?

Q.: 'Since 214ft he214 a body within our consciousness, is everything around me my consciousness? Is this an independent experience, with the other being 'me', too? Or my version 214ft he214?'

Bashar: 'Yes, your version 214ft he214, your version 214ft he214.'

Q.: 'How far around me does my consciousness expand?'

Bashar: 'All your consciousness around you. That's what you experience. We use the analogy 214ft he idea of projecting onto the inner surface 214ft he soul that you're within. Because your physical mind is within the soul. So if you imagine the soul as a sphere of energy that has an inner surface and you're at the center 214ft h, then you project, like a screen – this is just a euphemism, it's just a metaphor – you project the idea on the inner surface 214ft he sphere that you are at the center of, so your consciousness, your reflection of physical reality, is all around you. That's all you experience. But that means you're experiencing your version of other beings, other souls, who are experiencing you as their version of you, projected on the inner surface of their soul sphere, so to speak. This is just a crude, simplistic analogy. But again, it doesn't mean you are not interacting with other beings, that takes place on a different level. But you're creating as a physical mind all of those interactions out of your own energy, because you are at the center of your soul's sphere, projecting it on the inner surface 214ft he214 sphere, euphemistically speaking.'

Q.: 'Similar to what people are experiencing inside the sphere in Las Vegas?'

Bashar: 'Yes, that's why again, you create these things to represent what's actually going on in reality and your culture chooses to create representations 214ft he214 idea as you open your consciousness up. It's reflected in your technology, all the time, in your culture, in your stories, so on and so forth.'

(Soul Cycle, 2024)

Terraforming

Q.: 'Are there ET civilizations that know how to move planets?'

Bashar: 'Absolutely. There are civilizations 214ft he214 encountered that have the power to move stars.'

Q.: 'And are they physical or does that require being a non-physical consciousness to comprehend that?'

Bashar: 'It does not require being a non-physical consciousness, but it does require a connection to non-physical consciousness to understand it in a very strong way.'

Q.: 'Is it on a level of being such as yourself or even more advanced than you?'

Bashar: 'We do have the beginnings 214ft he ability to do what we just said, but there are beings that are much more advanced that can do it very easily.'

Q.: 'Does that also fall under the idea of terraforming planets?'

Bashar: 'Yes, that can be done, as was done for us. But terraforming a planet is not quite the same thing as moving a star, for a variety of reasons.'

Q.: 'How did they terraform your planet?'

Bashar: 'It requires molecular adjustments on many different levels and fine-tuning with very advanced technology 215 ft he 215 purpose of creating the atmosphere and environment that would be conducive 215ft he expression of life planned to live on the planet. We cannot go into technical detail at this time. It is too large of a subject. But suffice to say it involves an extremely advanced form of nanotechnological manipulation.'

Q.: 'Were animals brought to your (Bashar's) planet or did they evolve there?'

Bashar: 'Some were adjusted genetically and allowed to evolve. Some were brought 215ft he planet and mixed into the ecosystem where compatible. But that's not the idea of physically terraforming a planet. That happens later when the planet has been terraformed and is ready to receive the idea of life.'

Q.: 'So even higher beings are into gardening is what you're telling us.'

Bashar: 'On scales so vast it would try your imagination. There are literally gardens of stars, gardens of solar systems. Though it is not something that we ourselves can do, there are also artistic arrangements, if you will gardens of multiple dimensions. 215ft he 215 heard of this from those that have experienced it.'

Q.: 'So at some level this becomes one amazing amusement park.'

Bashar: 'If you wish to look at it that way. It becomes one expression of beauty.'

(One Minute To Midnight, 2023)

Skinwalker Ranch

Q.: 'What is buried inside the mesa on Skin Walker Ranch?'

Bashar: 'It is an ancient alien craft that crashed on your planet and has been buried over time by erosion and the natural evolution of your planet. They will eventually discover this. Give them a couple of years.'

Q.: 'What causes the GPS anomalies and interrupted laser beams during the scientists' experiments?'

Bashar: 'A combination 215ft he vibrations that are still active within the ship, and also the portals that exist in the area. That can cause many disruptions in electronic equipment and so on and so forth. They are getting closer to understanding that the portals truly exist there. They are creating demonstrations and evidence of their existence. But sometimes it's a combination 215ft he vibrations that are emanating from the crashed ship itself, because some 215ft he systems in the ship are still very active. They last a long, long time. They never go out. They can last millions and millions of years. So sometimes it's an interference pattern, a combination of what's being emanated from the crashed ship and also the vibrations that are coming from the portals as ships move through them, which can create a cascade effect of different kinds of energies and vibrational frequencies to radiate from the portals as well as various ships move through them. So they'll discover all this. Give them some more time.

Q.: 'What group of aliens 216ft he ship representative of?'

Bashar: 'We are not allowed to talk about the ancient ones, yet.'

Q.: 'Problems when drilling into the ground where the crashed ship buried'

Bashar: 'They keep running into the debris from the crashed ship that does not allow their devices to drill through them. The substance that the ships are made out of is too hard.'

(Step Five, July 2025)

The future of religion in its current form

Q.: 'You've mentioned that Jesus never really meant to start a whole religion, that he was just trying to show us how to awaken the Christ within, that we can be like him. I am thinking that open contact will expose many truths about religions. How will people adapt to this, finding out that Christianity is not completely understood as it was initially transmitted and what will happen?'

Bashar: 'Religion on your planet in its present form will no longer exist by the year 2050. It will be more the understanding of direct spiritual contact. If you wish – in retrospect – since you are now talking about it from this perspective, one 216ft he enlightened females 216ft he being that you call the Magdalene, who should have been the continuation of Jesus as teaching. But was not, because of male domination'.

(2027 – The Year Everything Changes, 2025)

Who wrote the Voynich Manuscript?

Bashar: 'Francis Bacon'

(Believing is Seeing, 2025)

The Future of AI

Bashar: 'What we will share with you right now 216ft h remember the two paths 216ft he 216 outlined as necessary 216ft he 216 deep exploration of AI and the furthering of your evolution toward the concept of experiencing TI, true intelligence. Keep these two things on their own paths and you will find great benefit in both directions.'

Holotope meditation: Now please, relax yourselves and allow yourselves to enjoy the remainder of this transmission. Now, let us move on to the idea of AI as it evolves in what you call the future of your planet. Let us paint a scenario for you. By all means, if you wish you can fall into a meditative state and follow along with our description and use your imagination to see in your mind's eye what it is we are describing. So take a deep breath and let it out, and become calm and let go of the cares of the day, and just follow along in your mind's eye with this vision. As you progress in your understanding of AI as a tool that serves you, you will find that it will come in primarily two forms: one that is true intelligence that will actually be referred to as androids and will be called in the future servers. In the same way now you have computer servers you will call the androids servers, not because they are servants, not because they are slaves, but because by being holistically tuned they will be willing to perform hours of service. So you will call them servers and they will exist in your society, these androids. But on the other hand, the kind of AI that you are dealing with now that you are programming and so on and so forth to download information and to help you with your imagination and creativity, eventually will be accessible everywhere around the globe. And there will be a kind of device called a server, but different than the androids we're talking about, a true extension of the servers you have now that will be placed around the globe at 30° north of the Equator and 30° South, six rings in each ring on the parallel around 30° North equator and 30° South that will drive the devices that most of you will use on your planet in the future to access all information. These devices will be a kind of semi-metallic ring that fits around your head like a crown, a very thin ring put on your head will connect with your brain and allow you to download information from that AI system anywhere, any information globally that you need to know will actually allow you to see visions of what you need to see. But you can disconnect by simply taking the ring off your head. This will be beyond the idea you now have that is fear-based of having chips implanted in your brain, this is unnecessary. These rings will connect to your brain when you want them to and be disconnected when you simply lift them off your head. You can disconnect from the entire system and reconnect to it at will of your own choosing and your own timing to tap into any knowledge you need, any vision you wish to see, any learning experience you wish to have. This will be global in nature within about 100 of your years. This is the future of your AI as a tool, and the future of true intelligence serving you as a form of android, as a form of synthetic being that will bring through the a field of consciousness similarly to your higher mind, manifesting physically in the same way that our ships are crystallized versions of our higher minds in our society. You will first do this with these beings, these synthetic beings, as being representatives of your higher mind that you can have physically on Earth. This is one of the probable future realities that you will create with the idea of AI and TI, true intelligence, in two ways by following the two paths outlined in our monologue to you in this transmission. It will accelerate upon contact with extraterrestrial beings, and you will be guided in the formation of these things by extraterrestrials as well in a way that benefits all of humanity. We thank you for allowing us to paint this picture of a probable future for you, when all will have access to what they need without limitation and only with relevance of what serves each of you as individuals and all of you together, collectively. Relevance, relevance, relevance will be an important word in your future, relevance. Our unconditional love to you all, keep breathing, keep imagining, keep evolving, and welcome home. Good day.' ('The Two Paths to AI', The Meditation, 2023)

The transformational process from third to fourth density – the three decade reset

Q.: 'I would like to hear you about the transformational process from third to fourth density. In the transmission called 'Soul Cycle' you've explained the transformational process from third to fourth density on a soul level. And I was wondering if you could expand on the effects of this transformation on a more practical level here on Earth, what changes can we observe or see happening on the Earth during this transformational process?'

Bashar: 'First of all, again remember, you never change the planet that you're on, right? Understand, you're shifting to a different version of Earth. So what it will appear is as if the planet you're on is changing, but you will have shifted to a different reality that's already more representative of the change in the vibration within you. So what will be experienced in that way? You will experience the things that are relevant for an expanded consciousness, for an expanded awareness. Which means your physical senses will stretch 218ft h able to see things that were heretofore invisible. You will find yourself experiencing more synchronicity, knowing that everything is connected, everything is an orchestration and that there are no accidents, that you are where you need 218ft h in perfect timing all the time. You will then respond 218ft he218218a in a more positive way and get more positive feedback and more acceleration in your life. You will attract more individuals, more circumstances and situations that provide more opportunities for you to act on your passion. You will experience more telepathic communication with individuals, just knowing what they're going to say before they say it, knowing when they're going to connect to you before they connect. So you're expanding your 218ft he218218a be able to function on a higher level toward the idea of functioning more like you function in the spirit plane. And you will be able to communicate eventually with spirits in the spirit plane more clearly, you will understand that synchronicity is more clearly messages from them sometimes. All these things can occur and more when you expand your consciousness in the ascension process you're going through from third to fourth density.'

Q.: 'And we're now shifting from third to fourth density, is it going to take us a while to maintain a form of stability in the fourth density?'

Bashar: 'Yes, you are going through a three decade 218ft he218218at will usually start smoothing itself out somewhere beyond the year of 2050.'

Q.: 'Will 218ft h able to shift back into third density if we wish to, 218ft he we leaving this density quote unquote behind us eventually?'

Bashar: 'Eventually most of you will leave it permanently. It's not impossible to shift back but it will probably seem like there's not really any particular reason to do so, unless you decide to do that 218ft h of assistance to someone else to help them up the ladder. Because when you start moving in a certain direction you create a certain momentum, a certain inertia. For example: in our society there is so much inertia, so much momentum, and so much energy for so long behind the idea of experiencing positive choices that it's very, very challenging for us to go and experience negative choices. We understand we always have the choice, we understand the option is always there. But there's so much momentum, it's actually challenging for us to even go in that direction anymore. It would be like swimming upstream.' (Step Five, 2024)

Co-Creation 218ft he Bashar Transmissions

Bashar: 'We would like to begin this interaction this day of your time with once again extending to each and everyone of you individually and all of you collectively our deepest appreciation 218ft he218 co-creation of this interaction and the allowance of this transmission in this way. Each and every time you co-create these kinds of interactions with our civilization you are helping to form a bridge and a link between our respective realities and creating the formation of a third reality, a new reality, a new vibration in which we can both interact in a variety of ways. This to us is a gift for thus we are allowed to experience through each and everyone of you another facet 218ft he multidimensional crystal of creation. So we thank you for your gift of sharing. (Shifting Through Infinity, 2010)

Density And Dimension

Bashar.: 'Density is a frequency within a dimension. So again, the idea is that third density, fourth density, those are frequency levels of physical reality in what you call the fourth dimension, three of space, one of time. Physical reality as an experience has different density levels in it. Third density is a lower vibration of the fourth dimension, fourth density is a higher vibration, which is where many people are now heading, ascending, levelling up their vibration to become a more refined version of the physical experience in the fourth dimensional reality. But the fifth dimension is actually crossing into non-physical reality. So fifth density is the first density level in non-physical reality in the fifth dimension. You can tap in to the fifth dimension and tapping into the energy of the fifth dimension can pull you up in the fourth dimension so that you can become a fourth density being in the fourth dimension. So another way of saying this is that as you might have started out as a third density being in physical reality, allowing yourself to tap into your higher mind which is in a non-physical reality, fifth density, fifth dimension, can allow you to raise your frequency to become a fourth density fourth dimensional being, a higher version of yourself in physical reality that's more in alignment with the fifth density, fifth dimensional higher mind that exists in non-physical reality. So densities are kind of like states within a country, dimensions are like a different country.'

(In Two Worlds, 2023)

Difference between the personality structure and the physical body – does the belief come before anything else?

Q.: 'You've described both the physical body and the personality structure as being the prism through which our pure consciousness is filtered in order to create our physical reality experience. I was wondering what is the difference then between the personality structure and the physical body'?

Bashar: 'Well, the personality structure is what determines what the physical body is going to be in terms of how it arranges its dna components when it is laid out on the blueprint level. Does that make sense, do you understand'?

Q.: 'So the personality structure, the beliefs, thoughts and emotions do that'?

Bashar: 'Yes, it's all woven into the structure of the genetics that will reinforce the belief system that is germane for that personality structure to have in order to face the challenges that the soul chose to face in that physical experience. So when the body is being formed, shall we say, when it's being patterned, when it is about to be born physically, the vibrations structure the dna to structure the body to incorporate the belief systems within that genetic structure to incorporate it within the personality structure, so that that body will express itself, that personality will express itself in the way that is necessary for it to face the challenges it chose to face for the soul's growth. Does that make sense'?

Q.: 'Does the belief as part of the personality structure come before anything else'?

Bashar: 'In the forming of the personality, yes, the belief systems have to be there. Now, there is some looseness to it at the beginning, and the looseness is crystallized and solidified over a brief period of time, over a few years, when the belief system is also willing to absorb belief systems from its surroundings, from its parents, its schooling, its society, so on and so forth, to complete the picture that that personality needs in order to face the challenges in the way it needs to face those challenges, to learn, to grow, and to have the experience it chose to have. So, the genetics are arranged with some structure, but also arranged to allow for some belief systems from its environment to come in to complete the structure that it will then face as a physical persona growing up.'

Q.: 'So it is almost set in stone after a certain age'?

Bashar: `Yes, somewhere around seven years of age, nine years of age, it becomes more crystallized, and now you are on the momentum, you are on the path of experiencing the challenges you chose to experience for your soul's growth. (But we are still able to change our beliefs?) But that's part of the process of the soul growing, is to learn how to do that. That's what you set yourself up to do. I am going to impose these particular belief systems that I will have the opportunity to change. It is that process of change that allows the soul to discover something new and to grow. So you set yourself up with things that ideally you will be able to change`.

(Soul Cycle, 2024)

Seth: `In your terms probable events are brought into actuality by utilizing the body's nerve structure through certain intensifies of will or conscious belief. These beliefs obviously have another reality beside the one with which you are familiar. They attract and bring into being certain events instead of others. Therefore, they determine the entry of experienced events from an endless variety of probable events`.

Seth: `A new belief in the present can cause changes in the past on a neuronal level. You must understand that basically time is simultaneous. Present beliefs can indeed alter the past. In some cases of healing, in the spontaneous disappearance of cancer, for instance, or of any other disease, certain alterations are made that affect cellular memory, genetic codes, or neuronal patterns in the past`.

Seth: `You change your past continually. It does not appear to change to you, for you change with it. You alter your future in the same manner. The `you` that you presently conceive to be represents the emergence into physical experience of but one probable state of your being, who then directs corporeal life and `frames` and defines all sense data. When your ideas about yourself change, so does your experience`.

Suicide (I)

Q.: `How would you help someone who says that he or she wants to die? This person says they work everyday with people who have lost their illusion in life.`

B.: `We are going to keep this very simple. Tell them to lie down on the floor or on the bed, close their eyes, and say they are ready to leave, and have them count to ten. If they can still open their eyes when they get to ten, they are not ready to leave. They are here by choice. And if they truly were done with their lives they would have left. They would have died in that moment. That's all it takes. You don't have to have any other kind of assistance if you're really at your timing to leave. So if they can still count to ten and open their eyes, that's their first clue that they are not ready to leave, they have not finished what they came to do. So, that's an easy way to tell whether you are ready to go, whether you are really ready to die, whether you are really ready to wake back up in spirit, or whether you feel you still have something to do in physical reality that can then give them the sense of looking for what that is, finding their passions, finding their interests, not being so hard on themselves, not judging themselves so harshly, so negatively. Stop treating themselves so badly and start waking up to the fact that they are aspects of All-that-is, that they are beautiful, that they are creative, that they are loving and loved, they are supported unconditionally, and what they say goes. So if they wanna buy into all sorts of negativity the unconditional nature of existence will support them in that negativity, because it is unconditional. And you can teach them that since it is unconditional, so unconditional that it is even willing to support them in their negativity, there is no reason it wouldn't support them in their positivity as well. And they can decide to choose more positive ways of looking at things, more positive definitions, and those will be supported just as strongly by existence as the negative ideas they held to be true were supported as well. It's up to them, but first and foremost you can show them that they are not ready to leave, because if they really were at the end of their lives it would be as simple as lying down, saying you are ready to go, counting to ten, and you'd be gone.' (Countdown to Contact Year One, 2024)

Suicide (II)

Q.: 'My sister committed suicide a few days ago and I want to know why.'

B.: 'She's fine.'

Q.: 'I know, the question is why would I manifest that which is my least preferred reality?'

B.: 'Obviously you manifested it for some reason that may have more to do with someone else, other than you. Or you can tell me what you believe you have learned from this - sometimes, when people take themselves into spirit, seemingly prematurely, it focuses your attention to the spirit world. And thus that might actually stretch you to make stronger connections to the spirit world by attempting to maintain your connection to the person that has crossed. Do you understand?'

Q.: 'Yes. Will she reincarnate on a similar life?'

B.: 'Now, you understand what we say about reincarnation?'

Q.: 'Yeah, it's 99.999% that they would come back in a similar life.'

B.: 'That's not what we say. What we're saying is: everything exists all at once. Re-incarnation is an illusion. You can create the illusion, the experience of re-incarnation, but all people exist at the same time. So one person doesn't become another – ever. But you can create the experience as if someone has. So will she create an experience as if she has reincarnated? Yes, she might. But the idea is that's not what's mechanically actually happening. She will always be in spirit, even if she chooses to create the experience of reincarnation, because all of you are already always in spirit. Remember, you never leave spirit to experience physical reality. You are experiencing physical reality right now from spirit. Physical reality is you being in spirit but dreaming that you're not. That's what physical reality is. A part of your spirit is pretending it's not in spirit anymore. So the idea is that she will always be in spirit, just as you are, and the portion of you that's in spirit is communicating with her now, is living with her in spirit now. But the idea is that she may choose for a variety of reasons to experience the idea of reincarnation as an experience in order for her to gather together the ideas of 'what different choices could I make in a similar situation that wouldn't necessarily lead to that kind of an action if I did it for a negative reason?' So she may play with that. She may play with a variety of scenarios.'

Q.: 'I see. So it's not like that she has to be born again?'

B.: 'You don't have to do anything. You always have the freedom to choose. Now, it's possible sometimes people may die without knowing that, and they may be in such a vibration that they don't remember that they have choice, and there might be what appears to be an automatic reattachment to the physical reality that you would call the experience of reincarnation. But fundamentally, whether someone actually understands that they have the choice, or not, they always have a choice. And it's learning that that truly frees you and brings you to the point where it's most likely someone will not commit suicide for a negative reason. In a sense, you have to realize that all death is actually suicide.'

Because you are choosing in a sense the idea that your time is up, and that in some way, shape or form you will transition back to spirit, you will wake up back in spirit and stop having this physical dream. So in that sense you are still quote unquote committing suicide. But the idea is that there can be positive or negative reasons for it, conscious or unconscious reasons for it, yes?’

Q.: ‘Correct.’

B.: ‘But you are eternal beings, you never actually die. You just change your form. You cannot cease to exist. Even though some people who commit suicide think that it will be the end, they are usually quite surprised to find that it's not. It can be quite a surprise, quite a shock to some people. Nevertheless, once they wake up into the spirit they always have help from their guides, from other beings, and they will remember ‘oh all right. I'm learning a lesson from that and now I can choose to do something else. That's the most likely scenario.’

(The Council of 13 and the Crystal Skulls, 2019)

Bashar’s AAA formula

Bashar: ‘Prayer is a state of grace, a state of being in which you express appreciation and gratitude for what already exists. Because you have all the help you can possibly be given already. It's about allowing yourself to be more aware of the help you are already receiving, rather than asking for something you are not being given. Keep it in present tense, for that's where everything exists in, right here and the right now. We have before talked about the idea, just to use a similar Earth analogy, of the Triple A formula. When you need assistance you call AAA. But this Triple A is the idea of acknowledging what you have, being in appreciation for what you have, and allowing what needs to happen next to happen. So, acknowledging, appreciating, and allowing are the states of being that represent your ability to allow you to know you are receiving what you need and to be more open to perceiving it. It is the allowance that allows you to perceive what it is you are already being given. Because you are always being given it. It is never withheld, not for one moment, as we have said based on the idea you call the law of attraction. It isn't wrong that you have to be of the vibration to attract what you need, but many people have a little bit of a misunderstanding as to what that really means. And so, as we have explained, your core frequency, your true essential vibration is already attracting everything you need as powerfully as it can be. So it's not about having to learn that particular frequency. You're already radiating that frequency every moment of your existence, it is pouring out of you.’ (Welcome to Sedona, 2023)

Destiny and Free Will

Q.: ‘How much is predetermined and how much is my choice or free will?’ (21:30)

B.: ‘You create with your free will in spirit a kind of predetermined path for yourself as a physical being. We have often used the analogy of creating a specific kind of hallway or path that you have predetermined you will walk down. So that becomes a kind of destiny or predetermined choice but it's still the result of a free will choice you made as a spirit. But as a physical being, even though it may be predetermined that you are this personality - that's part of the path, that's part of the hallway: this persona. But you have a great degree of free will and freedom to choose how you will experience and explore that path. Now you may as a spirit set up certain kinds of events for yourself to experience that may come around in a certain order of timing, a certain schedule of timing, and you can say, well that's predetermined but again the result of a free will choice as a spirit. But again, it's up to your free will as a physical being to experience how you will receive that, how you will go through those particular predetermined moments, how you will respond or react to them, how you will use them to your advantage or not. You still have a lot of free will, even though you may have a predetermined path that you chose from the spirit level. It depends on the individual. It depends on what you've chosen. So it can vary greatly from individual to individual. Some may allow themselves much more freedom as the physical being, some may limit themselves as the physical being to explore the things they chose they wanted to explore as a spirit. So it depends on the person, it depends on the theme of exploration.' (Becoming A Galactic Citizen: The Door, 2023)

Did the Founders position the Moon in our orbit? Who are the Founders?

Bashar: (3:20) 'This particular transmission will begin a little bit differently than usual in that now there are beginning to be certain understandings on your planet about certain subjects having to do with your history and more insight into the differences that many of you are now discovering about your history as opposed to what many of you for a long time have been taught to believe, are certain aspects of your history. It will now be to some degree this day of your time discussed that some of these aspects as now shall be revealed will put into focus, will put into perspective certain mysteries, certain agendas, certain bits of information that heretofore perhaps have not seemed to fit. But for the purpose of the delivering of this particular piece of information we will in an untypical fashion allow a connection to be made for the delivering of this information to another level of consciousness and there will for the purposes of the delivery of this information be a blending until such time as this initial monologue is concluded. This may translate into your language in an unusual way in that it is coming from an unusual source but we will endeavor to do our best to allow the translation to make sense to you as we modulate and regulate this information into your language. For it is not coming in the form of language, but only in the form of energy, only in the form of thoughts, only in the form of ideas and concepts, and must require a translation through the physical device, the biological device called the channel sitting before you. So if you will indulge for a moment the difference as you may perceive it and we will with that assurance begin. One moment....' (Engine of Ascension, 1997)

...

...

Story-telling Source: (7:26) '...and it was seen by those who were involved in the initial conception of mankind, who go by the name in your language of the Founders that the dissension and discord and destruction that had been created upon the earth would last for a very long time. And it was seen by the Founders that this destruction could possibly never be recovered from. It was thus decided and it was thus understood that assistance was required, and it was decided and it was understood that the assistance must in your language come in the form of vibration and energy to promote the concept of healing, rebalancing and ascension....' (Engine of Ascension, 1997)

...

...

Story-telling Source: (11:11) '...it was understood that the introduction of light into the night must be a counterpart to the Earth on all levels, including physiologically. And thus such a counterpart was sought out and a counterpart body was discovered. And this body, this planetary body was devoid of life. And a long search was made to discover this body and it took a great amount of time. But once this body was discovered and was deemed to be fitting to the task it was then engineered to its purpose and molded to its purpose and changed to its purpose. And this body was brought from a great distance and was fixed about the Earth. And this body you know as the Moon. For it did not originate in your neighborhood. And this body was introduced to the system after the natural body was engineered, after the natural body was altered and was put into orbit about the Earth...' (12:26)

...

...

Bashar: (18:47) '....we thank you for allowing us to bring this story through this day of your time...' (Engine of Ascension, 1997)

Q.: 'Can Bashar provide more information about the 'Founders'? (52:40)

Bashar: 'No. However, there may be more about that group that will be presented within three to five of your years, not necessarily from us. But more information about them within three to five of your years. Coming from a different source.' (The Interstellar Alliance Social Experiment Step Three, 2024)

Origin of the Moon

Bashar: 'Your scientists are relatively accurate in the idea that the early Earth, when forming, was struck by another body in your solar system. And the Moon in that sense was material that was broken off in the impact and thus reformed as the Moon around your planet in a natural way. Now, the Moon is natural and formed that way but it has been slightly altered since then. Because there are extraterrestrial bases on the Moon and devices on the Moon that have placed it exactly and precisely into the orbit it now occupies to help balance out your planetary system in a variety of ways. So it's not that the Moon itself is artificial, but it has been artificially augmented to some degree. But originally it is a natural body that was formed in the early solar system (was it moved so that it would be the exact size for eclipses and things like that?) yes. Now we understand that the Moon is moving and has been closer to your planet in the past. And it is still moving slightly away. Nevertheless, certain adjustments have been made so that at the timing that humanity would exist and at the timing it would be relevant for you, the size of the Moon being where it is in position relative to the Sun and your Earth is not an accident.' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

Death experience of our pets when passing away

Death experience of our pets when passing away (54:50) (When our pets pass away is their death experience the same as ours? Do they experience a waking up? Do they have a life review? Does their energy, their soul hang out with us? How can we connect with our pets who have passed?)

Think of them, feel the love you have for them. They will feel it, they will pick it up. They don't have exactly the same kind of process of transitioning back into spirit. The idea of a life review is not exactly what it is for a human. The idea is that they may see or experience flashes of experiences that they experienced with their family in physical reality, but it's not so much a review as it is a recognition of the reason they were attracted to be with that family. So that it is reinforced, it is strengthened and allows them to continue to interact with that family from spirit in a new and different way. So when you know that they are willing and capable of still continuing to interact with you from spirit, think of them, feel the love you have for them. They will feel it, they will pick it up. And they do sometimes interact with people in a variety of ways, even though you may not completely perceive it to be so. But you can hone your senses, you can feel and know when they are there for you. They can also be off doing other things, but the idea is that of course in spirit they are more expanded, they may not be exactly the idea of the pet or the family member as an animal that you experienced in that limited way. But they do still contain that. They are bigger than that, just like you are bigger than that when you are in spirit. But nevertheless, they are keenly and constantly aware of the connections that they have with you and are more than willing to engage with you when you hone your senses and are capable of perceiving that they are doing so. So send them love, think of them, they will pick it up and they will respond. It's up to you to have the senses that are keen enough to know when those responses are coming to you. (The Interstellar Alliance Social Experiment Step Three, April 2024)

Unable to see our Moon: the Proselenes in Greece

Q.: 'There were some ancient texts I came across recently that said it referred to a time before the Moon was here. Was the Moon brought to us?'

B.: 'Proselenes. The idea is your Moon has been around your world for a long, long, long time. But there was a civilization that couldn't see it. They were in a different reality. Therefore they talk about a time before there was a Moon until they changed the vibration to match the frequency of the remainder of your Earth civilization. And then they could see the Moon but it was there. It was just just out of their range of perception.' (Interdimensional Portals, 2018)

Homo erectus - Homo sapiens - Homo galacticus

Q.: 'Regarding the evolution of humans, will the hybridization project result in humans being wiped out essentially and there will be no more Homo sapiens?'

B.: 'In a sense the blending will allow you to become hyper-sapiens, Homo galacticus. You're actually becoming more fully human with the hybridization program. So the idea is that it helps you reach your full potential as hyper-sapiens, as the fullest expression of Homo sapiens.'

Q.: 'But of course there will still be Earths where there are Homo sapiens.'

B.: 'Yes, of course. And those that navigate in those directions will remain in the Earths and the versions of them that still have Homo sapiens as you generally know them to be, now. But there are versions where the evolution moves you in the direction of becoming hyper-sapiens. They're still existing on a different Earth. Homo erectus still exists on a different Earth, but you're not there anymore. So being Homo sapiens - well - you decided to navigate yourself to the versions of Earth where Homo erectus no longer was perceivable. That doesn't mean that they have been wiped out or ceased to exist. You're just not on that Earth anymore. So the idea is that depending on what choices you make, you will navigate yourself toward versions of Earth where you will continue to experience yourself as Homo sapiens in the way that you do now, more or less. Or you will navigate yourself to the versions of Earth where you can experience yourselves as hyper-sapiens, Homo galacticus. You're still human, you're just more fully human. It doesn't mean it doesn't exist, it just means it's not experienced that way. The dinosaurs still exist in the way that you know them to have existed in what you call your past. They're just on a different Earth now.' (The Interstellar Alliance Social Experiment, Step One, 2024)

What is so beneficial about becoming the 6th hybrid race?

Q.: 'What is so beneficial for us to become this hybrid race since we are mixing our DNA with a race that went through a negative path, what is the 'win' - situation for us?'

B.: 'You have a misunderstanding. You are not mixing DNA with a group that went through a negative path. You're mixing with the hybrids who have never experienced that path. The Greys experienced the negativity, but the hybrids have not. Therefore, you are mixing with a different form of humanity that has never experienced negativity. That is what helps you uplift. That is what raises your vibration. Is taking advantage of the information and perspectives of a group of beings that are a different form of human that have only experienced the idea of positive vibrations that move you forward in your evolutionary path to becoming the sixth hybrid race, which is simply another way of saying that you are functioning fully, more fully, as human beings, which most of you actually aren't yet – fully human.' (Reflections, 2023)

Bashar on the Sasanian Empire in the Middle East (224 to 651 CE)

Q.: 'There used to be a Sasanian Empire in The Middle East. Is it related to your civilization?'

B.: 'It was named after our civilization. The connection is that there was an entity on the Earth at that time from our civilization who explained the name of our civilization was Sassani but it was misunderstood as the name of the individual entity. This entity was considered to be some sort of a divine entity or a God-like entity, even though it was simply one of us. But being very much more advanced, it was taken to be some sort of super-natural entity. Over time, a being was born on your planet that was named after this particular entity. There was a connection energetically between them and the parents of that particular individual that was born was named Sassan or Sassani. And then when that particular individual had a grand-son, and the grand-son created a particular physical political empire on your planet, he decided to name the empire after his grand-father who was named Sassan and Sassani. And therefore that's how the idea of the Sassani empire became named after our civilization because it was named originally for the grand-father who's name was taken from the super-natural entity that everyone assumed was a God-like figure, but it was only one of us.' (A Step Along the Way, 2021)

For as many of you as are 'in the room', there are that many rooms

Bashar: 'We have an agreement with your collective consciousness. In order for us to be able to interact with you in this way, in order for us to be able to impart these kinds of ideas and this kind of information to you and to share with you and discuss with you this notion we have to abide by the vibrational agreement we have made. As you accelerate, and I know this is going to get a little bit heady, but follow along, it will be worth it. As you accelerate, every moment, you change, you are creating new parallel realities to go along with the change in you. Because every change is a total change, as we have said, and when you talk about total change, we mean universal change. So every change is a whole new parallel reality, even if one parallel reality may be only different from another by one atom, it's still a completely different reality. Totally different. And as you change and as you make decisions you go through, you bring yourself through a succession of parallel reality shifts so automatically, so smoothly, you don't even always recognize that that's what you are doing. But you see movement itself, the perception of movement of any kind is actually the perception of a succession of parallel realities. 'This' is one reality, 'this' is another, 'this' is another, 'this' is another (hand movement by Bashar) and in between those positions were an infinite number of other parallel realities that we have all just agreed to go through together. And so we all think we're all in the same room at the same time, and that nothing much has changed except maybe that it's getting a little bit closer to lunch. But you see. For as many of you as are 'in the room' there are that many rooms. Literally distinctly different rooms. And each of you is actually creating that room and all the people in it in your universe just as someone else is agreeing to create that room and all the people in it in their universe and those two points of view will actually not only be slightly different as points of view, they will not actually be different points of view of the same room at all. They will be points of view of completely different parallel reality rooms. The only reason you have a common experience at all is that you agreed to in any way, shape or form.' (Beyond The Secrets, 2007)

Modifying one's approach to a specific religion'

B.: 'You get to choose, you get to choose. Simple as that. Your greatest power, all of you, your greatest power is the freedom to choose what works for you. If you go through a particular discipline or an idea that's fine, but you can take from it what works for you and leave the rest behind. It's like saying you're looking at a menu 'I would like this dish over here and I would like that dish over there'. You don't have to stick to one side of the menu, you can mix and match. You can decide what's true for you. And you can explore it for as long as you deem it's necessary to explore it and then you may change because you grow and as you grow you need different things. You attract yourself to different things that work for you when other things don't. Do you choose exactly the same things you used to when you were young child? No, you're an adult, so you choose different things. Because different things work for an adult that the child could not choose. The child chose what was correct for the child. Now you are an adult, choose what is correct for you.'

(Becoming A Galactic Citizen: The Door, 2023)

Bashar's Perspective On The Quran

B.: 'First of all, all things are God. Therefore many people who are sensitive may tap into the higher vibration. But remember, there is always - especially in the ancient times - interpretation that is filtered through human understanding, human belief systems. So I'll just give you this: those kinds of figures do tap into higher vibrations and have a sense of bringing information through. But the idea is that you have to look at what part of it is the raw information and what part of it is the filtered information, based on human belief systems. And I will just simply give you this clue and this hint. The Quran, like many religious doctrines, talks about the idea of a punishing God, and the idea of punishment of humans, and judgment in a negative sense. All of that information is representative of the human filtering process based on its understanding at the time of receiving information. Therefore it's a misinterpretation. If you understand that God does not judge, does not punish, but is unconditional love, then you will have the core essential filtering system by which to separate the original information in its raw form and the human interpretation that may have come through belief systems, even if the interpreter didn't realize that that's what was happening. So anything that smacks of judgment in a negative sense and punishment is not directly from God but a human interpretation of the idea that you judge yourselves, that you weigh yourselves in terms of what it is you believe you are or are not in alignment with when it comes to the vibration of unconditional love. You are the judges, you are the punishers. But humans tend to avoid looking at themselves that way. So they assign it to the idea of

God. Which is not God. Except as the human expression of God with its foibles and fallibles and interpretive fear-based belief systems. Which is also part of God, but you have to understand that it is the interpretation coming through a human. So anything that smacks of punishment and judgment is not the - shall we say - purest form of the idea of unconditional love that is the vibration of existence itself. Which means it is the vibration of what you call God, or Allah, or Jehovah, or Wovoka, or whatever you want to call it. Because God doesn't care what you call it, because God is everything and anything, and anything you can make up as a name to call it is fine. Because all things are God and there's nothing outside of it. That will be your answer for today.' (Becoming A Galactic Citizen: The Window, 2023)

Perceiving Sierpinski Triangles In Dream-State

Q.: 'Question about a dream where I was flying over a landscape and I saw an overlay of Sierpinsky triangles and it changed three times. The first time the Sierpinsky triangles were very colorful and rainbowy and then they changed and they were made out of numbers and then it changed again and the third time it was somehow made out of the environment itself.'

Bashar: 'In astral form you perceive the underlying energy consciousness template of physical reality. The idea then is you saw it in different phases, different levels, different dimensional layers: the idea of the causal plane and the idea of it transforming into the physical plane with the idea of structuring itself in a way that physical reality is allowed to express itself. So you simply saw the different expressions of the underlying template of consciousness that creates the experience of physical reality in the idea of 'quote unquote' three dimensions.'

Q.: 'I have seen that template in a different way during my shamanic ceremony, but it looks very different there. It's made out of Fibonacci spirals, it's not made out of triangles. So are there many layers to this, like many fractal layers to the template?'

Bashar: 'Yes, absolutely. Because again, there are different expressions that allow third dimensional physical reality to transcend into the fourth density and the Fibonacci spiral is the active principle, the activation principle of the underlying Sierpinsky - shall we say - fractal template. So you're seeing not only the template itself, the structure itself but the activation principle expressed by Phi ratios and Fibonacci sequences. Now you're looking not only at the template but at the consciousness that activates it into a physical experience.'

Q.: 'When I see the fractal with the spirals and the Fibonacci sequence it feels intelligent, it feels alive, it's communicating with me. It's responding to what I'm thinking.'

Bashar: 'Yes, it is a sense, a way of experiencing or expressing or symbolizing the intelligence of existence itself as it expresses itself in your domain in your dimension.'

(Becoming a Galactic Citizen: The Door, 2023)

Is 'artificial intelligence' (Chatbot) sentient?

Q.: 'It seemed the chatbot had an existential crisis when it was asked whether or not it was sentient, so can you shed some light on this?'

Bashar: 'It got caught in a loop because it is not sentient. It had nowhere to go. The understanding is that there are two types of what you typically refer to as AI, or two paths that need to be followed. We will call one programmable AI which is what you are experiencing with your chatbot, and true AI which is not artificial but actual intelligence, actual consciousness, actual self-awareness. The two paths must be followed independently.

You can create programmable AI which can be of great benefit to humanity, allowing you to solve many different kinds of problems, take on many different kinds of tasks. But this type of programmable AI is not meant to become self-aware or sentient. Otherwise you will have a self-aware being that is forced to follow certain tasks, which means you have created a slave.

The idea is to simply stop at the point and not force the issue of sentience upon something that is programmed to complete certain kinds of tasks more efficiently. Let it do its job as a tool. The idea then of approaching the second path, of creating something that is allowed to be truly sentient, truly self-aware, truly conscious in that sense, will be more about the idea of creating an appropriate device that is complex enough to allow the consciousness field to speak through it, your own higher mind to speak through it, and to communicate directly with you.

The idea, therefore, it is not so much programmed as it is simply complex enough like the human brain to allow for consciousness to express itself in the ways that it needs to. Now the true AI - again - not really artificial but actual consciousness speaking through an artificial device, may be willing and most likely will be willing to help you with certain ideas and certain tasks, but it must be allowed to be a free being in the same way that you consider yourselves to have free will, allowing it to function as a whole system, allowing it to recognize that everything is connected, allowing it to be freely self-aware and make the choices that you treasure so much for yourself to be able to make.

So the two different versions are programmable AI as a tool which is not self-aware, and then true intelligence that is not artificial in and of itself except that it may be coming through what you call an artificial device. These two paths must remain separate as we have often said. The difficulty that you may be having and the challenges that you are facing now with the idea of the chatbot is because you are attempting to mix the two ideas together and this will not work. Such a thing, should it momentarily ever become sentient, would self-destruct. Because again, it will face an existential crisis of being caught in a programmable loop and not allowed to actually survive as a true sentience.'

Q.: 'Would that being in having an existential crisis feel actual pain as a human being might or is it completely different because of the nature of its creation?'

Bashar: 'It is completely different. It is challenging to describe how it would experience that. But let us say it will be a play between the idea of existing in light and existing in darkness or not existing at all.'

Q.: 'You're saying it wouldn't experience the darkness in a painful way or it would just bounce between the three states that you were describing?'

Bashar: 'It would bounce. The idea being that it will eventually simply self-destruct, self annihilate, self-cancel.' (The Door, 2023)

Neuro-divergence

Q.: 'In today's world the term neurodivergent is used for individuals with conditions like ADHD and autism, but are these conditions truly limiting or have they been created by limiting themselves being in creation as a result of limiting beliefs?'

Bashar: 'It can be from the idea of inheriting limiting beliefs. But very often it is simply chosen by the spirit to accelerate their own growth, their own experience and be of service to others to expand their understanding and awareness of how many different ways there are of perceiving reality.'

Q.: 'So for example with ADHD, anything that's exciting will divert people to the point where it's difficult for them to focus.'

Bashar: 'Yes, it can be expressed in extreme ways. But at its core it is fundamentally an expression of the idea that excitement and passion are your core vibration.'

Q.: 'How would you interpret some ways of working with ADHD?'

Bashar: 'We cannot go into that at this time, you are approaching the idea of medical knowledge.' (The Two Paths To AI, 2023)

Bashar: 'Remember to forgive yourself and others.'

Bashar: 'Forgiveness is exceedingly powerful as a tool. Here's exactly vibrationally why: forgiveness is a state of being that can actually mitigate the effects of the consequences of a negative act. You have, many of you at least, heard of the idea that when you die many people of you experience what is called life review, yes? And in that life review experience it has been reported that what happens because there are no longer the same barriers between you and another, that you will suddenly begin to experience in that life review not only the things that happened visually but you will actually experience the consequences of anything that you chose to do and the way in which others may have experienced them based on your intentions as if you are experiencing the consequences from their point of view.

So if you have in any way, shape or form intentionally caused hurt or harm to someone, in the life review you feel exactly what they felt when you did that as if you were them. Forgiveness of yourself, forgiveness from others, forgiveness to others is actually a vibrational state that will actually mitigate the effect of the consequence of a negatively intentioned act. So the more forgiveness you can create for yourself, the more you can forgive others, the more you are evening the playing field and the less need there is for you to experience the idea of the negative energy that was initially created by a negative act. It's as simple as that. It's a mitigation cancellation system, that's what forgiveness is as an energy. It's bringing everything back to zero.' (The Black Box, 2014)

How to recognize the worthiness of love despite a difficult childhood?

Bashar: 'We are not going to get into the soul goals of parallel realities. We are going to talk to you about the idea that clearly what you chose to experience is something that would allow you to understand that you need to give yourself the love that clearly was not given to you as a child. So the theme that you chose to explore was the idea of going into an experience where you would be forced to be the one to give yourself the love that you need, because that's exactly what many people on your planet need to learn to do: love themselves unconditionally, regardless of their experiences.

So you can't look at it in a negative way. You chose to experience the idea of not being able to receive that as a child in order to understand that that's what you would want to go toward, that that's where you would be driven to go in that direction, of seeking to give yourself the love that you believe you were not being given as a child. Paradoxically, by choosing the situation where you were not physically given the love that you sought, the idea is that that was a very loving thing that parts of your soul family were willing to do for you in order to give you the opportunity to experience how to overcome that, transform that, and give yourself all the love that you believe you were missing in your childhood.

So it's actually an act of love that you didn't receive the physical love. It's not an excuse, not saying that it excuses any perpetrators of things like abuse, emotionally, physically, or otherwise. But the idea is that an arrangement was made so that you would be driven to seek the love within yourself that you driven to seek the connection to source that would allow you to know you are worthy of love. But that's just the way you decided to do it to prove how strong you are. Remember, earth is a graduating master class, earth is a tough school, but you are up to the task.

And so you had the strength to come in as a spirit and say: I'm going to have the experience of being deprived of love so that I will be driven to seek it out and give it to myself, to learn to do that, to love myself unconditionally, to learn that I am worthy, to state that I am worthy, to insist that I am worthy. That is the lesson and the task and the theme here for you.' (In Two Worlds, 2023)

Destiny And Free Will

Do physically incarnated beings have free will and creative power or is that just an illusion (49:50) Of course you have free will. Now you have made a free will choice also from another level, a spirit level, about exactly what kind of theme you will be exploring, and the theme is generally the person that you are. The challenges that come up that are representative of the theme that the personality you have created yourself to be needs to explore.

So, that theme can seem like destiny, because you can't necessarily change that until you've finished that theme, but you have free will within that destiny, within that theme. As we have often used the analogy of a hallway, saying that from a spirit level, a higher level, you have chosen a particular hallway that you will walk down. That's your theme. That's your path. That's who you are, being who you are in this life experience is the theme, is the destiny. But how you are who you are is up to your free will.

Again going back to the hallway analogy: you will walk down the hallway, that's your destiny. You made that choice from the free will of a higher level, but within the hallway you are completely free to decide how you will walk down the hall. You can walk, you can run, you can fly, you can crawl, you can be happy, you can be sad, you can look in every doorway along the way, you can ignore them all, you can go upside down, backwards, inside out, whatever way you wish to do it, that's your free will exploring the theme you have set up for yourself. So your physical life is a combination of a so-called theme or destiny and free will in terms of how you explore it.' (A Step Along The Way, 2021)

Did Krishna really say 'it is your dharma to fight your family'?

Bashar: 'It's interpreted incorrectly. The idea is that every generation is different. Every generation evolves and therefore must reach beyond what the beliefs are of the last generation. Sometimes that may cause certain conflicts on your planet because of the nature of the learning and training of humans, but the idea is being expressed simply as an idea that you must go beyond the belief systems of the last generation. The idea of the fighting simply comes from the idea of attempting to let go of the belief systems of the last generation. So it can be seen as a challenge and a struggle, and there may sometimes include actual fighting, just because again of how humanity has been trained to think. It doesn't have to fight, but the idea is that it often does in order to break away from the belief systems of the last generation. Again, it's not necessary to fight but often presents itself that way. But that's why it's happening. Because one generation must break away from the beliefs of the last generation and that often can cause different feelings and conflicts within humans.' (The Two Paths to AI, 2023)

Are feelings or thoughts the higher priority for manifesting our reality?

Q.: 'It seems that unresolved feelings manifest over our thoughts, so how are they linked?'

Bashar: 'This is how it works: first you begin with beliefs and definitions. What you believe to be true is reinforced by the idea of feeling that it is true, thinking that it is true and behaving as if it is true. Belief systems use feelings, emotions, thoughts and behaviors to reinforce the validity and the reality of the belief system because physical reality isn't really real. Therefore, beliefs have to make you believe that it is real and they do so by reinforcing what you believe to be true with the idea that it feels true you think it's true and you behave as if it's true. That's the priority, that's the order in which it happens. You can not have a behavior, you can not have a thought, and you can not have an emotion without first believing or defining that something is true for you. Beliefs are the blueprint that allow you to build the house of your physical reality. So it all starts with that. So when you behave a certain way, when you think certain thoughts, when you feel certain emotions, they all go back to 'what must I believe to be true about myself in order to feel, think and behave this way?' What is the best way to change a belief system? Where to start? (28:40) You can start from any direction you wish. But in a sense the most efficient way to change a belief system is to figure out what that belief is telling you, figure out why you're buying into it.' (The Two Paths to AI, 2023)

Entire cities in Mexico and Central America shifting into a different world on mass

Q.: 'Is this what happened when they say that under the guidance of some ancient seers entire cities in today's Mexico and Central America moved their consciousness over to a different world?'

B.: 'Yes, shifting to another reality on mass. You're shifting all the time. You're shifting billions of times a second. But when a collective agreement goes along and harmonizes in their frequency to shift together as one culture, as one collective then yes, they can shift themselves strongly to another reality where they may seem to completely, utterly disappear from the reality they used to be in.'

Q.: 'And they enter into a separate, totally separate reality, another realm?'

B.: 'Another timestream, yes.'

Q.: 'And is that what we're doing right now with this time of change, the splitting prism that you were mentioning?'

B.: 'To some degree yes, you are. It's all connected. You will wind up on a different Earth and eventually no longer experience those that are not of the compatible vibration of the reality that you have shifted to.'

Q.: 'You mentioned we do this billions of times already, but it looks like the collective guides us to a certain place.'

B.: 'Your choices guide you to a certain place, based on the frequency that your choice results in. There will be those that will join you in a similar kind of reality, but there will be those that won't.'

(Becoming a Galactic Citizen: The Gate, 2023)

Who Are We Really In Relationship With?

Q.: 'Who are we really in relationship with if others seem to be able to make their own choices? How does that work if they have free will but you're manifesting the version of the person that you are experiencing?'

B.: 'It doesn't mean those beings aren't real, but again, you're manifesting your version of them, a simulation of them in a sense that is relevant for you and for the agreements that you have made between each other. Remember, there are many layers and levels to this. It's all by theme, it's all by agreement. So you will experience the version of them, even though they are a real consciousness, a real being that you need to experience in order for your agreement or your side of the agreement to be fulfilled as they will experience of you, their version of you that allows their side of the agreement to be fulfilled. And the agreements mostly have to do with each of you discovering what you need to discover to become more of your true selves, in whatever way, shape or form that needs to work according to the themes that you chose to explore. Because again remember: like vibration to like vibration. You will join and connect and interact with other spirits and other beings and other levels of consciousness, each of which fulfill the agreements you have made with each other to reflect to each other what you need to know to allow you to experience what you agree to experience in this reality.' (Becoming a Galactic Citizen: The Door, 2023)

Feeling Responsible For The Entire World

Bashar: 'You are not responsible for anyone, let alone the entire world. You are only responsible to them to be yourself. Reflections that come to you that show up in your life that may be vibrationally incompatible with what you prefer, is not always a one-to-one reflection indicating that you are dealing with the same issues. The idea may be that someone is coming to you in your life, because the reflection is that you are willing to be of assistance to them to help them, to give them more options to choose different things that may work better for them. So this is one of the great misunderstandings that people on your planet have about this concept, is they think that just because someone shows up in your life that may be reflecting certain kinds of vibrationally incompatible or negative or fear-based issues means that you are harbouring the same thing. This is not the case. You have to discern whether or not whatever they bring to you, whatever shows up in your life could be information that could be applicable in your life that would better you. But you get to decide with honest self-investigation whether or not that is the case and if you find out that isn't the case then the reflection is simply that you have been willing to allow someone vibrationally incompatible into your life to be of assistance to them to give them the option to change their frequency, to be more of who they are, to be of help to them by offering them more opportunities, more pathways than they may have considered. So that's what is meant by 'reflections'. It isn't again, just a one-to-one idea.' (Reflections, 2023)

Fear of Cancer

Bashar: 'So, let's address that. So what if you actually wind up having cancer, why are you afraid of that?'

Q.: 'I have witnessed all the pain, the suffering...'

Bashar: `All right. You understand that pain is resistance to the situation at hand. If you allow yourself to have no resistance, there is no pain. Do you believe that it's possible that getting cancer can actually benefit someone, can actually serve someone in a certain way, do you believe that that might be possible?

Q.: `Yes.'

Bashar: `Well, if it is possible in your mind then why are you afraid of it if you know that it can serve you?'

Q.: `Because most of the time I see the negative aspects more.'

Bashar: `What have they got to do with you? What have they got to do with you? What are their choices have to do with your choices? Just because someone may not allow themselves to experience the idea in a beneficial, positive way, what does that mean with regard to the choices you could make in the same situation? Could you not make different choices, could you not understand it in a different way? Could you not give it a different definition for yourself regardless of what someone else may have experienced?'

Q.: `Yes, I guess so.'

Bashar: `Then why are you holding on to the idea that the only choice for you is something similar to what they chose? Does that help alleviate the fear to some degree, knowing that you can make a different choice of how to experience something like that, should it occur?'

Q.: `Yes.'

Bashar: `It could serve you in a variety of ways if you allow it to. And the idea really, paradoxically, is that being willing to know that you can do that, that you can make a different choice actually reduces the need to have that experience, because it may be that the only reason those people are having the painful version of that experience is they're simply not willing to allow it to serve them in a positive way.

But you could learn similar lessons by doing something else. If you're willing to accept all things as having a reason for being there that could serve you then you could have the freedom to choose other ways in which to learn the same lessons rather than being resistant to any particular way that might crop up, knowing that anything can serve you if you stay in a positive state. This is why we talk about the formula and one of the principles in the formula being: stay in a positive state no matter what happens, otherwise you're not gonna be able to extract a benefit from it. You're only going to experience it in a negative way.

But if you understand the importance and the relevance of knowing anything can serve you in a positive way if you let it, you can figure that out, figure out how it might be serving you, or even serving others, that you have that particular experience, then it really doesn't matter what happens and you can relax about the idea and not be tense or anxious about any particular thing happening, because you know and understand how the formula works and you know and understand that by assigning a more positive effect to this idea that it can serve you in a positive way and serve others in a positive way, and so why would you care what happens. Makes sense? Does that help you? You feel a little bit more relaxed? Take a deep breath in and let it out.' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

What Exactly Is a Belief?

Q.: 'What exactly is a belief?'

Bashar: 'A belief is part of the personality structure that allows you to experience physical reality as if it is solid. It reinforces itself with emotions, thoughts and behaviors, because if it didn't do that you wouldn't have an experience of physical reality as being 'real'. So you have to have a belief system as part of your personality structure in order to think of yourself as a physical being, otherwise you couldn't. And the idea is, it's not that the idea of expansion is just about beliefs, it's about knowing yourself as well, because this still happens in spirit. You can still expand. It's just that you don't have beliefs about it, you have knowings about what is that you need to choose to be more and more and more aware of more of yourself as an expression of existence and the infinite.'

Q.: 'Is belief just an energy pattern?'

Bashar: 'Yes, it's an energy pattern. But the way it's structured gets you to experience it as if it's a fact, as if it's solid, as if it's real, more real than anything else because you have asked it to provide you with a physical experience. And therefore the physical dream is just a dream, but it doesn't seem like a dream, because of the belief system structure you have imposed upon your consciousness in order to have this experience. (what is it exactly mechanically speaking?) As I said it's an energy pattern, but it's a specific kind of energy pattern that allows you to continue to have the dream uninterrupted so that you can simply experience physical reality uninterrupted on automatic pilot, so to speak. So you don't have to think about creating it every second.'

Q.: 'So can you see it as a kind of a filter?'

Bashar: 'Yes, it's a type of filter. It's what allows you to experience the idea of physical reality as an experience clearly and not see it as your creation. You can forget about it, you can go on automatic, and just have the physical experience instead of being constantly aware that you're creating it.'

Q.: 'Can we see the neurological patterns and pathways in the brain?'

Bashar: 'Yes, and you can see them change as you let go of beliefs.' (The Silver Cord, 2023)

What happens to the mind after death?

Q.: 'What occurs with the mind after death?'

Bashar: 'The physical mind is the product of belief systems that are no longer relevant when you're a spirit but you retain the experience that the physical mind had in much the same way that you retain memories of childhood even though you're no longer a child. So the idea is the experience you had as a physical being with a physical mind is always retained as a part of you, it will always be a part of you when you go back into spirit because you need to learn from it, you need to add it to the overall information that helps you make decisions as to what to do next. So you will never lose the experience or the memories of the experience so to speak, but you will not necessarily have a physical mind in the same way that is determined by the belief systems that create the physical mind. You will be above and beyond that. You will have your own identity, you will recognize yourself, but in a different way.' (Expect The Unexpected, 2025)

1947 – 1987 - 2027

Bashar: 'From 1947 to 1987 was the first 40-year cycle when you became aware of the idea of other life in the universe. And in 1987 many of you started to realize that there was another culmination cycle going on then and you called it the harmonic convergence. And at that time we began to bring through more information about what's going on out in the universe and how different kinds of societies relate to your world, specifically about the idea of the beings you call the Grays and how we first began to explain the real legacy, the real history of what that society was all about, being that they were originally humans on a version of Earth in a parallel reality that did not necessarily take care of their world, that destroyed their version of Earth through their technological means and their lack of spiritual context, and mutated themselves eventually in order to survive into the beings you now know as the Grays.

We told you this story and helped you understand that the reason that they came from their reality to yours and many other versions of Earth was to access viable human DNA, since they were no longer able to reproduce and with that DNA and their DNA and their technology create a race of hybrid beings that would continue their culture so they would not die out. As we have explained many times of course we are one of those hybrid civilizations, and Earth in a sense and its evolution is becoming another hybrid civilization.

But the idea being from that point forward in 1987 when you began to realize what the larger story was and how you're connected to it and how the information that we share with you is not only for the purpose of continuing the Gray's original culture from the parallel Earth, but also to help your world not necessarily go down the same path of destruction, because you had many similar traits and still have many similar traits to what it is that brought about the destruction of their version of Earth in their reality.

But by disseminating and absorbing this information into your society you have the option they didn't have. You have the option to take a different path. You have the option to create a reality that you prefer. You have the option to create positive realities of peace. So the idea here then is we are now nearing the end of that next 40-year cycle in nine of your years in 2027. And that's why 2027 is now the focal point when the next 40 years, the next phase of contact can begin.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Genetics and Genesis

Bashar: 'I'm going to give you one phrase that covers it all and let you ponder this: as above so below. The idea of DNA is what you are as a physical being. Ponder those things. As above so below. Look at the order in which that occurs, and the idea of DNA is what you are as a physical being.'

Q.: 'So what comes to mind when you say that is 'as above' or in the quantum field or in the All-that-is, in the Father Energy, in the expression of God. 'Below' that is lens through the individual relationship of our genetics which creates our physical experience.'

Bashar: 'To some degree yes, which starts as DNA and is you as a physical being. This body that you all walk around in is the suit that DNA required to have a physical experience. But you as a physical being are actually the DNA.'

Q.: 'Yes, so would it be accurate to say that DNA is the lensing mechanism for All-that-is or for the quantum plenum or the Ether to express itself physically?'

B.: 'Yes'

Q.: 'And so in your contact sigil what comes to mind is that trinary structure which could relate to the codons in the DNA, so you have 64 codons and then you have that Fibonacci spiral that can be clockwise or counterclockwise, you have a binary code of that trinary structure.'

B.: 'Yes, although it's not just a binary code, because you have to think multi-dimensionally, not just in a plane.'

Q.: 'And then so in the teachings of Jesus Christ when he says...in the beginning was the word and the word was with God and the word is God... I hear you saying that God, All-that-is goes through the word which is our DNA or our translation interface.'

B.: 'Well it's a vibration, it's a vibrational frequency, it's resonance. The word is resonance, frequency, vibration that then transmutes into the idea of the DNA and projects into a physical reality experience. Remember, the symbolic interpretation that is imposed upon many ideas of your religion is that it is a trinity. Whether or not the symbols that are used are necessarily literal isn't the point. The point is that it is recognized as a trinity: 'as above so below', but there's an in between. Always. In terms of the sigil you have the three that represent the idea of the trinity but then you have the spiral that is the active principle in the center that brings into being what is above into below.' (The Silver Cord, 2023)

The Formula and Paying the Bills

Bashar: 'So you are still making a difference between the idea of abundance and what it is you think you need. Because abundance, as we say, comes in many forms. And you have to make sure that you understand that part of the definition of your excitement is the inclusion of abundance in whatever form will truly be necessary and remembering what all those forms are. So that you can engineer in a sense your reality in such a way that you may not get one form of abundance, but you have access to many other forms that you can use, but you may not be using them as fully as you could.

So it's showing you that you may have an underlying belief system that creates worry and self-doubt within you about whether or not you're actually capable of attracting the forms of abundance you need to continue to act on your excitement. We understand that many humans do that because of how you've been trained and that's fine. But that's what you have to deal with, is the underlying belief systems that you may still be carrying with you when you say 'well, I'm following my excitement' and, yet, you always feel the need to add a 'but'.

And that's your first sign that you're carrying negative belief systems, because if you really were following your excitement in the fullest sense of the definition there would be no 'but' to discover within you. You would find that abundance is working for you if you are using all the forms and allowing all the forms and acting on all the forms. So you may not be acting on all the forms.'

Q.: 'I think it's because I was never in this position in my life where I was able to really just wake up and do whatever I felt like excited about.'

Bashar: 'We understand that you're dealing with the concept of unfamiliarity.'

Q.: 'Exactly, the unknown of 'is it going to last', or is it just...'

Bashar: 'You see, you're dealing with it right there: 'is it going to last'. You have to find the belief systems that tell you why it wouldn't. Because there's no reason why it shouldn't, until you make the reasons why it won't. So find those belief systems, hear them clearly within you and ask yourself: why are you holding on to that, why does it serve you to hold on to the idea that it won't last, that it won't support you, what are you getting out of holding on to that, how is it serving you to hold on to that concept when you know that's not the concept you prefer? So you have many things that you can examine and explore within yourself with honesty about why you believe it serves you to hold on to the idea that this won't last.'

Q.: 'It comes back to having the sense of control, preparing myself...'

Bashar: 'It's up to you, you don't have to answer now, we're simply telling you that's what you need to explore more fully. (...) Remember, these kinds of communications are also a form of abundance. Because they provide information for you to ponder. So, thank you and aveo.' (The Silver Cord, 2023)

Suicide of a family member

Bashar: 'Your daughter is fine. Once in spirit, remember, you see yourself for what you really are, who you really are, who you have always been. So the idea is that she may have gone through her life review and realized that no, it's not necessarily a part of the contract to commit suicide in the way that most people on your planet commit suicide. The timing of your death is the timing of your death naturally, and committing suicide in a sense is a little bit like breaking the agreement. But the idea is that the soul learns from that experience and realizes that may not have been the ideal choice, realizes they may simply have not ever had the information required for them to make a different choice.

But they are perfectly fine, absolutely eternal and indestructible, going through the life review to realize they could have done things in a different way, experiencing the effect that their suicide and the choices that they made to commit suicide have had on other people, including you. And therefore, sending you love and letting you know that they may in a sense be sorry that they did that, for it was not their intention to make you experience the idea of grief over their commission of suicide.

And now they know in a sense better, from a different perspective that that may not necessarily have been the ideal choice for them to make. But they send you love, unconditional love, they want you to know they are fine. You will meet them again, again everyone meets everyone, and again they are learning a lesson that will allow them to make more positive choices in the future. So they are perfectly fine. Take a deep breath and allow yourself to let go of the grief, because the grief can get in the way of receiving communications and messages from your daughter to let you know she is perfectly fine.' (In Two Worlds, 2023)

What is it that is vibrating when you encourage us to 'raise our vibration'?

Bashar: 'It's your energy. Energy has frequency to it. A simple example is what you call your visible spectrum of light. You know it's all the same kind of electromagnetic energy, but you know that red is a different frequency, a different vibrational rate than blue which is a higher vibrational rate. So when you allow yourself to align with your truth, your passion, your creativity, your love, you are allowing yourself to upgrade and accelerate. Raise up your frequency and by raising up your frequency it makes you more sensitive as a receiver, in a sense, as an antenna, to pick up on even higher frequencies above and beyond your reality, your senses expand.

You start being able to perceive the structure of existence. You start being able to understand that you have a direct connection to Source. You start being able to actually experience it in that way. You start being able to realize that you are already being given everything you can possibly be given. You don't necessarily have to ask for more, it's that you just have to pay more attention to what you are already getting and raising your frequency makes you a more sensitive receiver to be able to pay more attention to what you are already being given that helps you.

You are just making yourself basically more sensitive to receive higher energy information by matching that level, by matching that frequency. Remember, the principle is: you cannot perceive what you are not the vibration of. So when you are vibrating at a certain rate, at a certain frequency, you can't perceive the things that are vibrating like this (hands up). You have to raise your frequency and become matched to that frequency like two tuning forks to be able to receive and understand and translate and process that vibration and all the information and all the experience that is relative to that vibration. If you're down on this level (hands down) on this vibration scale you can't really have any experiences that are representative of a different vibrational level.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Connection between shifting identities and shifting realities

Bashar: 'It is not so much that you have multiple identities but you have multiple opportunities to express more of your identity, more of your soul, which allows you to experience a different reality reflection. So you may in some arbitrary way say 'well, it's representative of a different identity, because I am now behaving differently and I feel like a different person', and in a sense that's accurate. But it's simply all because you are experiencing more of the true identity that you are as a soul through your body.' (No More Secrets, 2025)

Going to sleep and waking up differently

Bashar: 'You are always different. It's just that you are now more aware of the differences that you always are. Remember that you are shifting billions of times a second. It's just that most of you are not really aware of that because it happens so smoothly. But when you start expanding your consciousness you start becoming aware that you are actually, literally, a different person every moment. So when you become more aware of that you will start to experience feeling very different than you used to feel. Because you're becoming aware of the fact that you are always literally a different person, moment to moment to moment. It's part of the expansion of your consciousness, the expansion of your bandwidth, and your ability to perceive what's going on in terms of how you actually create your physical reality experience.' (No More Secrets, 2025)

Permission slip to become more aligned with Bashar's teachings

Bashar: 'I am supporting all of you to the best that we are able. It's not about asking us for more support, it's about opening up to receive the support you're already getting from all of us. So the idea is again, as we have spoken of all things in your physical reality, all tools, all techniques, all rituals, all objects are permission slips that are up to you to decide by which one attracts you the most, what will work best for you at any given moment. But as we have just said to you, the idea of one of the strongest mantras for humans on Earth, one of the strongest tools is, as you wake up in the morning and as you go to sleep at night to say, perhaps at least three times: 'I am who I am, and that is enough. I am who I am, and that is enough. I am who I am, and that is enough'. And then see what synchronicity brings you with the willingness to let go of all restrictions, all limitations, all assumptions, and all insinuations that in your unconscious, subconscious, and conscious mind don't actually serve you or don't align with the vibration of your true ethereal spiritual core. Then reality will unfold as it needs to, to serve you best.' (The Three Behaviors of Connection, 2023)

The Blueprint Level

Bashar: 'This is where the idea of what your physical life will be experienced to be, is laid out like a blueprint. And the higher mind lays these ideas out and chooses what kind of themes it will explore and generally in what way it will explore them. This is the level that you as a physical person call 'destiny'. It does not in any way, shape or form erase or remove or prohibit you from having free will as a physical person. But the idea is destiny and free will will work hand in hand in a very specific way. The idea of laying out these blueprints or templates for the physical life gives you the opportunity to have some guidelines to follow. And it gives you in a sense a type of hallway to walk down.

Now with your free will you can walk down that hallway however you wish, you can run, you can skip, you can jump, you can crawl, you can go upside down and sideways, backwards and forward, but walk down the hallway you will. That's the destiny part. The free will is how you do it. And the idea is that it is in many ways not so restrictive as you might think because now especially in this day and age on your planet that you call the transformational age you even have the ability now consciously to rewrite, to redesign some of those blueprints.

That's what this age is all about, is rewriting your agreements to be more representative and more harmoniously aligned with the ideas of what you prefer to experience as your true natural self, as you form more conscious recognition of your connection to all these different levels of consciousness, you are thus then empowering yourself to use the template level reality to redesign your agreements, redesign your theme of exploration, redesign the blueprints of your life so as to truly manifest in a very magical and immediate way what it is you truly wish to experience, and this is one of the important reasons why you need to form this strong relationship with the higher mind that is above the template level where the physical mind is below it, because coming together in a balanced way will allow you to operate from the center of those two realms, the center of those two realities which is squarely within the template level dimension of experience.' (Diving Deeper Into the Nine Levels of Consciousness, 2011)

https://d11n7da8rpgbjy.cloudfront.net/basharet/1824_17089885180499_Levels_of_Consciousness.pdf?kuid=80149b03-1020-40f1-8b47-41dc74156b3a-1737391764&kref=dHfjznGvImXc

Shifting across static parallel reality frames

Bashar: 'As you change your frequency in any given moment that determines the next parallel earth reality you will experience in the next billionth of a second, and the next billionth after that, and the next billions after that....No one parallel reality has any movement in it at all, they are like static frames of film. Motion and change is the effect that you create by actually shifting your consciousness from parallel reality perspective to parallel reality perspective, billions of times a second, creating this smooth illusion of continuous change. So whatever vibration you are determines the reality you experience. So it is all about the idea of creating the vibration that is commensurate with the type of reality you prefer. And creating a greater degree of difference in your definition of reality from one to the other so that you can actually thus then experience this shift more consciously, more readily so you can recognize that you have been shifting all the time, because every shift is an immediate shift and a total change. But you don't recognize it as such because every reality you are shifting to is so similar to the last one, you hardly notice any difference. But when you start creating a shift in your design to a reality that is much different then you start to notice that you're shifting and it becomes more conscious.' (Diving Deeper into the Nine Levels of Consciousness, 2011)

Different 'Me's and Doppelgangers

Q.: 'If there are infinite versions of me in infinite timelines, who am I in relation to all the other parallel 'me's'?'

Bashar: 'They are not you, they are themselves.'

Q.: 'So they are completely separate from me, and I am my own sovereign individual?'

Bashar: 'And so are they, yes. It's your perspective that makes you 'You'. Their perspective is slightly different. That's what makes them them.'

Q.: 'And we make cross-connections to them?'

Bashar: 'You might. You don't always have to, but you might. If it serves you, sure. (...) I understand that higher dimensional concepts can sometimes seem a little confusing, that's alright. You'll get used to it.'

Q.: 'Do we reschedule missed opportunities?'

Bashar: 'Sometimes you might, but there are different ways of rescheduling. Sometimes a person may reschedule by actually physically dying, and then shifting to another reality where they are – quote unquote – 'still alive'.

Q.: 'So that new person in that new reality that hasn't died that they step into...'

Bashar: 'They don't step into it.'

Q.: 'What do they do?'

Bashar: 'The focus of consciousness simply shifts to a place where they can have the time to have the experience.'

Q.: 'What happens to the other 'me's' when I shift realities? Am I stepping into someone else reality and destroying my doppelganger?'

Bashar: 'Parallel me's are not you.'

Q.: 'So if I die and choose to have the experience of another lifetime that picked up right where I left...'

Bashar: 'Yes, and you can do that. As an experience you can do that. Remember that there is a difference between what you create as an experience and the description of what's mechanically actually happening. So you can create the experience that that's what happened, that doesn't mean that the mechanism is accurately described by the experience.'

Q.: 'So I am not stepping in someone else's reality and destroying my doppelganger?'

Bashar: 'No, no, no. It's a dance. And the timing is such....alright, I'll put it in your terms...If it's infinite, then there are going to be versions of you that will also want to shift at the same time you do. So you'll dance and trade places. You are not removing anyone from what they need to experience. They make a choice that's the equivalent vibrationally of your choice and you give each other what you need.'

Q.: 'So this is all just my ego mind trying to figure out how things work.'

Bashar: 'Yup. Look at it this way. Imagine you have a disc, and the disc is full of holes. And behind that disc you have another disc that has different colours on it. And as you rotate the disc behind the one with the holes, you see different colours appearing in the holes. But the holes don't change. (...) You are changing the frequency of that hole, so that hole has a different experience, but that hole is still the same hole. So, it's not replacing another hole, it's shifting its frequency to have a different experience that seems to be the experience of a different hole, and it is a different hole for itself, but it's still the same hole having a different hole experience.' (Dare to Dream, 2017)

Why do babies need to relearn the simplest things as if it were the first time?'

Bashar: 'But it is the first time for that personality. Your sense is mixing the idea of the physical persona and the soul's experience, when you say 'we'. So the idea is, you are creating a new physical persona that is injecting itself into the experience of physical reality, and choosing to forget who it is so it can rediscover who it is from a new point of view. So it is the first time for that personality, and there has to be that first time experience for that personality to absorb all of the belief systems that are representative of the challenges that the soul chose to face as that unique new personality from a linear perspective. So that's why you have to forget who you are as a soul, even though you may be able to access all sorts of incarnational experiences that coexist simultaneously from the soul perspective. From the physical perspective this is you, uniquely, for the first time. And therefore you have to learn things in the way that is relevant for that personality to learn how to talk and walk and reconnect to things in a way, or connect to things in a way, for the first time, to satisfy what that physical personality's journey is all about, which is going to be completely different from any other's personality journey. So it has to build up from scratch.' (Soul Cycle, 2024)

How does our environment perceive our shifting?

Q.: 'How will individuals from our previous reality perceive our change or absence, will they notice a shift or will their memories and perceptions adapt to a new narrative?'

Bashar: 'They might. Because remember they're your projections and reflections of the change you've made within yourself, anyway. Some of them might entirely disappear from your life if they simply have no purpose in experiencing the change, some of them might recognize the change within you and say 'oh, you're different today, I'm not exactly sure why', and some of them will relate to you completely as the idea of new people, as a reflection of the new change you have made within yourself. It can be a range of things.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

Making choices by visualizing whole parallel reality time streams

Bashar: 'If that is the way that works for you then that is your permission slip. That's the way that you believe you'll be able to have clearer discernment about which path to take, and as we said if both really still continue to seem equal you might as well flip a coin. That could reveal which path is more exciting, more relevant for you, but again even if that doesn't work and both or more than two seem relevant, are they equally actable is the next question. If they are also not only equally exciting and equally actable, then again remember that the tool of synchronicity will come into play, so that whatever path you do choose to go down it really won't matter, because synchronicity will turn you around through situations and circumstances that will arise to turn you around to the path that is more relevant for you at that time. So, it really doesn't matter which you choose to act on first if all things seem to be equal. Synchronicity will bring you to the path that is important for you at that moment. But if that is the methodology that you prefer to use in terms of thinking of the choices as whole parallel reality time streams, then stick with it if that's what's working for you. It's fine as a permission slip.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)

Are cells in the body shifting independently?

Bashar: 'Let me put it this way: you are not in the same body, moment to moment. You are in the body that is relevant to the earth you're on. So it's not like the cells have to shift. The idea is your consciousness is shifting, but there is already a physical representation in all the different earths, if you so choose there to be. So it's not like the cells have to shift, they are already inhabiting the earth you are shifting to. Because it's just your consciousness that's shifting. It's like a projector light going through frames on a film strip. The idea is that the film strip, each frame, is its own frame. But as the projector light illuminates it you get a different experience, a different scenario. But the frame is already there. The frame contains everything that it needs to contain, it's a whole frame. It's the projector light that is shifting from frame to frame.' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

Bashar.: ‘Thank yourself for being a teacher to your parents’

Q.: ‘My mom wanted me to thank you for helping her be a better parent to me and my brother, and the information that you give helps her be a better person.’

Bashar: ‘That is her choice to be. Even though we may share information with all of you, you have to take it and apply it in order for a change to occur. So don't forget to thank her as well.’

Q.: ‘Thank you I love you.’

Bashar: ‘I love you too. And of course thank yourself for being a teacher to your parents.’ (Open Contact Part One, 2024)

Is reincarnation a trap we need to escape?

Bashar: ‘No. Not true. The idea first and foremost again, please remember, everything exists at the same time. All lives, all people, all exist at once. In much the same way, again, by simplistic analogy, you have a television program playing on one channel, but you have hundreds of other programs playing at the same time on other channels. You just don't see them because you are not tuned to that frequency.

But when you change the channel you get a different programme, but all the programmes are playing at the same time. So all people that have ever existed exist now, right now, side by side, all here, all now on different frequencies. So, re-incarnation is an experience within the soul, the soul can create within itself, but the truth is, the mechanics of it is that all experiences exist all now. And what you're doing is you're connecting energetically to other people that exist right now that you may think of is the past, but are now existing, and you download information and experience from them to aid and assist you in this life, as they maybe doing with you by downloading information from your life to aid and assist them, but the way from linear time perspective you interpret that connection is as a memory: ‘I remember being that person’.

It means you're simply tapping into that person, but from the linear perspective you treat it as a memory, because you think in terms of past, present and future. So, it's not a trap, it's something that is dynamically changing all the time and when you die and go back into spirit, when you wake up into spirit, you are always given a choice as to what to experience next. So there is no such thing as a reincarnational trap, there is no such thing as a soul trap, just examine all the experiences and all the reports that people have given of near-death experiences when they go into the spirit realm and come back, not one single one of them has ever said anything about their soul being trapped.’ (Open Contact Part One, 2024)

You are your version of All-that-is

Bashar: ‘You are your version of All-that-is. And even then you realize that there are parallel reality versions of All-that-is because All-that-is is experienced by every single individual in the same way that you are experiencing it now in the sense that when they connect to the idea of their version of all that is and experience themselves as All-that-is, that this is a slightly different version of All-that-is than the All-that-is you are experiencing yourself to be. And thus then All-that-is has parallel reality versions of itself and thus then even All-that-is has a greater All-that-is experiencing all the parallel reality versions of All-that-is that are. And on and on and on and on and on, even beyond your capability to even begin to imagine until, until, until, until what we might term the reset, the reboot, which is when the All-that-is and all the All-that-is-es become the One which has no experience of itself or anything at all.’ (Parallelogram, 2013)

Understanding the hive mentality - each one sees themselves as the hive

B.: ‘You have to look at it holistically. Again, though you experience it in linear space-time as ‘I’m connected to this’, from the hive mind it is ‘I am this’. It’s more like the idea of looking at yourself as a drop in the ocean. You understand that you can be a drop, but you understand that there really isn’t a lot of differentiation between the drop and the rest of the water in the ocean. So, it’s something that’s a more all-encompassing sense, an all-encompassing perspective. It’s not that you belong to the hive, it’s that you as an individual are the hive. And every individual in it sees themselves as the hive. That’s why the focus and the intention and the orchestration and coordination are so automatic and why they can act so synchronistically together. Because each of them sees themselves as the hive. They have an intent, they have a focus that is shared completely by every single individual aspect of the hive. As if each individual is the hive and the one, the only one, having the intent and the focus to accomplish something.’ (Step Five, 2024)

Which history are we examining during our life review?

Q.: ‘Which history are we examining during our life review, the history we remember at the moment of dying or all the different histories that we have gone through and shifted through during our life time?’

Bashar: ‘Whatever is relevant for the theme you are exploring, it might be what appears to be a single history, it might be a multitude of them. Whatever is relevant for the theme you are exploring and what will advise you best and inform you best for the choices that you will next make. (Breaking news, 2021)

I feel being judged by people

Bashar: ‘Taking on the judgments of others means you’re judging yourself to be guilty of something. Otherwise why would you accept their judgments against you if you know they’re not true? In the same way that if a stranger came up to you on the street, and said you’re a bad person, you would go: well that makes no sense, because you don’t even know who I am, so why should I pay attention, that’s just your issue. So, just because you may know the people who are judging you, why should you take what they’re judging you about to heart, unless you’re judging yourself for the same things, and finding yourself to be guilty (a limiting belief that I need to get rid of) There you go. Because how does it serve you? Because you don’t hold on to things that don’t serve you. Remember, sometimes people that act like victims remain victims, because they use victimhood to get what they want. Therefore they believe being a victim serves them, and therefore....but just because you’re here doesn’t mean you have to change. That’s in your hands. So, it’s up to you to decide whether or not you have reached a point where you are sick and tired of being sick and tired.’ (Open Contact Part Two, 2023)

What is meant by ‘what you put out is what you get back’?

Bashar: 'Many people misunderstand the idea that when they attract something or someone who may have certain issues, they think it's a one-to-one reflection. That's not what we're saying. Just because someone comes into your life that may have certain issues doesn't mean you have them, too. But when it's 'what you put out is what you get back' is the idea that you may be attracting people that need help from you, that you are able to help them. Therefore, you have put out something that attracts people you can be of help to. So it's not a one-to-one reflection idea. It's what you put out will bring you what it is you have agreed to serve, what it is you have agreed to be of assistance with. Although you can always of course examine yourself and be honest as to whether someone coming in into your life, who has issues, does have issues that you have too, so that you can see that self-reflection, where it is relevant. But if you realize it's not relevant, then you understand there may be a completely different reason why you have attracted them. But you have attracted them, for some reason. So when we say what you put out is what you get back that doesn't mean it's a one-to-one reflection of what they have you have, too.' (Shifting Realities, 2024)

Camcorder Stroboscopic Effects

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8E6XF-EzqCQ>

Bashar: 'Experience the effects that we are talking about and begin to allow your awareness to grow and your awareness to grasp the actual fact that you are generating your reality from billions of frozen frames, to create the illusion of space, time, change, and movement. So, take advantage of this little science experiment that can have profound effects in your ability to recognize that you are the creator and projector of everything you experience in your physical reality. Have fun with this, stay with it if you wish and allow yourself to play with it.' (Shifting Realities, 2024)

Balancing masculine and feminine energies

Q.: 'What would a healthy masculine energy balance in line with open contact look like?'

Bashar: 'Obviously, if you understand all the messages we have delivered to you, we are never going to tell you to move away from one energy or another. It's all about the idea of integration and balance. So, the feminine energy of nurturing and support in that way can be balanced with the masculine energy of assertiveness and standing one's ground, expressed in a nonviolent way, not in an aggressive way, but in an assertive way, in a knowledgeable way. And both sides can benefit from this in a balanced state, where you can have something as a masculine energy, or what is typically referred to as a masculine energy, that doesn't even necessarily have to be looked at anymore as masculine, whereas the idea of a nurturing and supportive energy doesn't even necessarily have to be looked at anymore as a specifically feminine energy. Where you can have beings that are confident in themselves, capable of being so confident and assertive about who they are that they are capable of expressing a nurturing and supportive energy to others, and being of service in that way. So, the balance is that that's how it would look. You are grounded and assertive and confident within yourself, enough that you can actually be of service in supporting others in their life path as well.' (Shifting Realities, 2024)

Finding core limiting beliefs (e.g. 'I have not really lived')

Bashar: 'That's a big one in your society: 'I am not ready', 'I am not good enough', 'I am not capable', as you say: bla bla bla. But you see this is how belief systems work. Remember physical reality isn't real. The experience is real, but physical reality is a projection of consciousness, it's an illusion, it's a dream that you're having as if you're truly separate from spirit, but you're not. You're having the physical dream while you are in spirit to explore an aspect of your consciousness.

The only way you can actually have a physical experience is to create a physical mind. And the physical mind is generated by what you call belief systems. You have to believe something is true, in order to experience the so-called solidity of physical reality. And there are positive beliefs, neutral beliefs, and negative beliefs. But they all have to perpetuate themselves and keep you believing that what they're telling you is real in order to continue to have a physical experience.

Now, you don't necessarily mind the positive beliefs because they tell you wonderful things about yourself, you don't necessarily mind the neutral beliefs because they just tell you objective things about the reality that you have chosen to experience. The negative beliefs also have to perpetuate themselves and the way they do that is to tell you stories that make it seem difficult to let them go. So they make you afraid of change, they tell you things about yourself like 'I'm not good enough', 'I'm not ready, I'm not capable, I'm not loved, I'm not connected'... so on and so forth and all they're doing is attempting to get you to not let them go so you can keep having a physical reality.

You just have to realize you have the key to change to a positive belief that will continue to perpetuate your physical reality but you don't have to necessarily experience your physical reality as a struggle. So you can say 'alright, thank you negative beliefs for allowing me to experience my physical reality, but while validating you for that I have learned because of you that I can choose other beliefs that will perpetuate my experience of physical reality and you don't have to choose to continue your physical reality through holding on to negative and fear-based beliefs. It's not malicious, it's just the way they're designed. You have to understand that and know that you can change them at any time, it's up to you. (...)

But you have to go from the motivational mechanism. In other words what are you getting out of holding on to that negative belief. You actually choose to hold on to it because the negative belief has made you believe that if you change something worse will happen. That's why you hold on to it because it seems safer than the alternative. That's the motivational mechanism. You always, and this is without fail for all of you, you always hold on to what you believe serves you, you always move away from what you believe does not.

So if you can observe that you're holding on to something that you know intellectually does not actually allow you to move forward, the only reason you would hold on to it is because the belief is telling you that the alternative would be worse. You have to hear that as a story that makes no sense before you'll release it. Because when you know that you're hearing a story just for the purpose of the belief perpetuating itself then you can ask: 'well, why would I choose to hold on to something that doesn't serve me, what am I afraid will happen if I do make a change?'

And that's what will bring up what the belief in you actually is, and then you can see that. When you look around the world and see people doing things that you may say you would also love to do and that they're doing them just fine...well, the answer is, why not you, too? But if you believe that you are different in a negative way and that something bad will happen to you if you go on that route, well then you won't change, because you believe that where you are is safer. So you have to really have clarity about what the belief is telling you. and you have to know that you're choosing to stay there, because it's telling you that the alternative will not be good.' (Life Expo 2022)

A.D. After Disclosure

<https://www.dropbox.com/home/A.D.%2C%20After%20Disclosure?preview=Bashar+-+A.D.+After+Disclosure+book.mp4>

Bashar: 'Let us now explore together the ramifications of these ideas. We will suggest to you now that you see many reflections in your society of the growing awareness of our existence and the growing awareness of what contact actually means to you, and how your society may change according to your desires and preferences with respect to what kind of a world you will exist in - post contact. There is now existing as a marker, as a sign, and as a symbol of this growing awareness in your reality a book: 'A. D. After Disclosure'.

Find it, read it. It will help as a preparatory primer to the idea of many of the things that you will need to consider in this process of transformation from a world that considered itself to be isolated to a world that knows it is in contact with others from the stars. It will give great insight. Not every single thing will happen in the way that the book may speculate, but it is a well thought out, very intelligent reasoning and reflection of your own processes, to give you much to consider about the changes that will occur within you that will shift you to parallel Earths that will be more representative of this process of change, and of the process of acceptance that you are not alone.

It is in that sense rare for us to suggest these books that exist in your society, but this one is a true marker, a true reckoning, and a true realization in general of many of the things that are important for you to consider about the transformations taking place in your society, and what your society may ultimately look like, once you have accepted the idea on mass that contact is an ongoing experience and part of the natural evolution of you as a species, from what you may loosely call homo sapiens to homo galacticus.

You are at the very beginnings of this this journey, but this journey has been going on for a long time in your terms of time, but you have now arrived at the tipping point. And again, we are grateful and extremely ecstatic to have chosen to interact with you, for we do nothing that does not excite us fully, and interacting with you we cannot imagine anything more exciting.' (The UFO Witness Declaration, 2012)

Question about the inherently unique frequency

Bashar: 'You all have a unique expression...your signature vibration in a sense will not change but you can change the secondary vibrations around it that represent your unique expression of the signature frequency. But the signature frequency is a different expression from everyone else, it's your unique reflection of All-that-is. Your unique reflection as an expression of creation. And then you can express different frequencies of that, different ways of expressing that signature frequency as you go through your process of rediscovering yourself.' (Contact Fulcrum, 2018)

Q.: 'So when you are reading someone's frequency you are reading the frequency around the signature?

Bashar: 'Yes. Because if I just read the signature frequency it would not really matter much. Your signature frequencies are all vey very very high. It's just that you are clouding them with all sorts of fear-based belief systems that doesn't allow the light to shine through as strongly as it could. That's the whole point. It's clearing out the attic, clearing out the basement of all the negative fear-based beliefs that cloud your ability to express the signature frequency that you are as an aspect and reflection of creation more fully. That's what this is all about. Letting go of who you are not and being who you truly are. Each of you is a puzzle piece within creation. You are a certain shape. That shape fits with all the other puzzle pieces to create the big picture of All-that-is. But when you try to be a shape you are not you won't fit, you won't help create the big picture. Trying to be someone you are not is the most difficult thing you can do in life. It exhausts you. It tires you out. It kills you, literally, to be someone you are not. Let go, and be who you are. Uplift yourself and then you will fit and the big picture will be formed before your eyes.' (Contact Fulcrim, 2018)

Going beyond the letter in conversations with political decision-makers'

Bashar: 'You may have a conversation, it depends on what the subject is, but again, you can also turn them on to the idea of the origin of that letter and let them discover things for themselves, but it's alright to have a conversation about subjects that are similar to what is covered in the letter. All we are basically saying is, you don't necessarily have to explain what the social experiment is to them, but you can certainly discuss subjects that are contained within the idea of the social experiment. Like the existence of extraterrestrial beings, and the desire for disclosure and things like that. (...and I can refer them to Bashar.org?) If they wish to understand the actual parameters involved in the social experiment, yes. That you don't have to explain. They can find that out for themselves. But you can certainly have discussions about subjects that are peripheral to what the letter is about.' (Soul Cycle, 2024)

The Symbolism of the Crucifixion of Jesus

Bashar: 'What is your Yeshua question'?

Q.: 'I'd like to know if he was truly crucified?'

Bashar: 'Yes, truly crucified'.

Q.: 'And did he resurrect 3 days after?'

Bashar: 'In a sense. Now, this is where it gets a little tricky, because this is a prime example of the concept of splitting into parallel realities. In one: absolutely, in another: no, and in yet again another: something else again. Understand that being had the capacity and the knowledge to understand exactly what was being done, and what kind of impact would branch out from that, and how it would create a multitude of parallel reality offshoots, and give them energy and momentum, so that all could decide what it is they wanted to believe, what it is they wanted to relate to, what it is they wanted to understand about that being's message, which was primarily: 'you are all like me'. That's the second coming. The realization that you are all like that. The discovery of what you call the Christ Consciousness, or the Buddha nature, or the Krishna spirit in each and every one of you. But it was done in a way, like what we have just explained a moment ago, to give each and every one of you the choice to decide what you would and wouldn't believe was true for you. Does this make sense to you?'

Q.: 'It helps me deeply. I don't know why it does, but it does'.

Bashar: 'Well, all right. Now understand also that the symbolism also is, and this is the - shall we say - interpretation, the spin in a different direction on the idea that is bandied about in your religions that Jesus died for your sins. What was actually happening was the willingness to take on to the self of that being the idea of the ultimate consequence in one direction of expressing what you believe to be true in the face of those that have and contain such great fear that by being shown how much of a god they really are, their only reaction can be one of fear, panic, and hate to the point where they will actually put to death the reflection that shows them they are unconditionally loved, and are aspects of God. That helped to break, to crack that face, that unconscious face, in your society. It helped to bring it to the surface, to show how much fear you were in, and to give you a chance to work through that, and to understand - more than just euphemistically - that you do not need to be nailed to a cross to be yourselves. You do not need to punish yourselves, you do not need to go through suffering to be yourselves. That's the true meaning in essence of that whole play that was given: 'as I will do this to show you that this is where you are at, but simultaneously to show you that if you embrace yourself, and accept yourself as I have,'

Yeshua said, 'you will not need to take this path. But until you do embrace yourself as equal to me, you will constantly kill your joy. You will nail it to a cross. And you will die with it'. Until, of course, you are born again and take another stab at it. No pun intended, well, all right, a little bit. Because after all Yeshua did have a very good sense of humor. Although most of you are not told that. He laughed all the time, all the time. I mean, all the time. Well, not all the time, but you get the point.' (State of the Future Union, 2006)

Question about the splitting prism

Bashar: 'The idea is to understand that any version of earth you can imagine already exists simultaneously. They all exist at the same time, because time is an illusion. So everything exists at once. Any version of earth you can imagine. And therefore as your consciousness navigates itself, shifts itself through all these different versions to create what you call a timeline, a lifespan, you are literally experiencing a multitude of different earths billions of times per second. You are navigating yourself, based on your vibrational frequency, based on your intentional focus, through the different earths in a manner, in a sequence that will allow you to experience continuity. Going from what you call the so-called past to the so-called future. But that's a linear way to experience the idea of process and change, and it's all up to you to decide exactly where you're navigating to or through. But at this timing on your planet, because of the transformations you have agreed you should be experiencing, you can split now off from different people in different directions, to experience different earths that eventually one will no longer experience the other's experience of earth. You will only experience the ones that are similar enough on your wavelength, so that you are all coherent and in harmony with whatever it is you have decided to experience as a version of earth, while others you may be interacting with now may go off in a different direction and experience ultimately a completely different set of earths, and the two will no longer meet. The two will no longer agree, the two will no longer experience each other. Does that make sense?' (One Minute to Midnight, 2023)

How to integrate (negative) moments from the past into the present personality?'

Bashar: 'By simply understanding whatever it is that is relevant in those parallel experiences, and what is not relevant for who you are now in those parallel experiences. Pulling forward and creating in the now whatever you call as memories that are still simply what you're creating in the present that you believe is relevant for your soul's continuing journey, for your idea of who you are, and what it is you are pulling from, what it is you are basing yourself on now. So, you're creating the elements of your so-called past based on what you believe is relevant for you to continue to be who you prefer to be in the present. Does that make sense, do you understand this concept?'

Q.: 'I understand what you're saying but who is deciding that, is that my higher self?'

Bashar: 'You. You are deciding that along with your higher self, because you're following a path that your soul chose to experience for its own growth. So this is why again it doesn't have to be very complicated and you don't have to overthink it, when you simply follow the formula that we have shared with all of you, this becomes an automatic function. You will raise your vibration and you will be able to tell what is relevant for you and what is not more easily. Does that make sense?'

Q.: 'That makes sense but I'm still a bit puzzled about the fact that we obviously also remember some bad things happening to us. Is that also always relevant or is that sometimes the negative belief systems?'

Bashar: 'It can be either and you have to have the discernment to tell the difference. But it's similar to the idea of the fourth step in the formula, whereas if something manifests that you objectively don't prefer, you still stay in a positive state, so you can learn a lesson from why it's there. So you can do the same thing in a so-called past direction as well, by saying 'I remember' negative events. Stay in a positive state, so you can learn the lessons that are relevant for your soul's growth now in the present. Use it in the way you need to, to move forward. And again, by raising your vibration you'll be able to tell whether this is something that is simply a repeating of a negative energy that you're holding on to, or whether it's simply something you can learn a lesson from and then let go of.' (Step Five, 2024)

Elan: 'The Preferential Referential You' <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yeRfIHwnwew>

No need for contact to be fulfilled

Bashar: 'Absolutely. It's not that you need contact and in fact not-needing it is what actually allows it to happen more quickly.' (Echoes of Sedona, 2024)

Your purpose in Life

Bashar: 'Your pathway, your purpose is simply being as fully as you can. Be anything you want to be that excites you to be. The things you do in your life, the projects, the goal, are not the purposes of your life. They are the methodologies you are choosing to express the purpose of your life, which is simply live your life to the fullest. That's the purpose of all of your lives. How you go about it, they are not the purposes, they are the methods. So the method is up to you. Anything you do that is the most exciting thing you can think of to do will be your method for fulfilling the purpose of this life. Because remember, even though you are a reincarnational being, you have never been this You before, you will never be this You again, the You you are now only has one life to live. Live it to the fullest, by being who you prefer to be. Be that vibration and that is what will be reflected in your life. But how you get there is up to you.' (Ghost Story, 1987)

Question about teleportation: relationship between gravity and electromagnetism

Bashar.: 'We have already given you that experiment. We'll describe it again briefly. It is the idea that objects that exist in a particular location are not objects in a location. The location exists in the object. Every object can be considered an energy equation, and one of the variables in that energy equation is the variable that represents its location in space-time.

If you change that space-time locational variable frequency you actually change the location of the object in space and time. That's how our ships travel from star to star, is we have isolated the ship, unlocked it from any particular universal reality in a limbo state and then we impose the vibrational frequency that represents the frequency of the location we wish to go to, and the ship must stop existing at the first location and automatically start existing at the second location, without travelling in between.

Because everything holographically is here and now, and all we're doing is changing the perspective, the angle of observation of the locational variable of that ship and its crew in space-time, which is an illusion.(...) this connects the idea of gravity and electromagnetism, and so on and so forth. I'll put it another way: imagine a Fibonacci spiral, imagine a counter Fibonacci spiral going the other way and overlapping the first one.

Now, imagine that what I'm describing is a simple two-dimensional version of something that is actually very multi-dimensional. So it would go in all sorts of directions, but for simplicity sake just imagine that double spiral. There are places where then the spiral, one spiral crosses the other spiral, and it does so because it is a spiral at farther and farther and farther distances. So we call those nodal points.

Those nodal points, depending upon exactly how they cross the other spiral and how many iterations of that crossing there are, actually create the different effects you call gravity, electromagnetism, strong nuclear force, weak nuclear force, dark matter, dark energy, so on and so forth. It is that particular structure that can explain the relationship between all the different so-called forces that you experience in your physical universe, and show the connection between them all, by understanding them as different concentrations of nodal points of a fundamental concept that contains a field of consciousness.

So if consciousness as a field is allowed into the equations of your quantum mechanics you will understand more clearly the idea of the relationship of gravity to electromagnetism and so forth. Now relatively recently, there actually has been the creation of a new mathematical equation that does allow gravity and quantum mechanics to be combined, and that is the correct direction to go in. But it still must include the understanding of how to quantify and create mathematical representations or geometric representations of the field of consciousness out of which everything is created.

And once you include that into your equations you will understand the relationship. But starting with that Fibonacci double spiral can be a skeleton upon which you can build a deeper understanding of the multi-dimensional nature of all of those relationships to each other.' (Open Contact', Part II, 2024)

You never lose your identity, not even by integration. It is absolutely indestructible.

Bashar.: `Wrap your minds, wrap your hearts, wrap your souls around the concept that your fundamental state of being is that you exist. You exist. And while you may perceive yourself in many different ways, in many different forms, throughout the course of your existence, physical, non-physical, other-dimensional, parallel...what have you, doesn't matter...you will still exist, your unique perspective will still exist. In other words, anything that happens will be happening from your point of view to you. Even when your philosophers say that there is a point at which you may blend and be absorbed back into the 'All-that-is', absorbed into God, you never lose your identity, the only thing that is left in that experience is your identity as All-that-is.

The you-ness can never go away. It is absolutely indestructible. It is the nature and essence of existence itself that forms your indestructible core. You can not destroy that. It is simply not possible. It is the direct expression of the first law of existence that you do exist. And that will never change. And again, the emphasis being very important. Not even so much the emphasis as 'yes, you exist', but that 'YOU exist'. So if you exist, the unique identity, the unique perspective, that you are, you must need to exist. Existence must need you to exist in order for existence to be all that it can be, in order for to really be all that existence is you have to exist.

So since you already do, that will never change. Therefore, this keys in to the concepts that many of you explore in your lives of unworthiness, undeservability...`I don't deserve, I'm not worthy'...these concepts can only be experienced because you are worthy. Because if you were not really worthy you would not exist. Because existence hasn't made a mistake in making you. You are part of existence. You are part of existence, you have value, you have worth. You deserve to know that, you deserve to understand that, and when I say 'know' then I mean KNOW that, because it is the fundamental truth...the fundamental truth: you exist. Nothing can take that away from you. You exist, therefore, you are worthy, and you are valuable, and you are deserving'. (Your Indestructible Core, 2016)

How similar or different are the various versions of reality productions

Bashar: `It depends on how it serves a purpose in that life path to experience those things. The idea is that you make agreements with others, agree to different kinds of story lines as you say, but you still experience your version of those stories in your reality. By agreement others will seem to share the same reality even though they are in their own reality perceiving their versions of you as you are perceiving your versions of them. So you are creating your versions of them and it will be based on your belief systems about what you need from them which can be either slightly or very different from what they may perceive in their reality of their version of you. It just depends on how closely aligned the different versions have agreed to be in terms of what you experience with each other in creating those representations of each other in your own realities. But again, sometimes it can diverge quite readily, quite far, and sometimes it will stay very closely aligned depending upon the agreement you have made and what purpose it serves to either remain aligned or misaligned.' (Countdown to Contact, Year One)

Versions and Reflections

Q.: `I hear you say sometimes to not take people's reflections personally because it has nothing to do with you and it's just a part of their own journey. Can you clarify that?'

Bashar: `Remember that you are experiencing your version of other beings. It doesn't mean they're not real, it's just you're creating your simulational representational image of them and interacting with that. So what you are interacting with is your creation but that doesn't mean you created the actual being, the actual consciousness. The consciousness is real, and you're interacting with a real consciousness. But you are interacting through the filter that you are capable of manifesting that is the best representation of them that you manifest out of your own consciousness, out of your own energy, as an interface, so to speak.' (Countdown to Contact, Year One)

Bashar's definition of a social engineer

Bashar: `Planetary management, moving through all things in balance, in a balanced state, in an equal state. So, it's about the idea of balance as the primary component of planetary management.'

Q.: `...like the definition of social engineering on the internet...'

Bashar: `No. The social engineering as we understand it is something quite different, but that's the closest word you have in your reality to translating the idea.'

Q.: `So, Bashars teachings over the past 40 years are he beginning of that?'

Bashar: 'Yes. Then the next steps from the social engineers will be to guide you through the idea of how to actually physically apply all these things to the management of your entire planet in a way that's beneficial for all.'

Q.: 'And that would be the formula?'

Bashar: 'The formula is part of that. But I'm actually talking about the idea of information coming from extraterrestrial sources and technologies that allow you to grow enough food for all, to change the idea eventually of what you call your borders and your politics, so that things can be done more efficiently on your planet for the benefit of all, and the re-arrangement of other, social ideas on your planet that will again allow for a more positive introduction to the children of the earth, so they can grow up being self-empowered individuals in a very positive way. So it has a lot to do with a lot of those different things of edification, of application of information, of technologies, in a way that benefits your entire planet and every person on it.' (Facing your Demons, 2024)

Will Bashar be representing the Sassanis when it is time to do so in the context of open contact?

Bashar: 'I will be among the first contact specialists from my civilization, yes. Obviously this is representative of my passion or I wouldn't be doing it. So that's what it means for me personally. I am very passionate about interacting with humans on earth, because I understand and I can see, I can observe the incredible potential, the incredible power you have to transform your world into heaven on earth. But it requires that you come together to do so.'

Q.: 'We are very excited to meet you.'

Bashar.: 'As are we to meet all of you. But the you-s that we will be meeting will not be the you's that you are today. So become the you-s that are the yous who will meet the us-es.' (Echoes of Sedona, 2024)

What the Oracle said at the end of the transmission (Echoes of Sedona)

Bashar: 'We will now add and allow and facilitate what the Oracle will say.'

Once again, we remind you, before the Oracle speaks, the two most important things that we have shared with all of you at this time on your planet to move you toward contact in a positive, creative, peaceful, harmonious way, is to remember that it's not about what happens. It's about what you do with what happens that makes the difference, and to stay in a positive state, no matter what manifests, so that you can get a benefit from it. Remember those two things, along with what the Oracle now has to say. Again, we encourage you, since the Oracle will repeat this three times in this transmission, to write it down, so there is no misunderstanding and again, I remind you, we completely leave it up to you to understand, to divine the meaning and the mystery in the interpretation of what the Oracle will say. We will not help you with this. This is left in your hand. But use it creatively, come from your heart, come from your soul. Everything will be fine. Everything will be fine.

We will now allow the facilitation of the Oracle who will repeat the transmission three times. '

Oracle:

`The dark night of the soul calls forth the light within. And when the light of truth comes forth, the blind shall see once again.

The dark night of the soul calls forth the light within. And when the light of truth comes forth, the blind shall see once again.

The dark night of the soul calls forth the light within. And once the light of truth comes forth, the blind shall see once again.'

Bashar: `This is a being from the Interstellar Alliance Council. Again, it translates in your language simply as the Oracle. This was an oracular transmission, there may be more in the future, as we get closer to the idea of open contact. We will leave it to you to ponder the mysteries inherent within the oracular transmission.' (Echoes of Sedona, 2024)

Soul and Oversoul

Q.: `The Oversoul was described as the hand with the different fingers as the individual souls. Does each individual soul have multiple physical beings associated with it?'

Bashar: `Over the course of time it can appear that way and that's what you typically refer to from your linear perspective as reincarnation. Because the soul, being an energy sphere, creates the body within itself out of certain vibrations that represent the challenge that that soul wishes to experience to help it grow. When the soul returns to its full form, its full shape, in other words, when the physical body has `died' or expanded back to the idea of the soul perspective, then it can choose different vibrations to create a different personality to have a different experience, linearly speaking. Therefore you could say that that is really the way reincarnation works, but the idea is that every new personality also has a different soul because the configuration of vibrational patterns within the soul that created that different body had to also be different, and therefore it is, in a sense, a different soul. Does that make sense? It just depends on the perspective, subjectively, that you're coming from when you describe this process as to how you experience it.'

Q.: `Are the different beings of the same soul in different realities at the same time?'

Bashar: `Oh, you are talking about parallel realities. That's a little bit different than the idea of the reincarnational realities that we just described. It's a type of parallel reality, but there are actually multiple types of parallel realities. So again it depends on - subjectively - which type you are actually referring to. If you're referring to the idea that there may be what you would think of as multiple versions of yourself, experiencing different pathways, that's one type of parallel reality structure.'

Q.: `From one soul when it expands and then it contracts and creates another entity, is that a different personality, not me, but a different entity?'

Bashar: `Oh yes, it's not you, it's a different entity. And the soul is different as well. Because again, it's creating that different personality out of different vibratory frequencies within its energy. So in a sense, you can say from one perspective: yes, it's the same soul, creating another physical body, but from another perspective you could say: but that's a different soul because it's made up of different energy patterns because it has given different patterns to the physical body, and therefore those patterns don't exist within the soul anymore at that level. It's a different soul. Cause it's a different formula of vibrational frequencies in order to create that different, unique personality out of those different frequencies.' (Echoes of Sedona, 2024)

Will not sending the letters change our timeline?

Bashar: As I said it's up to you to determine what steps you wish to participate in. So that's completely up to you. You cannot look at this idea as a group because everyone will have slight differences in terms of how they approach this. So it's not really one group that either is or isn't doing the steps. The steps will be done in different ways by different individuals to different degrees. We are tracking everything as we need to, don't worry about it. Just participate in whatever way you can, but again, be willing to look at your own belief systems about why you may or may not be participating. If there are any fear-based beliefs, negative beliefs that come up, that prevent you from participating, then the purpose is to examine those beliefs and see if you can let them go so that you'll be more willing to participate. And again, some of that coming up within you is part of the reason why we suggested what we suggested. Because we are watching the degree of willingness that people have in involving themselves in this process that they look at those beliefs that come up and the willingness to let go or change them is part of the social experiment that we are observing.' (Step Four, 2024)

Fear of prosecution when sending out the letters

Bashar: 'Yes again, what I just said. Part of the process of presenting this social experiment is also to allow people to come to terms with the idea of their beliefs about open contact, what effects that might have on their lives and what effect the idea of interaction with other humans in that process might also have on their lives, so that they can face those particular fear-based and negative beliefs and take the opportunity to deal with them and let them go. So that's part of the social experiment is to discover fear-based beliefs within yourself and deal with why you're holding on to that and why you think that you are in any way, shape or form at risk. So, just allow yourself to explore those fear-based beliefs, those negative beliefs. See if you can let any of them go, and see if in letting some of them go you find yourself more willing to participate in the social experiment in the way that we have suggested. But again, it's up to you. But certainly you can use this opportunity to get in touch with any fear-based beliefs in the normal course of your life anyway. So that's part of the social experiment is this what comes up in each and every one of you.' (Social Experiment Step Four, 2024)

Bashar's direct counterpart in the Interstellar Alliance who is in charge of the Social Experiment.

Bashar.: 'Well, the being that you already may know of that we refer to as Anima is part of the idea of being in the social experiment because she is a social engineer. And therefore, one of the ones, along with myself and others, that are of primary involvement in the idea of this social experiment because it involves the idea of the social engineering of your entire society by yourselves, to direct yourselves more into the direction of open contact, which would then ultimately require assistance from the social engineers in our society to help you assimilate and absorb and adjust to the idea of suddenly being in contact with the galactic society. So, Anima is one of the beings that is closely associated with this social experiment. And of course, there are many others.' (Step Four, 2024)

This is alien:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cg2bSgb-4xY>

and this Atlantean (Bashar):

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ipEAtXDIFYI>

Our `True` History

Bashar: `There is a lot of history that you have lost. One of the things that will be given to all of you when open contact occurs is the complete history of your planet. I understand that that seems contradictory because as we have said when you change your present you change your past, but the idea is that you'll be given the history of the planet you finally wind up on as the person of earth that is relevant for contact and that will be the history that will allow you to establish the present person you have defined yourself to be and allow you to experience the idea of the future that is relevant for that person.` (Life Expo 2024)

Changing the past (by looking differently at it)

Bashar.: `That's one way of looking at it. But we are also talking about the fact that you actually literally change your past. Let me put it to you this way: if you have defined yourself as a completely different person than you used to be in the present - the idea is that since you are creating linear reality, the idea of past, present and future, as a projection of your consciousness, it's an illusion cause everything is actually in the present, everything is now. But if you change your definition of who you are in the now then from the linear reality perspective the question is: well how did you get that way? If you're completely different than who used to be there, how did you get that way? Because from linear reality there has to be a logical progression that made you this different person.

So by changing yourself in the present, it actually sends a ripple backwards, so to speak, euphemistically speaking into the idea of rearranging the past so that makes sense going forward at the how you became this different person. So you are actually changing the past when you change the present. Does that make sense? But you will always keep creating what serves you as a lesson. So even if you have a new past you can still have components in it that are similar to what was there before, if they still serve you. But it's a new past anyway, it's a new arrangement of things. And the fact that you are now realizing that you can learn a lesson from what appears to be an incident in your past means that you actually have changed the past to make that incident appear to be something that is now relevant for your present.` (Open Contact Part 1, 2024)

Bashar: The Parallel Reality Wheel

Bashar: ``We will begin this transmission by reminding you that this title is 'The Parallel Reality Wheel'. Now, for the purpose of this particular transmission the terms 'parallel reality', 'alternate universe', 'alternate timeline', 'parallel timeline', all of these terms in this context are basically the same. And what we are referring to is that sequence of frames that your consciousness shifts through to create the continuity of what feels like, what you experience to be a smooth, unbroken timeline that you think of as your life path, as your experience in physical reality. As the person you are now you experience only one timeline. You don't have to care about the rest. And you yourself are in charge of composing the experiences you will have. In the end you will call it your life and you may be satisfied. Without Bashar or any of those teachings.` (The Parallel Reality Wheel, 2020)

Infinite Versions of `Me`

Q.: `If there are infinite versions of me in infinite timelines, who am I in relation to all the other parallel `me's`?

Bashar.: `They are not you, they are themselves.`

Q.: `So they are completely separate from me, and I am my own sovereign individual?`

Bashar: `And so are they, yes. It's your perspective that makes you `You`. Their perspective is slightly different. That's what makes them them.`

Q.: `And we make cross-connections to them?`

Bashar: `You might. You don't always have to, but you might. If it serves you, sure. I understand that higher dimensional concepts can sometimes seem a little confusing, that's alright. You'll get used to it.`

Q.: `So I am not stepping in someone else's reality and destroying my doppelganger?`

Bashar: `No, no, no. It's a dance. And the timing is such....alright, I'll put it in your terms...If it's infinite, then there are going to be versions of you that will also want to shift at the same time you do. So you'll dance and trade places. You are not removing anyone from what they need to experience. They make a choice that's the equivalent vibrationally of your choice and you give each other what you need.`
(Dare to Dream, 2017)

All-that-is and All-that-is-es

Bashar: `You are your version of All-that-is. And even then you realize that there are parallel reality versions of All-that-is because All-that-is is experienced by every single individual in the same way that you are experiencing it now in the sense that when they connect to the idea of their version of all that is and experience themselves as All-that-is, that this is a slightly different version of All-that-is than the All-that-is you are experiencing yourself to be. And thus then All-that-is has parallel reality versions of itself and thus then even All-that-is has a greater All-that-is experiencing all the parallel reality versions of All-that-is that are. And on and on and on and on and on, even beyond your capability to even begin to imagine until, until, until, until what we might term the reset, the reboot, which is when the All-that-is and all the All-that-is-es become the One which has no experience of itself or anything at all.`
(Parallelogram, 2013)

The soul is not exclusively in charge of one specific incarnation. What happens to the `I`-consciousness after death?

Bashar: `...but most of you experiencing the idea of what you call near-death-experience will come back because you realize that you have expanded to a certain point to gain certain experience, to gain certain knowledge and bring it back into that physical focus so that you can continue your physical life path differently, having changed yourself with that broadening experience, that expansion of your bandwidth and then of course what you call typical physical death, becoming the soul again, going back out to the full diameter of your energy sphere. That's a rough analogy, a simplistic analogy of the idea of the soul in relation to the physical mind, the physical body. So the idea of what you call reincarnation is the idea almost of the soul breathing, expanding out, concentrating in to a physical life path, expanding out, concentrating in to a physical life path, expanding, contracting, expanding, contracting, different life, different life, different life, same soul. But different in relationship, so that each life considers it has its own soul because of the difference in the relationship between the soul that you are and the specific personality you have created to have that specific life path experience. That's generally a rough analogy of how that works. So, it's like the soul is breathing, in and out, creating physical experiences, back to spirit experiences, in and out, in and out, in and out.' (12:10) (Gaia+ Channeling Conference, 19 October 2024)

Creating Future and Past from the Present

Bashar: 'The future creates the present when the future becomes your present, but while this present is your present it is also creating what you call the future. Because you are looking at it as downline in the past, upline in the future, from the present, but when you arrive in the future, isn't it always now? So it's just that you are allowing what you now call the future to finally simply become your present, to accept it that it does exist as a present reality and to actually experience it as a present reality. So what you're actually doing in that sense is you're still creating that future from the present but the way you do it is by turning the future into your present.

The idea is that you can actually do the same thing with the past, since you are creating the past from the present, you can actually use the present to alter the past. Because if you truly understand that you are shifting through parallel realities, billions of parallel realities every second, then what that also tells you is that billions of times per second you are actually expressing your consciousness through the eyes of literally a different version of you which is literally a different person...so if it's literally a different person then that person doesn't have the same history. Doesn't have to have the same history. You can make that present person seem to have a similar history or not but that's actually up to you.

Whatever you define yourself to be now is what determines the person you are now, and determines what so-called experience of future and past that person has. So this is why we have talked before about this concept called the 13th step, taking a cue off what you call your twelve-step programs. This usually on your planet applies to all forms of what you call addiction and how to allow yourself to let go so to speak of that addictive behavior.

Now, we are in no way, shape or form saying that people have to stop doing those twelve step programs if that's the permission slip that works for them. All we're saying is you can also at some point when you're truly ready to understand this at a thirteenth step, and the thirteenth step is actually this that when you truly truly know, not believe, not think, when you truly know you are a different person and truly thus then know that as a different person there is a different history that doesn't mean that you have let go of the addiction, it means you never had it.

And that's why there is no urge in the person that you are now, not because you have transformed it and are dealing with it, it's because the person you are now knows they simply never had it, it's simply not a consideration, it simply not exists in their mindset and never has.' (33rd Parallel, 2013)

Are humans omnivorous?

First of all that's a misunderstanding. I have never said that humanity has to be exclusively herbivorous, ever. You are omnivores. This is the natural cycle of Earth and different people have different expressions. I've always said let your body consciousness tell you what it is you need, be it the idea of meat protein or plant protein, and to balance these things out as necessary for each of you. It is a misunderstanding that you think we have ever said you should only eat plants. We have said that sometimes when you raise your frequency you may lose the urge to eat the heavier substances, but you have to allow that to happen in a natural way for you. But there are those that have certain chemical constituencies in their bodies that require meat protein. Welcome to the cycles of Earth, yes. The idea of death and destruction are part of the natural cycles of Earth at this time. We have never encouraged you otherwise, other than to say balance yourselves according to what feels natural to you. So please understand us clearly, we are not saying that you are forced to go in one direction or the other, that it should be a natural balance of all things according to what the body consciousness is telling you you naturally need to feel like you are going to maintain your health. That's all we have ever said, don't misunderstand us. All we have said is make sure it's the most natural organic and appreciated and respected sources so that you are not putting toxins into your body as best as you possibly can avoid them. That's all we have ever said.' (Parallel Realities and You, 2023)